MACHINE GUN KING BEFORE U. S. SENATE

Col. Lewis Said American Government Turned Him down Flat

OFFERED RIGHTS FREE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—Colonel Isaac Lewis, inventor of the celebrated machine gun bearing his name, on Saturday told the Senate Committee investigating the conduct of the war "the whole story" of his efforts to get the War Department to adopt his invention.

Lewis, centre of a stormy controversy of years' duration, told the Senators that he did not first offer his weapon to the British, but that while an active officer in the Army tried without avail to persuade the War Department to accept it free of cost. He said he took his invention to the chief of staff, then to Major-General Leonard Wood.

"I wanted to present it to the Government," he added. "Even last June I went to the present Secretary of War and offered him all my interests without any emolument. The only condition, which I think was fair, was that the official test was not to be made at Springfield Arsenal. When Senator Hitchcock asked if any others were interested in his gun and if they had offered their interests to the Government, Colonel Lewis said stockholders of the Automatic Arms Company, who had backed his early patent, were interested.

"Did they offer their interests?" he was asked.

"My offer wasn't even considered," Colonel Lewis protested. "It was turned down flat."

A letter dated 11th December last, renewing his offer of his gun to Secretary Baker was read by Col. Lewis. In it he offered also to turn over all of his share—forty-three per cent. —of all royalties, aggregating two million dollars under existing contracts. In the letter Colonel Lewis protested against the alleged injustice of statements by Secretary Baker regarding the gun.

He cited the success the British had had with his arm, and declared that of twelve Zeppelins brought down by the British, ten were bagged with the Lewis gun.

COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW OF THE CIVIC ADMINISTRATION

The Valedictory of Mayor Duffus Reveals a Careful Knowledge of Municipal Problems—A Resolution of Appreciation.

THE COAL QUESTION

These debentures are those that are changeable to the general rates. In addition to these debentures payable by frontage rates to the amount of $81,291.40 will mature in the coming decade and, while these will not effect the general rate, they will reduce the taxes on the properties against which they are charged.

These amounts, maturing in the next ten years will not offset the debentures that will have to be issued for necessary works I have referred to. A growth of the City, adding to the amount of the assessment by the addition of new buildings and increases in values, which we look forward to, will assist to meet the demands, but this should not be discounted by new undertakings, because it will be needde to help to finance the works to which we are committed and to stabilize the rate when these works are carried out.

The main purposes to ze kept in view, therefore, are to curtail expenditures so far as it can be done, to undertake no new works that will add to the debenture debt that are not imperatively needed, and to work for the continued growth of the City, by the establishment of new industries and otherwise.

It is shown by the last published Government report that the taxation in Peterborough per head of population for municipal purposes, $10.91 per capita, is the third lowest in the cities of Ontario, and that the lowest is only 60 cents lower, while the highest is $31.34 more. For municipal and school purposes combined the rate per head in Peterborough is $16.60, and is the sixth lowest of the Ontario cities, being $1.85 higher than the lowest and $33.76 lower than the highest. The net debt per head, $73.94, is the second lowest of the cities, the lowest being $62.20 and the highest $497.12.

Industrial.

While during the past three or four years there has not been the expansion in general manufacturing that there was in the preceding years, Peterborough has progressed in this direction. New factories have been established and several of the older factories have been enlarged, some of them considerably, and we have all seen with been satisfaction the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats plant. Several manufacturing concerns with which we have had negotiations decided for the present they would not take any action, as the uncertain condition of business, the cost of building, the difficulty of procuring capital and other war conditions caused them to be cautious about branching out or starting new enterprises. But there are concerns which have in mind establishing factories in Canada as soon as conditions are more favourable, and, even if there is not a prospect of many manufacturing companies taking such action at this time, the present is a good time to make the city known, so that they will have Peterborough in mind. The Council, under the direction of the Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, has taken steps to make Peerborough better known, and this year published a small, but useful pamphlet, and is advertising in Canadian and United States papers. It is important that we should be ever on the alert to secure new industries, specially industries of a substantial character, such as we have here, and the seed being sown will bring forth fruit when the harvest time comes. Peterborough has been conservative, compared with many other places, in its policy of securing new industries, and consequently has not met with the losses that many places have, but the natural and acquired advantages that we possess, backed by enterprise and a sound policy of encouraging substantial industries, has been very successful in the past and I have no doubt whatever will continue to be successful. This is a manufacturing centre, and the progress of the city depends upon the activities of its factories and the securing of new ones, and we must bear this in mind and lose no opportunity for advancing the manufacturing importance of the city.

Hydro-Electric Energy.

Hydro-Electric power, making for inexpensive light, heat and power, warrants the intense interest of all public men on behalf of the people.

Scientists and quasi-scientists have racked their brains looking for perpetual motion without recognizing the endless chain of evaporation, condensation and sunlight that makes our rain, rivers, lakes and oceans without costing society a red cent and from which the public obtains its Hydro-Electric energy, the cost of which is, in Ontario, quite normal compared with the amount distributed.

Such is the value of electricity becoming to be regarded throughout the Province of Ontario, rich as it is in water power that we can see no reason why we should not go on until all home factories and farms are completely electrified.

That it will become like other forms of fuel, scarce and high in price, is not thought of, because Hydro-Electric energy will last as long as the human race, for it is the nearest approach to the philosopher's stone that is ever likely to occur in the economy of nature. The more of it we use, the cheaper we can produce it.

The opinions of methodical observers, the stern evidence of fact point to the conclusion that very shortly for obvious reasons our railways will be extensively electrified. They can haul larger loads, can excellerate better, can negotiate to better advantage in the winter weather, can operate 25 o 30 p.c. cheaper proportionately than steam. It is alleged that 25 p.c. of a railway's energy is expended hauling is own coal.

Having proper regard to these facts, you can readily observe the unlimited demand there will be for electric energy in this highly developed agricultural and industrial province. This very clearly demonstrates that municipal authorities must see to it that Governments decline to accede to any application for power franchises to private monopoly interests.

I am inflexibly opposed to any more such privileges and I think awakened opinion is against the handing over of this valuable birthright of the people of Canada to any group of exploiting power barons.

The time has come in Canada for national leaders to declare themselves plainly on the side of conservation of hydro-electric power for the benefit of all the people and not for any private group.

The great water powers of Canada are more precious to the nation than the richest coal deposits. They are a national heritage. The publicly owned Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario has demonstrated that the water powers can be owned, controlled and operated by the state to the lasting advantage of the whole people. The granting of franchises to private monopoly interests is detrimental to public welfare and no Government has the moral right to be so unwise and unprovident as to lease out such natural resources to any private monopoly.

Gentlemen, no proposition of the present day promises such returns to the great mass of the people of this country and I exhort you to give it your very keenest consideration.

The Coal Question.

In the early spring, the Council, foreseeing that there would be a shortage of coal, made application under the Ontario Act for authorization to esablish a municipal fuel supply.

Following a session of the Ontario Railway Board, their permission was granted, the first to be granted in Ontario. Delays occurred, in that the authorization had to be finally approved by Order-in-Council, of the Ontario Cabinet, and this was not accomplished until well on in the month of June. The city authorized an issue of debentures to provide money to purchase coal, and on the strength of the authorization the Bank was prepared to advance money if necessary.

Arrangements were made to take over the sheds at the Rehill yard, and this was done, at a rental of $35 per month for several months, with further option.

It was proposed to place in the sheds a supply of coal, and hold it for winter necesities, also to sell from the cars, as by so doing the delivery cost would be lessened.

The one essential in the coal business is to establish a connection as a source of supply. It takes years to accomplish this. The large companies have had for many years local representatives, and from these companies no coal be had. The city was compelled to resort to the Independent source of supply, through the jobbers, and to buy its coal at practically from $1.35 to $1.50 per ton more than local dealers would pay for Line Company coal. That was a serious handicap, and could only be met by the strictest economy in the cost of distribution. A contract was made with Mr. W. H. Lytle for a general delivery all over the city at a price of 80c. per ton. This has worked out very well and the contractor has given efficient service.

Selling off the cars a foreman and one man have been in service to fill the bags, weigh coal and unload cars. When there seemed a chance to pay demurrage, the coal was unloaded into the bins.

At first it was thought well, as a supply of coal was promised, to sell in lots of three tons and under. This worked out very well during the early part of September, but the state of the coal supply on the other side and the rules put into effect by the United States Fuel Administrator whereby only certain quantities were allowed to come into Canada, increased the difficulty of getting coal and brought down deliveries to one ton and eventually to half ton lots.

Citizens paid in money freely in the hope of getting coal. So far the business has been financed out of the money so paid in, and th city money has not been touched. The money in the bank bears interest, which helps to defray the expenses.

We have had an unusually early and very severe winter. All over the province the demand is incessant for coal. Many municipalities have fared much worse than Peterborough. The

No Jap Troops For Harbin Or Elsewhere

No Truth in Reports That Any Part of Japanese Army is Being Mobilized—Reports Are Formally Denied by Foreign Office

MEN ARE RETAINED

TOKIO, Dec. 24.—Notwithstanding reports of the activity of the Japanese Army and Navy, it may be stated positively that Japan not only has not moved but does not intend to move troops to Harbin, Vladivostock or elsewhere.

Statements that any portion of the Japanese Army are being mobilised are unfour d. At the headquarters of the army staff the Associated Press is informed that no mobilisation is contemplated, and that reports of such projects originated in the fact that the authorities at present are not permitting the return to their homes of soldiers whose normal period of service has expired. Consequently there has been some increase in the Army. These men have been retained as a precaution against depletion of the Army of highly trained men.

A similar policy is being observed in the Navy. The older trained men are not being permitted to leave the ships and depots. Figures regarding the increases in the Army and Navy are of course unavailable; similarly information regarding warships is withheld absolutely.

The authorities state that a programme involving expenditures will be placed before the coming session of Parliament. It includes provisions for modernisation of the artillery, the supplying of armoured cars, bombs, and other accessories, and also enlargement of the aviation service, which the staff regards as more important than an increase in the number of divisions. The naval programme abandons the big navy plan, resting content with the present organisation, but favouring an increase in light craft, including submarines, destroyers, and light cruisers.

Officials of the Army and Navy unanimously condemn reports circulated abroad concerning present Japanese activities, which they describe as "stock jobbing." Japan is taking the necessary precautionary measures to maintain the highest standing of the Army and Navy. This does not result from anticipation of serious complications in the Far East. In fact, well informed persons express the confident belief that the grave situation in Russia is not likely to continue. They say, however, that Japan must endeavour to increase the efficiency of her Army and Navy during the time the European struggle continues.

A despatch to the London Times from Washington, forwarded here, stating that severe fighting had occurred at Vladivostock, and that Secretary Lansing had received a request from the American Consul for troops is denied categorically, as well as a report from the same source crediting the Japanese Embassy at Washington with confirmation of the report that Japanese troops had been landed at Vladivostock. These reports have caused mystification and concern here, as well as considerable comment in the Japanese press.

JAPAN WON'T INTERVENE.

Reports That Troops Are to be Sent Are Formally Denied.

TOKIO, Dec. 24.—Japan is not considering intervention in Russia, it was formally announced on the authority of the Foreign Office.

Assistant Minister of Foreign Affairs Shidehara asserted no mobilisation of Japanese troops for use in Siberia had been ordered or was in contemplation.

TAKES GIRL FROM RIVAL.

Young West Virginian Enforces Demand at the Point of Unloaded Gun.

KINGWOOD, W. Va., Dec. 24.—Taking his girl out of an automobile from the hands of his rival at the point of a gun and taking her in his own machine was the wild west stunt performed by Lee Brown of Howesville, West Virginia. Later Brown was arrested and fined by Magistrate W. M. Murdock for carrying concealed weapons.

The girl was Miss Anna Howard, with whom Brown had an appointment to go driving. Instead, she went out with Hunter Perril and another couple. Brown encountered the party on the road and swinging his own machine across the road and blocking it he pulled an old revolver, which was not loaded. He demanded the surrender of his girl, who got out and clambered aboard Brown's machine and together they drove off.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

By ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"After dinner Nora, who had been in the hotel all day, asked permission to go out for awhile and mother told her she might go. The poor girl had been almost a prisoner since we arrived at the hotel. That was about 8 o'clock.

"About half past eight a boy came to the room with a card, upon which was written your wife's name, and a note asking if she might see mother for a few moments. We both looked at the card, and then mother decided to go down and see her. She instructed me to lock the door while she was out, and of course I did so.

"In a few minutes mother came back. She seemed greatly excited, said that she had seen Mrs. Duvall, and that you had sent a message to the effect that you had arrested the woman who had been threatening me and wanted mother to come to your hotel at once to appear against her in court. It was necessary, the woman who pretended to be your wife said, that mother should come at once as otherwise the woman couldn't be held.

"We talked the matter over for a few moments, and I told her that I thought she ought to go. She seemed rather afraid to leave me alone, but I promised to keep the door locked, and anyway, as I pointed out to her, if the woman was arrested I had nothing further to fear.

"At last mother decided she would go, and left me. I locked the door as soon as she went out.

"It seemed to me a very few moments before I heard some one rapping. At first I supposed that mother had come back for some reason or other. Then I thought it might be Nora who had said she was only going out for a breath of air. So suspecting nothing, I unlocked the door and opened it.

"A woman came in, very quickly, before I realized it. She was not tall, and rather slight, and I think she had light hair. I couldn't see her face well because she had twisted a black veil across it, hiding her eyes, and the upper part of her features. She turned as soon as she got into the room and locked the door.

"I was too surprised for a moment to speak, then I asked her what she wanted.

"'I want you,' she said in a terrible voice, and I saw that she was taking a bottle from her hand-bag.

"I was so frightened that I could not cry out, although I tried. You see the warnings I had received had gotten me so worked up that my nerves were all on edge, and as soon as I saw the bottle I concluded that the woman was about to throw vitriol in my face. So I put my hands to my eyes and ran into the bedroom.

"The woman came behind me saying that my looks would soon be gone—that my days as an actress were over, and other things like that which I scarcely heard I was so frightened. When she got to me she caught hold of my arm and pulled me around facing her.

"I couldn't keep my eyes closed now, for I simply had to see what she was doing. It seemed worse not looking at her, and then I thought I might take the bottle away from her and save myself in that way. So I took my hands from my face, and rushed toward her.

"Then she raised the bottle, and dashed something into my face.

"It seemed hot, stinging, and made my eyes burn frightfully. I was sure it was vitriol, and the thought was to much for me, I guess, for I felt myself falling and—well, that's all I remember until I woke up and found the doctor and mother there. It was a terrible experience. I could scarcely believe them, when they told me, after I came to, that I wasn't really hurt at all."

Duvall looked at the girl's face. It showed no signs of injury, although her eyes were red and inflamed.

"Then it wasn't vitriol after all?" he asked, wondering.

"No, it apparently wasn't. The doctor said he thought it must have been ammonia."

"Remarkable!" Duvall muttered to himself. "Why should she have gone to all that trouble, just to frighten you?"

"That's apparently all she intended to do from the start. Do you know, Mr. Duvall, I have been thinking this thing over, and I believe her whole plan from the beginning was merely to ruin me in my work by FEAR. And I must say that she has nearly succeeded.

"Very nearly," said Duvall with a frown. "If this thing had kept up for another week or two, you would have been a complete nervous wreck."

"I am now, I'm afraid," Miss Morton said sadly. "I don't feel as if I could act again for a long time."

"Oh, yes, you will. You have youth and that is everything. And now, tell me, do you think, if you took a look at this woman, you might recognize her?"

The girl shuddered.

"Is she—here?" she asked.

"Yes. In the library."

"You think it would be quite safe?"

"Quite. She can do you no harm while I am here."

"Very well. I will see her if you wish it, but I am very much afraid that I shall not be able to identify her."

Duvall held out his hand.

"Come," he said. "I will take you in."

Miss Morton rose and walking slowly and with considerable effort, went with him into the front room. Standing in the doorway, with the detective beside her, she confronted the two women. They regarded her with stony indifference.

"Miss Morton," Duvall said, "do you recognize either of these two women as the one who attacked you in your rooms last night?"

The girl gazed helplessly from Miss Ford to her companion and back again. Then she slowly shook her head.

"No," she said. "It might have been either of them. They look somewhat alike. But as for saying which one it was, if it was either of them, I'm afraid that I can't. The woman was veiled. The room was not brightly lighted. And I was very much frightened."

"The look of disappointment in Duvall's face was reflected in that of both Grace and Mrs. Morton. The two women on the contrary seemed vastly relieved. Miss Norman's mouth curled in rather an ironical smile.

"Are you through with this inquisition now?" she asked. "For if you are, my friend and myself would like to continue our journey. You have had no right to bring us here in the first place, and I am strongly considering making a complaint against you for having done so."

She grasped firmly the umbrella she had held in her hand all the morning, and turned as though to go. Leary, however, stood before the door.

"You apparently have forgotten," Duvall remarked, going toward her, "that I still have a charge against you for attacking my wife."

"Very well; make it. I can prove that your wife forcibly entered my apartment under false pretense, saying that she was collecting money for the war sufferers in Poland. If I attacked her it was in self-defense."

"That isn't true," cried Grace. "You sprang at me——"

"My word is as good as yours," Miss Norman interrupted. "And my friend here will bear out what I say." She nodded to Miss Ford. "You also," she again faced Duvall, "broke into my apartment without warrant, and killed my pet monkey. You will have to answer for that as well. You have accused me of sending threatening letters to this girl here. I defy you to prove it."

Duvall who had been coming nearer the woman all the time, reached out and snatched from her hands the umbrella she held. The others in the room regarded him with astonishment. The woman herself gave a cry of anger and starting forward tried to recover her lost property.

Duvall yielded it to her at once but not before he had torn from the handle two small round balls covered with knitted silk that hung from it by a heavy silken cord.

Miss Norman seeing what he had done, drew back with a cry of anger. A few incoherent words trailed from her lips. Duvall, paying no attention to her, ripped open one of the silk-meshed coverings and extracted from it a small, round black object about the size of a hickory nut.

He gazed at it for a moment, then going quickly to the table in the centre of the room brought the thing down smartly upon its surface.

There was a crackling sound, and bits of some black substance flew in every direction. A moment later the detective raised in his hand a glittering bit of metal and held it up so that the others might see it.

"The death's-head seal!" he said quietly.

Miss Norman fell on her knees before Ruth Morton, her hands upraised.

"Forgive me—forgive me!" she sobbed.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Vice Versa

A Married Woman Becomes a Girl Again.

By MARIE G. MITCHEL

"Really, Jeanette, breakfast must be on time! Yesterday I had to run for my train, and it's the same way to-day." and Mr. Crenmore took a hurried last swallow of coffee, pushed his paper into his pocket with one hand, took out his watch with the other and started for the door, only turning to say: "Jeanette, the coffee is no better today. You really must speak to Sarah again."

"Yes, Arthur, I know, but Sarah," began poor Jeanette, stopping to quiet Bobby's demands to "Walk dust 'little bit o' way wiv daddy."

When the front door had closed and Bobby and daddy were on their way, Jeanette turned with a sigh to attend to the many daily duties of a house keeper with one incompetent maid and two babies.

It was a hot, sultry morning, the children fretty and Sarah in an uncertain humor, as Jeanette bathed baby Jean, with Bobby's doubtful help. A little frown crossed her forehead and her lips tightened. "Oh, dear! Why does it all have to be so different after people are married! Things always going wrong; not half time enough to set them right. Fusses instead of—well, compliments and roses," and Jeanette laughed in spite of herself, but across her memory flashed the picture of two people on a moonlit piazza.

"Are you sure, Arthur, dear," the girl was saying, "we won't be like all those married people who seem to have forgotten how to be really nice to each other and just fuss about house things and food and—well, you know—read papers at the table and all that?"

"Sure as anything, sweetheart," laughed the man. "We could never be like that, and as for reading papers when I have you across the table from me, well"—

Jeanette came out from her reverie just in time to save little Jean's tiny blue shoes from being launched into the tub.

"What fun it would be if one could only, for a tiny vacation, push time backward and be just a girl again, with nice men to say nice things and all the rest of it," thought Jeanette. "Wonder if I've changed a whole lot in four years. Would I get the same kind of good times? I would like to try." And, tucking baby under one arm, Jeanette ran to the mirror. "Not so bad. I am tired, of course, but with the same clothes, time for hair fixing and cold cream I wouldn't look so different."

She dressed and fed the baby with an abstracted air. As she laid her in her crib the front door opened. "Hello, Jeanie," called a voice in a stage whisper, "the babes asleep?"

"Wait. I'll come down," answered Jeanette, suiting the action to the words. "Kit, dear, it's good to see you. How did you get here so soon?"

"I came late last night, found mother deep in Red Cross work for the day, so came over here. Come here, Bobby, boy, and give auntie a kiss. Merciful heavens, Jean, but you look hot and tired! Believe me, I'll continue to stick to kindergarten work. At least you get a vacation in hot weather. Here you are, landed in a house in the country supposedly for a vacation, but you don't look as though you were getting one. Sarah any better help now?"

"Not much, and, you see, Kit, we have to eat, and the babes must be taken care of no matter where we are. Can't be helped, so don't get excited."

"Well, it's too bad. I'll tell you what, Jeanie," exclaimed Kit, otherwise Katherine, "I have an idea. Change places with me for the rest of the day. Just start off and do any old thing you like and leave the kiddies to the tender mercies of their Aunt Kit."

"You are a dear, but you only came last night and are tired yourself. I won't do it."

"I'm not tired like you are. I haven't a thing to do, and I love the babies. Just skip along."

"But, Katherine, you don't know about their food and naps, and Bobby is hard to manage, and Sarah is in a bad humor," began Jeanette.

"Now, listen. You can tell me about food and naps. And don't I manage people hurrying along the street. Kit laughed with such boyish good nature and good will that Jeanette laughed also.

"You certainly sound respectable. I'll add my trout and sandwiches to yours. You make a fire and I'll cook the trout."

The thought of food brought the babies to Jeanette's mind. Would they give Bobby the right food and the baby's milk? But she resolutely put them out of her mind and tried to have the "good time" that she would have had before the advent of Arthur and the babes.

Stephen Alden was having a good time and a "good feed," and he rattled on in a happy, care free fashion.

In spite of herself, Jeanette answered rather absentmindedly. How had she happened to forget that coat of Arthur's? It should have gone to the cleaner's that morning.

She answered a question about a recent novel so vaguely that the young man looked at her in a puzzled way.

"Probably not much of a reader," he thought. "She's a mighty pretty girl and a good little companion. Didn't fuss a bit about smoke or bugs, and she can fish. I'll try her on something else."

"Oh, dear," thought Jeanette, "I'd forgotten what stupid things I used to like to talk about. Tennis, ball games, dancing, were all very well, but how I would like to get hold of those blessed babies. I simply can't stand it."

"I really must be starting now for home," she began, gathering up her things. "It's been very nice and jolly and thanks for getting me out of the mess I was in. No, you must not leave your fishing. I'm not far from home," and she left so abruptly that Stephen Alden wondered what he could possibly have said to offend her.

As she came into the village she saw people hurrying along the street.

"What is all the excitement?" she called as two boys ran past her.

"Been an accident. Baby run over by an automobile. The yeller-haired kid what belongs to them city folks. Guess he's killed," called the boy.

Killed! Her little Bobby, whom she had left such a short time ago. Oh, where was Arthur! If she could only get to him this nightmare would go. Why hadn't she realized sooner what Arthur and the babies meant to her? How could she have ever thought for one minute that it would be fun to go back to those meaningless, pleasureful girlhood days! If she had only known as she knew now! If she had only been at home this dreadful thing couldn't have happened.

She never knew how she reached her front gate. She saw her husband in the crowd. "Arthur," she cried. "Bobby"— She could get no further. He was at her side in an instant. "Jean, dear, it isn't Bobby. Look, he is on the porch. It is another little fellow, but he is not much hurt. Where have you been, Jean?"

"Arthur, first take me to my babies."

Later that evening she made her confession of the momentary discontent to her husband, but she added, "the cure, I am sure, will be a permanent one."

"WHO WILL WIN THIS BATTLE?"

Your kidneys are the filters of the body. If they become inactive and fail to eliminate the waste matter, they are apt to throw the whole mechanism of the body out of order, thus toxic poisons can accumulate in the system and be as deadly as snake venom.

Besides causing the minor ailments of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago and backache, neglect of the kidneys is apt to develop into more serious diseases, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

Rid the body of toxic poisons—clean the bladder and kidneys and cure the twinges of rheumatism with Anuric and you win the battle of life.

Anuric was first discovered by Dr. Pierce, and has benefited thousands of sufferers as well as appeased and eliminated the ravages of the more serious kidney diseases. Now procurable at any good drug store, or send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch office, Bridgeburg, Ont., 10 cents for trial package.

Thorold, Ont.—"I was wonderfully helped by taking 'Anuric.' For about three years I had kidney trouble and rheumatism. I also had backache. My limbs would swell and I had rheumatism in my arms and hands. My hands would swell and joints would be so sore and stiff I could scarcely do my work. They would pain me something awful. I doctored but without relief. At last I saw 'Anuric' advertised. I began its use and two bottles completely cured me of all my rheumatism, and I think it was permanent for that was a year ago and I have never had any return of this ailment. I have never found a medicine so good as 'Anuric'."—Mrs. R. H. Hurry.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the good health rule for 50 years.

Waterways of Holland

Possess Unique Beauty as Well as Usefulness

"THERE is in Holland a life unknown elsewhere, or at least but little known; it is the life on the water," writes Alphonse Esquiros. "At all the spots where nature has forgotten to place rivers or streams, Dutch industry has made canals. These waterways lead not only from one town to another, but even to each village—we might almost say to each country house; . . . As the majority of these canals are higher than the adjoining fields, and as they are concealed by dykes, at a certain distance off you can see neither water nor boats, but only the swelling sails, which have the appearance of making an excursion about the country. There are boats for conveying passengers; the rich and busy classes despise this mode of locomotion as slow and vulgar, but they lose those landscape beauties for which the speed does not compensate. . . . The services rendered elsewhere by carts are here performed by boats; the gardener himself pulls his boat to market laden with vegetables, fruits, or flowers, just as in the south of France a donkey is led along.

"At Amsterdam, on quarter days, the furniture is moved from one part of the town to another on the canals; chairs and tables, arranged with some degree of symmetry, appear to be awaiting visitors. These saloons on the water move along through the crowd, which does not even look at them. . . . Milk comes to Amsterdam from the adjacent farms by the same route. . . . The milk-boats sometimes meet on the Amstel dam canal water-boats coming from Utrecht. Such is one of the singularities of this northern Venice; though seated in the midst of water, it has none to drink. Flat boats, true water carriers, were obliged to come to its help until recently, when human industry sought rain water in the dunes, and brought it to Amsterdam by engines whose strength and boldness of conception are admirable. . . . The boats especially employed for the passenger service are called trekschuyten. They are a species of gondola or water diligence. Along nearly the whole length, which is about thirty feet, runs a box or wooden house, frequently painted green; the roof being covered with a layer of painted cockle shells. This house is divided into two compartments or hainst the larger one near the prow, is common to passengers and baggage. . . . The second compartment is the cabinet, called in Dutch the roef, which is entered through folding doors. The windows, four or six in numbers, are glazed and have red or white curtains. . . . Along two sides of this cabin run cushioned benches, on which the travelers sit opposite each other. Sometimes there is on a shelf a few volumes belonging to the boat and forming a floating library at the service of studious passengers."

"Seated near the helm you allow your eyes to wander over the water which yields with a slight splash to the movement of the boat; you notice the white, black, or red sails that enliven the solitude of the canal; the prairies, where cows, covered in spring with warm blankets, gravely chew the damp grass; the beautiful marsh birds which are seen nowhere else; the women silently washing the linen; or the continuous fringe of chateaux, country-houses and gardens that line the canal banks.

"The scenery of Holland has been accused of monotony; but possibly persons have not looked twice at it. Here you must seek variety not on the earth but in the sky. Look up! the sky is more diversified in the Netherlands than anywhere in France. Those immense clouds with their thousand shapes, their changing colors and rapid goings, impart a singular movement to the landscape. But the land and water are not without diversity. The nature of the Netherlands is photographic, clear, neat, and delicate, showing in a minute and charming details. Individual property is neither imprisoned nor hidden; the fields are walled by water.

"In these ditches that take the place of hedgerows, a perfect aquatic flora is expanded, not less rich than the terrestrial flora. In spring the somber surface of the canal is studded with little white flowers, soon to be joined by the lily and the iris; it is the festival of the waters. . . . At night, if you stand near the tiller, you enjoy a spectacle that has some grandeur about it. The mills with folded wings, which seem to be gazing on the stars, the placid light of the moon on the tranquil waters, the innocent attitude of the small houses slumbering on the banks of the canal, and from which a cock-crow is audible now and then—all this reveals to you one of the rustic asides of Dutch life."

Japan's First Woman Chauffeur.

A comely young woman stepped before the automobile license desk at the Metropolitan Police Department of Tokio on September 27 and asked to be examined for a license. She gave the name of Miss Hama Watanabe, aged 26, residence Utsunomiya, near Nikko. She presented a diploma from the schools of her native place and one from the Osaka Automobile School, dated April 15 of this year. She fully qualified and became Japan's first woman chauffeuse.

The Youngest President.

The official announcement was made recently that Milne Martin Todd of Galt, third son of the late Martin N. Todd, had been elected to succeed his father as president of the Galt, Preston & Hespeler Railway, and vice-president of the Lake Erie & Northern Railway. Both are radial roads operated by the Hydro-electric. Milne M. Todd represents the third generation of the Todd family to hold the presidency of the G. P. & H. Railway, his grandfather having been one of the promoters of the line and its first president. He is twenty-four years of age, and possibly the youngest railroad president in Canada.

The Walrus.

The average-sized Alaska walrus is as big as an ox and often weighs more than a ton. A walrus was recently killed by some whalers near Point Barrow whose head weighed eighty pounds, and skin, including flippers, five hundred pounds. The animal had a girth of fourteen feet, the skin was from half an inch to three inches in thickness, and the blubber weighed five hundred pounds.

Fears No Danger.

Lighting regulations which have been enforced as a war measure in Newfoundland for several months have been abrogated. The authorities believe that the near approach of winter, with its frequent storms along the coast of the colony makes improbable any visit from enemy war vessels for the next six months. Under the recent regulations lighthouse service has been suspended at various points and shipping has been excluded from certain harbors between dark and daylight.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Let me introduce myself as Professor Make'im, of Mannsville, Ohio. No doubt, you have all heard of the wonderful inventions of Edison and of what electricity has done to revolutionize the world in the past years. Raising Live Stock In Western Canada

ACCORDING to a recent statement by Prof. W. L. Carlyle, late Dean of the Oklahama State College of Agriculture, the live stock outlook in Alberta could hardly be excelled anywhere. Stockmen all over the country are looking to the Pacific slope sections for improvement in breeding, and Western Canada is admirably suited for raising stock. It is generally recognized that increase in live stock in future years must bring an improvement of the present breeding stock. The west was looked upon as the base of future supply for the eastern breeders. The live stock industry in the west was never better than it is to-day. A recent official report issued by the Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Saskatchewan by the Secretary of the Provincial Livestock Board shows that returns were never more satisfactory. The value of the live stock in Saskatchewan is estimated at $173,207,848, and these returns deal with conditions only up to April 30th last. There has been a great increase since that date as farmers realizing the value of mixed farming have taken to raising stock. They find that the straw from the wheat can be utilized as a cattle feed in the winter time, consequently there are not so many straw fires to be seen burning in the extensive wheat fields along the C. P. R. as in former years. In Alberta the other week a carload of 20 three-year-old Aberdeen Angus steers was sold at Calgary to a Chicago firm at 12 cents a pound, or a total of $3,427.20. Their average weight was 1,428 pounds. Recently one of the largest single cattle deals in Canada was closed in Edmonton, consisting of the purchase of 2,500 head of choice beef steers, weighing not less than 1,350 pounds each, the sum involved in the transaction being between $300,000 and $325,000, and it will require 140 C. P. R. cars to transport the animals to their destination. Summer feed is cheaply raised in great abundance.

who pares the potatoes or the man who bucksaws wood can take the part of the Chinaman who handles the flat-iron. This is merely a demonstration to show you the making ability of this machine, as well as the working ability of these Mechanical Men. My two workmen here will take these men and place them against the wall accordingly as I manufacture them. Then they will place each one at a machine and I shall, in turn, start each man working. My idea in making these Mechanical Men was to eliminate the use of the gasoline engine on account of gas being so expensive. After the demonstration of the working ability of these men, I shall show you how nine of these men can be carried on the palm of my hand.

These men are not for sale; the machine is. But the ingredients must be purchased from myself at the small cost of five dollars an ounce—inexpensive, when you think of manufacturing two men from each ounce.

At the conclusion of this address, the machine was set to work, the ingredients being poured in, and as Professor Make'im turned the crank out came nine stalwart Mechanical Men in turn, dressed in appropriate working garb. The workmen at first carefully placed these against the wall and later, in places ready to start their various occupations. Then at work, they in turn began—one, buck-sawing wood, another sweeping the floor, the Chinaman handling the flat-iron, the nigger pumping water, the washerman rubbing the clothes, the typical Canadian gentleman raising his hat, etc. When the demonstration of work had been finished, the men were again put into the machine and the Professor gathered the ingredients in a four-ounce bottle, which he later carried in the palm of his hand to show to the audience.

At the conclusion of the programme, Santa Claus distributed the presents from the Christmas tree, and the entertainment was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The proceeds amounted to $47.80.

Only a Limited Number Will be Summoned From Day to Day.

OTTAWA, Dec. 22.—As many conscripts as the district headquarters can handle will be summoned for January 3rd, and the balance day by day in such numbers as convenience may dictate. The number thus called up will be considerably in excess of fifteen thousand. Under existing conditions, the publication of the exact number of troops about to be trained in Canada for services overseas, or of the strength and composition, by stations, of units and detachments, is not regarded as advisable from a military point of view.

Unique Find In Ontario

The locked antlers.

IN September and October during the hunting season the hunter occasionally hears the sounds of fierce combat between those giants of the forest, the bull moose. With their formidable antlers these creatures can send a young birch tree like a piece of matchwood, and although it is only rarely that the bull moose will attack a man, if he does so the man has little chance unless he is armed with his high-powered rifle. The other day on St. Ignace Island, twenty-one miles south of Rossport, on the C. P. R., a pair of locked moose horns was found as the tragic record of a combat. They had evidently been fighting when the antlers became entangled, and, unable to extricate each other, the two animals died there of starvation, their remains being licked clean by the bears who prowl around in the forests of Ontario.

Comprehensive Review, etc.

local coal dealers have been energetic in procuring a supply, and have met the demand in fairly good shape. There is privation, so far as individual supply is concerned, but no one has gone cold. This has brought into our lives a new care and a new anxiety, and one that may not be done away with for a number of years.

Just recently the situation has become more acute. It is serious but not alarming. Some time ago after our visit to Toronto proving ineffective, I went to Ottawa and the Deputy Fuel Controller informed me that only 200,000 tons of coal was allotted to the Province of Ontario for the months of November and December. After that he considered plenty of coal would be available. He showed me a list of over 100 municipalities who up to the present had only received 20 p.c. of last year's supply, while Peterborough had received about 65 p.c.

However, he stated the Government had arranged to bring in 50,000 tons for emergency purposes, a portion for Montreal and a portion for Toronto. He said, "Go and see the Hon. Fuel Controller, and make arrangements to get a supply of this coal." This I did, accompanied by Mr. Hicks, who very kindly went along to verify the position Peterborough was in from the coal dealer's standpoint. In Toronto we were informed that coal was procured by the Government and handled by the Toronto Coal and Dock Company, that 40,000 tons had been sold and promised, but that only 13,000 tons were available. Thus the result.

However, thanks to our persistence and that of our dealers, we are getting a few carloads, which is taking care of the situation for the time being.

Great credit is due our dealers for Peterborough getting as much coal as she did. Particular credit is due Messrs. Robert Hicks Company, who had the foresight to go early in the season and risk buying at a high price many carloads of independent coal; and I say frankly, had it not been for the patriotic action on the part of the Robert Hicks Company, many hundred homes in the city of Peterborough would be without coal to-night.

It is gratifying to know that the majority of the dependents of the men on service at the Front, from this city have been provided with fuel.

Early in May last, anticipating a shortage, the Patriotic Fund office appealed to the Head Office in Ottawa to allow this branch to use as much as $10,000 to provide, in advance, coal for those on the fund here. After consideration, the Head Office reluctantly had to decline on the ground that so many places would ask for the same convenience.

Our local branch at once consulted the women, and they were asked to bring in for deposit in the bank sums of money to be expended in securing fuel. This was done, and arrangements made for a supply through a Toronto house. Eventually the Toronto house could not make good, in view of the complications that came up with regard to the supply from the States. The case was laid before Mr. Hicks, and he at once brought in between $3,000 and $4,000 worth of coal from an independent source, which was delivered at the homes and paid for out of the savings from the families. The accommodation afforded by Mr. Hicks was entirely outside his general trade, and for two weeks he laid aside all other business and delivered the coal in rapid deliveries. So that between what was brought in for the Fund and by the city, nearly 1,500 tons of coal were handled. No doubt this lessened the anxiety, and placed in the city an amount of coal that otherwise might not have reached the city. The kindliest feeling has existed between the dealers an dthe city. Credit is due Aledrman Weir, whose advice wa salways sound and helpful. Much credit is due Alderman Dobbin who worked continuously, also Alderman Stratton, who worked with him on the sub-committee, also to Mr. Mr. Adams and his staff, whose work has been doubled on account of the coal question. The same applies to the Police Department.

The question of wood has been thoroughly gone into, but without very practical results, but some will be forthcoming in the near future.

Of all the responsibilities to be handed to my successor this one of a supply of fuel will be the most pertinent and pressing. Other things may be shelved and set aside to a more convenient season, but this one is of the present. The real causes of the shortage are based on war conditions.

The new Mayor will require to be at the service of the city at all times, as the day has come when a Mayor is a real servant of the people. If he is not prepared to be this, better that he were not in he office. The conditions prevailing now have thrown on the municipality and its Council a lot more anxiety and care that must be met. The alderman must be more than a representative. He must be the willing, loyal, helpful servant of his constituency. None other will fill the bill. Being a critic in the Council is not constructive. It makes for nothing but a hindrance and dampens the efforts and thoughts of others who may try to do what is helpful.

Returned Soldier Problem.

Regarding our soldiers, the first aim of all should be, and let it be fixed indelibly in our minds, that these men who voluntarily gave up their civilian duties at the call of the Nation must not suffer any loss by reason of their patriotism when they again return to civil life.

The man who has aken a fighting chance in the greatest war in history, to uphold the democratic ideals which you and I enjoy, must not be placed in the position of having to take a chance to ensure his own and his family's future welfare in the industrial market of the country he has served so well.

Thousands gave up their profession, trade, etc., absence from which meant the loss of opportunity, personal advancement and gain; thousands of students were preparing for examinations which, once passed, would admit them into the sphere of life they aspied to. Gentlemen, we owe it to these men to make such provisions that no detrimental effect will be caused to their future by their readiness to spend their energies in fighting our battles.

Men will return who were only nearing the threshold of manhood when they went away, with no fixed calling, on whose behalf the greatest care will have to be exercised in providing employment. This is incumbent upon us, as the years spent in service were those which usually decides a man's future.

The care of the disabled soldier is receiving attention, and the work already done in fitting him to hold his own in the future is worthy of the highest commendation.

Vocational training at the hands of experts is achieving great results, and the extension of training along the lines already established will prove a boon to the men.

The difficulty of absorbing the large number of men into civil life has to be met by encouragement of new industries, development of our natural resources, and by training men to take the positions which will be opened up by such development.

The establishment of technical schools throughout the Dominion where practical knowledge of the various trades closely related to our resources, can be acquired, would help many men to assure their future.

Many positions, formerly occupied by men at the Front, have been filled by women, and this phase of the question, if the men are not reinstated, will produce great hardship, as men who have followed a certain employment for years, will have to commence over again in strange employment.

The time to make provision is now. Procrastination will bring suffering in its train which will be a blot on the fair name of the country. The men did not delay when their services were required. Their eagerness to be attested was evidenced in the first months of th world's struggle. Then why should be delay in doing what honour demands of us?

Four More Towns In Palestine Are Captured By The British

General Allenby's Forces Have Made Another Important Advance---German Attemps to Raid British Lines on Cambrai Front Proved a Failure--Germany's Newest Peace Proposal View as Forerunner to an Offensive in West.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 24.—General Allenby's troops in Palestine continue their advance on the Plain of Sharon, north of Jaffa, and have occupied four more towns.

The official statement on the operations, issued last night, reads: "On Saturday morning, with naval co-operation, our left continued its advance north of Nahrelaujs, reaching the line Sheikh-el-Balutahel-Jelil, about four miles north of the river. Pushing eastward and south of the river we occupied Fejja and Mulebbis. This was followed by the capture of Rantieh, on the Turkish railway, to the north, and Khelbeida-Kelbireh, four miles south-east of Rantieh. Effective aerial work was carried out on enemy transports and infantry."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 24.—Emperor William visited the front north of Verdun on Friday, according to a Berlin despatch, and in an address to the troops, thanked them warmly for their efforts.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 22.—The Commissioner of Ways and Communications has sent telegraphic instructions to railwaymen's committees to take control of railroads in their own hands. The communication of the Commissioner declares that all high posts, such as managers and heads of departments, have been abolished.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 24.—Germany's newest peace propaganda is viewed as a forerunner to an offensive in the West, unless a German-made peace is accepted by the Allies and to us should not for a moment induce to slacken our preparations for war, says Secretary Baker of War, in his weekly review of the military situation, who points out that the fighting morale of Italy may be relied upon, no matter how intensive the German peace campaign becomes.

"Since the defeat of the German forces in front of Verdun," says Secretary Baker, "England and the British Dominions have taken over an increasingly large share of the burden of the war. It is our duty, therefore, in looking to the future, to realize that if we, the United States, are to fulfil the pledge we made on entering the war, if we are to fight this war to a successful conclusion, we must assume the full responsibility which rests upon us. We are the freshest in the struggle. We have reserve man-power and reserve mechanical-power. Our armies constitute the reserve of victory."

ANOTHER BOMBASTIC SPEECH FROM KAISER

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 24.—"If the enemy does not want peace then we must bring peace to the world by the battering of our iron fist and our shining sword," the Kaiser declared in a speech to the Second Army. "Despite three years of war and suffering," the Kaiser continues, "our old offensive spirit is still effective. This is shown by our recent great victory in Flanders and at Cambrai, where the arrogant British first felt the crushing power of our offensive blow.

The Kaiser, continuing, extravagantly praised the tactics, strategy, and valor of the successful defence of his troops on the Western front. He referred specially to the defence which the German troops interposed "against the attempt to advance toward Brussels" as the "most gigantic feat in history."

"The year 1917," the Kaiser said, "has proved that the German people have in the Lord of Creation an unconditional and avowed ally, on Whom they can absolutely rely. Without Him all would have been in vain."

The Kaiser's speech was made on Saturday to the Second Army, somewhere on the Western front.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—A big Russian ship arriving at a Pacific port had deposed its captain and been run across the Pacific in charge of a Bolsheviki committee of five. When they reached port the crew met the Industrial Workers of the World Committee and had a long conference. They are all now under arrest by the United States military and police.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 24.—German troops yesterday afternoon attempted to raid British positions south-east of Epehy, on the Cambrai front, but were driven off, the War Office announced to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 23.—A Caucasian army of 100,000 men is advancing on the rear of the troops of General Kaledines, the Cossack leader, according to an announcement made to-day by the Bolsheviki Press Bureau.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE FROM POPE BENEDICT

ROME, Dec. 24.—(Copyrigat by United Press).—Pope Benedict today sent to the people of America, in a statement to the United Press, through the Papal Secretary of State, this Christmas message:

"The Holy Father sends to the people of America his cordial greetings and prays they may take the heart in this time of strife and suffering the true lessons of the Christmas-tide, the lessons of God's unceasing Love for mankind, and the lesson of unfaltering courage and sacrifice of self. More especially he calls upon the little children to whom this day of days belongs, to pray with all their hearts to the babe of Bethlehem, that He may protect their loved ones and give back to the world that peace which He came to bring upon earth."

Although Hindenburg is Planning a Big Offensive on Western Front British Tommies Have Still Time to Provide Christmas Cheer For French Kiddies

GERMANS ARE MASSING

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Dec. 24.—While Gen. Allenby's modern wise men of the East are following the star of Bethlehem and driving the Turks out of the land of Palestine, Field Marshal Haig's British bulldogs are holding Jehovah's line on the west. Behind the front today there were signs of unusual movements under way. Dispatches via Holland report Belgium seething with German troops from the Russian front.

This Christmas eve, therefore, is perhaps the most important for humanity since the birth of Christ. While ragged, war-orphaned children gaze longingly into dimly-lighted shop windows in Krupp-crushed villages, wondering if Kris Kringle has forgotten them as usual during three years of war, Hindenburg is perhaps planning to roll the guns over them again.

The British Tommy is of different stuff from his antagonist. The Tommy is half steel, half the milk of human kindness. Therefore, before going to ice-bound craters to spend his Christmas fighting, sniping, signalling back ranges for British batteries, he is playing Santa Claus in the cellars to an astonishing number of French children. A great many places the British Santa Claus visited were directly under German shell fire. No wonder the poor kiddies near the front lines are apprehensive of being overlooked. They have told their friends, the Tommies, that Santa Claus certainly couldn't be expected to find the tiny shell iron chimneys in their ruined homes or descend through the holes in the pavement to greet them.

But the Tommies propose to find a way for Santa. Out of his none too rich funds he has bought simple trinkets for the children, bon-bons, teddy bears, toy cannon, etc. He won't have to find Santa clothes. The red suit and beard with which American children are familiar, because Christmastide to the French kiddies means just a nebulous sort of personage who fills up wooden shoes instead of stockings, and no French baby ever expects to see the giver at work.

This will be the fourth time that the Tommies have played the game of war zone Santa. Thus disposing of his Christmas cheer he will hurrry to the roll call, forget to murmur when called down for tardiness, and go to the firing line to shoot the doctrine of peace on earth into the cause of all his troubles across the way.

HUNDREDS OF CHILDREN GUESTS OF WAR VETERANS

Christmas Treat For the Kiddies of Peterboro' Soldiers on Saturday Proved a Most Enjoyable and Successful Gathering

PRESENTS FOR EVERYONE

The Christmas treat arranged by the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association for the children of Peterborough soldiers was held in the Salvation Army Temple on Simcoe Street on Saturday afternoon and proved an unqualified success.

The only drawback was that the attendance was so large that the accommodation of the commodious building was taxed almost beyond its capacity. Between eight hundred and a thousand children were entertained during the afternoon, and the gathering was one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever held in Peterborough.

Two o'clock was the hour set for the opening of the event, and long before that hour the children had begun to gather. They came in groups, sometimes five or six together, some in charge of an anxious mother and others under the chaperonage of a bigger sister, but all hands anxious to see Father Christmas, whom it was known was billed to put in an appearance during the afternoon.

Tables were set in the large Sunday School Hall of the building, and here there was plenty of refreshments for the little folk, although some idea of the size of the crowd can be obtained from the fact that it required four sittings before all the youngsters had an opportunity to sample the bread and butter, sandwiches and cakes that were provided in lavish quantities. There was enough for everybody, and the delay could not be avoided.

In the main hall upstairs the Temple Band provided a most enjoyable programme of music and vocal numbers by several young entertainers were well received. Comrade Gilbert and Bandsman Ford contributed a well rendered trombone and cornet duet, and the youngsters had a lively time singing "Pack All Your Troubles" and other popular choruses.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who suggested the Christmas entertainment, and whose cheque for $50 started the fund, gave a short address.

The main event of the afternoon, however, for the little folks was the arrival of Santa Claus. As the benevolent old gentleman emerged from the chimney and crawled out of the fireplace he was given a most enthusiastic welcome. On the platform were four beautifully decorated

PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT FOR REAL PEACE HAS BEEN CHECKED

Bolsheviki Efforts Have Complicated the Situation and Instead of a Democratic Peace They Have Opened Their Frontiers to Germany

AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 24. — Camille Huysmans, the Belgian Socialist leader, who has been a prime mover in the efforts to hold an international Socialist peace gathering, told the United Press to-day the Bolsheviki peace endeavours seemed likely to postpone indefinitely all hopes of a people's movement for real peace.

"I do not believe the Lenine regime in Russia is favourable to a democratic just peace," he declared. "The Leninites cannot accept German proposals without a surrender—and the German Government cannot accept the Leninite conceptions without revolutionizing itself.

"Prospects of a separate peace have increased the ambitions of the Central Powers. Teutonic annexationists understand perfectly that the Lenine negotiations are only an intermezzo. They know these will surely disorganize all possible Russian resistance — and then Hindenburg will be able not only to send heaviest reinforcements to France, but easily to conquer Russia.

"Democratic elements in Central Powers feel this increase of annexationist spirit. Hungarian Socialists understood the situation when they voted against a separate peace.

"Nobody should attach the least importance to a German agreement not to transfer troops during the period of armistice. Germany's best troops on the Russian front are already marching toward France.

"The Bolsheviki have not understood their inability to enforce a democratic peace or to prevent the imposition of heavy German terms. While completely disorganzing the army they wanted to be masters. They have succeeded at the price of opening their frontiers.

"Their interior policy has been no better. They organized a dictatorship, not of the proletariat, but over the proletariat. Now they threaten the still greater terror of the guillotine. And this after the introduction of a resolution in Socialist Congress at Copenhagen in 1910 against death punishment. Russia is now under a new Czarist regime, which foreign Socialists have been invited to admire, and which they find impossible to even consider."

Huysman is secretary of the International Socialist Bureau and one of the world leaders in Liberal movements.

BIG PARTY OF OFFICERS AND MEN HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Peterboro' Veterans Invalided From the Front Reach the City in Time to Enjoy Christmas Festivities at Home

LAND IN NEW YORK

During the past couple of days quite a large party of Peterborough officers and men have arrived from overseas service, happily reaching home in time to take part in the Christmas festivities. They arrived at New York last week.

Among the officers to get home is Lieut.-Col. T. W. H. Young, former officer commanding the 10th Artillery Brigade, Canadian Militia, who left Canada early in 1915 as medical officer of the 2nd Canadian Divisional Engineers. Col. Young saw considerable service at the front and more recently has been in charge of a Canadian Hospital in England. He is looking well and has been busy shaking hands with the many friends who have welcomed him home.

Another officer who arrived on Saturday was Major Sidney T. Medd, who left Peterborough on March 6, 1916, as officer commanding B squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles. Major Medd was home in the early autumn of 1915, coming back to Canada on a sad errand in charge of the body of his brother-in-law, Lieut. Arthur Ackerman.

Capt. V. Lancaster, of Peterborough who went overseas as an officer with the 109th Lindsay Battalion, also returned on Saturday.

Gunner H. A. Legros, one of the original 4th Battery men, who left Peterborough in August, 1914 with the 24th Field Battery, reached home on Saturday evening. Gunner Legros, whose home is at the corner of Water and Charlotte street, saw more service than any of the party who have just arrived, as he has been at the front with the 4th Battery for nearly three years.

Sapper Geo. Parks, who went overseas with Queen's Engineers, and has seen long service at the front, is another of the returned men who have just got home.

Sergt. Wilbert Irwin, who left Peterborough early in 1915 with the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, arrived home yesterday morning after being overseas over two years.

Pte. Geo. Lilly, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was badly wounded by shrapnel in France, was another of yesterday morning's arrivals. Pte. Lilly will be remembered by hosts fans.

Pte. Wm. A. Murphy, another 93rd Battalion man, who was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front and was wounded in action, is another of the new arrivals. His home is on Elm street.

Pte. Simpson, who went overseas with the 10th Battalion, also arrived home on Saturday night.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

CONTINUE GOOD SERVICE.

Public confidence, won by exceptionally effective public service, is good ground for further public confidence. Mr. T. F. Matthews, who has splendidly served the city for sixteen years continuously as chairman of the Water Works Board, and as chairman of the Utilities Commission since its organiation, announces his willingness to give still further service. Instead of retiring as he intended to do; at the urgency of many citizens, who have the interests of the city at heart, he has consented to be put in nomination for another term. It would not only be a graceful thing, but a good thing, for Peterborough to allow him to be elected by acclamation. Without disparaging the merits of any possible opposing candidate, it is doubtful if any citizen of Peterborough is so well qualified for the service in question as Mr. Matthews—by large experience and special knowledge of the details and requirements of the several interests of which he has so long had the direction. Besides, he has had a prominent share in inaugurating the installation of the Hydro-Electric service and system; and his special knowledge of the situation will enable him to give especially valuable service in putting the system in a sound and settled condition.

To-day aldermanic candidates were nominated for whom only one-fifth of the electors can vote.

WHAT WE NEED.

Another season of "Peace on earth and good will to men" has come amidst the maddest welter of war the world has ever known. But there is little of the incongruous in the situation. We and the world of civilization are at war because we are fighting to win the conditions of enduring peace. Without the strife, the struggle, the sufferings, we cannot have victory; and without victory we cannot have peace. The conditions of victory are harmony of spirit and sentiment and corresponding coordination of action between the great champions of civilization. Harmony and effective cooperation are indispensable conditions of success. Not only must there be inter-allied harmony, but there must be harmony in this as well as other allied countries in the discharge of its war-duty and national duty if we are to have the best results.

We have just passed through a civil war, represented by an election contest, in which much irritating bitterness has been aroused and exhibited. There have been many things said, many moties, more or less falsely, imputed and generally much done that has impaired the harmony of our citizenship, and theatens to destroy it if we do not forget our differences and unite upon the common ground of patriotic endavour to forget all causes of initiation, and consummate the true union, the union of harmonious citizenship, without which national effort will be shorn of much of its strength. We have set ourselves to the task of helping conquer militarism and its evil works; before we can our best in this way we must conquer ourselves; we must overcome the spirit of disunion that comes from mutual suspicions—thank God, mostly groundless. We must be charitable in our judgment of our neighbours who differ in opinion over matters that don't count in winning the war, or in the higher discharge of national duty or of civic duty.

If we can come as a people and community, to house in our hearts and souls, the spirit of charity, forbearance, and good will that came to earth twenty centuries ako, we can, with confident trust and in good faith, wish each other one and all, a merry Christmas, that to be truly what the wish means, must endure in spirit the year round.

If we dethrone absolutism in Germany, the people will have to follow the higher civilization and govern themselves.

HELPING HALIFAX.

The government deserves credit for expressing the will and the heart of the people of Canada by devoting the sum of five million dollars for the relief of their suffering fellow citizens in Halifax. We cannot form the least possible idea of the conditions that must exist in the murdered city, with thousands of homes wiped out, thousands of people left destitute, wihout means, or shelter, in the dead and middle of winter. We cannot consecrate ourselves, our resources, or our sympathies to a more noble and needed expression o the Christmas spirit than by remembering practically and substantially the relief, in many ways, of the people and city of Halifax.

We should do this from motives both of humanity and patriotism. Halifax is one of the oldest cities in Canada, with one of the finest harbours in the world, the maritime gateway of Canada, one of the greatest potential naval bases in the Empire, and, with growing importance in relation to the new place Canada has won, and will hold in coming years, when, after the war the work of readjustment and the conditions of new imperial and world relations will be realized. The war has neutralized geographic conditions and has virtually placed this continent alongside Europe, and in the future there will be a oneness of interest and ambition between the western hemisphere and the great democracies of Europe which will be established upon a firm basis of popular and governmental freedom.

Considering our future relations to the world and the Empire, Halifax will become, in one sense, the new capital of Canada; and, in its rebuilding and more than restoration, it will be a centre of interest.

Nova Scotia is a province of great resources, especially in the matter of coal; and the juxtaposition of iron deposits, suggest possibilities of shipbuilding, which is the one great need to make Canada commercically important, to make herself the distributor of the immense food production her immense area of soil makes possible.

The disaster of Halifax, as well as the greater disaster of the war, like all the dispensations or permissions of Providence, has, among the harrowing suffering, redeeming results. It permits of a fresh start, with new impulses to action and lessons of wisdom. It equips and inspires to do great things in a better way. Halifax to be rebuilt should be built better, with greater attention to the civic, sanitary and social requirements, which experience has indicated as neecssary.

And, besides, we have now the lesson of the need of greater development of our production resources. The food situation in Great Britain is stringent, and the new government should and must give increased and systematic attention to the growth of the food stuffs, whose sufficiency means victory and whose failure, failure.

Why? The price of oleomargarine in Canada is 37c and 38c, while in the United States it is only 27c and 28c. On December 17th, the electors condemned the food extortioners as well as the "slacker."

SERVICE BY SAVING.

Mr. Hoover, the United States food controller, declares that that country's surplus of food has already been shipped to the allies and that any further shipments must be provided by saving the domestic supply in order to provide an exportable surplus of the needed kind of food. This indicates not only the absolute necessity of individual and national saving; but is equally applicable to Canada.

It seems impossible to deny that we Canadians do not know the science of saving; that is the true economy, not mere avaracious pinching and paring. The habits our people have formed, of wasteful use of means, of diverting from legitimate and beneficent employment the means that come into our possession, or under our control, cling to us.

This habit has become so much a part of our character that we waste substance and means without realizing what we are doing.

In making his report of the Penny Bank for the months of September and October, the manager remarks upon the amounts deposited as less than they might have been made. He quotes the result of investigations of a Social Service worker, who has been looking into the picture shows, and who declares that the amount of $22,607 deposited in the Penny Bank was less than half the amount spent by children in the cheap moving picture shows.

Emphasizing this, is not to demand that children should not have the innocent pleasures that come from attendance at these picture theatres; but it does show something wrong when double the amount is spent upon pleasure than upon the duty of saving our means for useful purposes and possible days of misfortune.

The children are not alone in their comparatively extravagant expenditures upon pleasures. In these days of sore stress, these days of scarcity, and these days of necessity for supplying our allies who are fighting our battles, we find hundreds of persons tracing the same giddy rounds of pleasure; committing the same social extravagances; the same waste of means sorely needed for higher purposes.

With all the injunctions to saving; with all the proof of the necessity of saving in war interests, there is still a great deal of waste; much of it proceeding from thoughtlessness, and this thoughtlessness comes from lack of training in the art of thrift.

We have never, as a nation, been taught to save. We have been very generally allowed to grow to manhood and womanhood, without lessons or examples of the virtue of saving and thrift, either in the home or the school.

As in the moral domain, so in the educational and domestic domain, the means of teaching and learning rest on the scriptural way—line upon line, precept upon precept.

We cannot expect saving and thrift to be taught in the home, for the homes of our country, taken in the mean, are, rather, schools of extravagance, when we consider the wisdom and, as we are learning these days, the necessity, of economy in the use of means God has given to be employed for our own good and the good of others.

In times of peace, in times of normal conditions, waste of means is regarded, as it is not, a venial offence. But it becomes a crime, when our means become in a very special way a sacred trust; when means and opportunities capable of being used to help the world in the battle of right, are frittered away and made in effect an aid to the enemy.

The great duty of Canadians at this time is saving—to send when the need for help is urgent, when a loaf of bread or a pound of bacon becomes as much a weapon of victory as a bullet or bomb.

NO ALLIANCE.

Those extremists who declared that there was an alliance between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Bourassa, and what he stands for, must react. Bourassa, in his paper, Le Devoir, says:

In repeating everywhere that "the Liberal party is for war to the end," Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his principal lieutenants have left no issue to those Canadians (the Nationalists) who think it more patriotic to save Canada from ruin.

So Mr. Bourassa and his Nationalists are still by themselves, cut off and separate from those patriotic Canadians who think it Canada's duty to remain in the war to the end.

Scores of similar discord-breeding canards have as much foundation as the absurd Laurier-Bourassa charge.

TREMENDOUS PRODUCTION EFFORTS ARE NOW DEMANDED

The outlook for production of foodstuffs in Europe next year is distinctly unfavourable. France has been dependent upon intensive cultivation of land, which in turn has required an abundant use of fertilizers, but since the beginning of the war the available supply of fertilizers in Europe has dwindled, and the land of France has deteriorated until to-day it is incapable of large production. The 1917 cereal harvest in France was less than half that of a normal pre-war year. In great Britain, much new land has been brought under cultivation by the aid of tractors, which has also been used to some extent in France, but there is little prospect of much improvement in production in Europe while the shipping shortage prevents the transportation from oerseas of nitrates, phosphates and other fertilizing supplies. Indeed, the Allies must be prepared for even poorer crops in 1918 than those of the current year.

The Canadian food controller has pointed out that the Canadian people have refused nothing that was needed toward the successful prosecution of the war. When conservation of food became necessary, the people of this country commenced to make an effort to conserve food. It is difficult to change extravagant food habits but it is being gradually done. Wheat is being saved by the use of corn and other cereals. Pork and beef are being saved by the increased consumption of fish. Much has already been done and the effort is becoming more general and the results more gratifying. The call has now been sounded for increased production of food. The need is very great if the Allies are to be given the support from this country which they require. With all the accessible reserves of food now exhausted, and a grave shortage in the present supply to meet the demands before the next harvest, the situation calls for a tremendous effort.—Monetary Times.

G. H. Duncan And G. W. Green Were Nominated For Mayor

ed himself a hard and fair fighter, and an efficient public servant. It is expected if he remains in the field that the contest for the Mayoralty will be an interesting one.

Mr. T. F. Matthews was re-elected Utilities Commissioner by acclamation, another tribute to his faithful and fruitful work in the supervision of the city's waterworks and Hydro-Electric Systems.

The only other acclamation went to Ald. Langford as representative of the North Ward.

THE PUBLIC MEETING.

Quite a representative gathering of citizens assembled in the council chamber at the close of the prescribed time for nominations. City Clerk Armstrong was appointed chairman, and called upon the Mayoralty candidates to address the meeting.

Ald. Duncan in a husky voice stated that he was suffering from a severe cold and would not attempt to make an address. He also remarked that it would not be fair to take advantage of ex-Ald. Green, who was not present. Ald. Duncan said he would present his campaign address through the local papers. He mentioned his long term and many activities as alderman, and expressed the hope that he would be returned Mayor on New Year's Day.

ALD. STRATTON.

For business reasons, and because he was a young man with opportunities which further service should enhance, Ald. Stratton said he had decided to defer his candidature (for the Mayoralty to some time when his private affairs would not interfere with the performance of the duties demanded of the mayor of the city.

Touching upon some of the problems the council of 1918 will have to deal with, Ald. Stratton referred to the street car service, which, he said, was becoming acute. Belt lines were needed in Ashburnham and also on this side of the river.

The greater production movement last summer had proved a success, and arrangements should be made to extend this work next year. Citizens owning vacant lots should place them at the disposal of the people in order that crops of vegetables should be raised instead of permitting weeds to grow on them.

The method of maintaining the Patriotic Fund would require careful consideration by the new council.

Of the city's expenditures of $376,966.00 all but $85,410 were fixed charges which had to be met. Alderman Stratton mentioned the appropriation of $14,500 for the Police Department, pointing out that the council had practically no control over this department. The Mayor was only one of the three members, the other two being the Judge and Police Magistrate.

The total debenture debt is $2,521,125.00, which requires $115,216.90 interest and $75,849.00 for the sinking fund, or a total of $191,066.00. Ald. Stratton stated that the Hydro-Electric, Waterworks and local improvement were self-sustaining. About three-quarters of a million of the debentures were not self-sustaining.

MAYOR DUFFUS.

Mayor Duffus stated that there was before the ratepayers a bylaw to give the De Laval Company a strip of the unopened street adjoining their lot, between Park street and the G. T. R.

"When the De Laval Co. came here they made the city extremely modest promises regarding their factory which now largely exceeds those promises and is one of the best factories in the Dominion of Canada. Peterboro should be proud of the DeLaval Company. They have found that the lot they secured (large as it seemed) was insufficient for their expansion. I hope that there will be no opposition to this very small matter of a piece of an unopened street."

Mayor Duffus intimated that the De Laval Company was planning to take up a new line of manufacturing and their extensions would be as large as their grounds would permit.

"I take this opportunity of thanking the citizens for their cooperation and kindness shown to me as Alderman and Mayor, and I trust that the same assistance will be shown to my successor and to the members of the Council."

Notice to Nominees.

Candidates for Mayor, Aldermen and Utilities Commission must fyle their declaration of qualification not later than noon on Wednesday.

Nominees for the Board of Education who desire to withdraw their nomination must do so before noon on Wednesday.

City Clerk Armstrong will be in his office from seven-thirty until nine o'clock this evening and between eleven and twelve o'clock noon to-morrow.

He Is Surprised At The Results

"I'm Beginning to Feel Like New Man," Says Forrest, After Taking Tanlac

"For three or four years," said William Forrest, 247 Bernice Crescent, Toronto, "I had suffered from painful, disordered kidneys and nervousness without being able to get anything to help me. My kidneys bothered me constantly and the pain in my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything, was terrible. My nerves were all to pieces, I had weak, shaky spells, and my hands would tremble so at times I could hardly hold anything. I also had attacks of dizziness, when everything seemed to get dim before my eyes, and my head would swim so I could hardly stand up. I had little or no strength and energy and always felt tired and worn-out.

"I am now on my second bottle of Tanlac and I can certainly tell a big difference in my condition. The pain has almost disappeared from my back now and my kidneys don't bother me anything like they did, and I'm beginning to feel like a new man. My nerves are more quiet and steady and I don't have those weak, dizzy feelings like I did. I am already feeling better in every way than I have in a long time, and am regaining my strength rapidly. I have really been surprised to get such wonderful results in so short a time, and I can recommend Tanlac to all suffering people because I believe it will do them good.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

Ontario Will Be "Bone-Dry" After April Next

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—Official announcement was made by the Prime Minister on Saturday of the prohibition of intoxicating liquors into Canada after to-day. The only exception is in the case of purchases made before that date. The transportation of intoxicating liquor into any part of Canada where the sale of such liquor is illegal is prohibited after 1st April next, and it is also announced that the manufacture of such liquor "within Canada" will be prohibited on and after a date to be determined upon. The announcement reads:

"On 17th December the people gave to the Government an unmistakable mandate for the vigorous prosecution of the war and for the employment of all the country's energies and resources necessary to achieve victory. It is essential, and indeed vital, for the efficient conduct of the war that wasteful or unnecessary expenditure should be prohibited, and that all articles capable of being utilised as food should be conserved. It is beyond question that the use of liquor affects adversely the realisation of this purpose.

"The subject has been under consideration by the War Committee of the Cabinet, and the following conclusions have been reached:

"(1) Any liquor or beverage containing more than 2.1-2 per cent. alcohol shall be regarded as intoxicating liquor.

"(2) The importation of intoxicating liquor into Canada is prohibited on and after December 24, 1917, unless it shall have been actually purchased on or before that date for importation into Canada, and unless, having been so purchased, it is imported into Canada not later than the 31st day of January, 1918. The final determination upon any question respecting such purchase shall rest with the Minister of Customs. This regulation shall not apply to importations for medicinal, sacramental, manufacturing or chemical purposes.

"(3) The transportation of liquor into any part of Canada wherein the sale of intoxicating liquor is illegal will be prohibited on and after April 1, 1918.

"(4) The manufacture of intoxicating liquor within Canada will be prohibited on and after a date to be determined upon further investigation and consideration of the actual conditions of the industry.

"As above mentioned, the prohibition of importation becomes effective to-day, 24th December.

"The regulations to carry into effect the other provisions above mentioned are being prepared, and as soon as approved they will be enacted under the provisions of the War Measures Act.

"The foregoing provisions will remain in force during the war and for twelve months after the conclusion of peace."

One Day Will Do It

People who have been suffering from backache, kidney trouble, rheumatic ailments, are sometimes under the impression that they will have to continue to suffer from these ailments and they will be unable to obtain relief. Headache, nervousness, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system, and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expel these gases. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will prevent the formation of these poisonous gases, and are a positive cure for Kidney troubles, rheumatic ailments or any disease arising from a disorderly condition of the kidneys. ACADIANS OF TO-DAY

An Acadian Home.

Partridge Island, Parrsboro, N.S.

RICH in its history of strong men and heroic women whose stirring adventures by land and sea set the imagination aflame, appealing in its wild scenery of lakes and streams and wooded hills, charming in the lawns and hedges and shady streets of its villages and towns, the country from Yarmouth to Digby, Nova Scotia is the Mecca of the historian, the sportsman, the painter, the geologist and the vacation seeker. In this land, which even to-day abounds in rivers and lakes teeming with lusty, leaping fish, and is clothed with forests of fir, pine, hemlock and spruce, home of deer, moose and bear, the Indians must have lived from time immemorial. Such a paradise for the huntsman must have been the subject of song and story among the redmen.

And here too the Norsemen came full five hundred years before Columbus set out in his three tiny ships. Urged on by their dauntless spirit the wily Norsemen drove their war galleys far south and west from Iceland till they reached the land which a no less hardy race were later to name Nova Scotia. It was at Yarmouth they landed; and two mighty boulders bearing inscriptions in Runic [illegible] may be seen near the town of Yarmouth—lasting evidence of that daring adventure made near [illegible] years ago.

The Acadian farmers flourished in this land until 1755, when they were expelled by the English, and only the ugly scars of their cellars told of the farm houses which had once been there. Six years later came families from New England, adventurous, indomitable and hardy pioneers, it was their descendants who later built hundreds of the fastest sailing ships, sailed them to the seven seas and built up mighty fortunes which now show themselves in magnificent residences set in beautiful surroundings of lawns, hedges and trees.

But the Acadians returned; and to-day, for miles the neat villages of their descendants skirt the shores of Fundy Bay, from Yarmouth to Digby. The descendants of the Acadians have cultivated the soft marsh lands and fresh water meadows, preserving the simple manners, customs and language of their ancestors.

And here one finds fifty miles of rugged storm swept coast, lofty beetling cliffs, caves like volcanic craters—wilder than the dreams of a mad poet.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE PILLAR OF SMOKE

By LIEUT. ROLAND JOHNSTON

One aerodrome sleeps by day and works at night, while another works by night and sleeps by day. Both are important, though the work of one is different from that of the other. One becomes active when the light has faded; it is illuminated by several points of blinding light; the intensely brilliant flares as sudden as the activity, all become silent, as the mechanics return to their beds, to await the time when the aeroplanes will return from their work.

The other, active with the rising of the sun, awakes the morning with the burr and drone of the aeroplanes. The aeroplanes soar swiftly to the dizzy heights and disappear in the deep blue of the sky.

The work varies with the type of machine employed and the place in which they work. It is of a new work that I would speak, a work rarely mentioned, but of the utmost importance. Picture a scene, embracing both land and sea and the most beautiful effects of these; changing colours of the sunlit sea, deep green in many shades, purple and brown of the land to the north. A smoke blazes and smoulders in the damp of early morning. The green wood crackles, splits, and shoots up flickering yellow tongues of flame. Wreaths of grey smoke rise up in a thick pillar to mask the new born sun, and to disappear in a sapphire sky.

The smoke pile of an aerodrome is the first sign of a busy day; the first sign of life on a plain otherwise still. It is the wind indicator for the pilots as they pass on their way heavenwards. It is their guide when they slide down to their rest on completion of their work. In the winter, with its mists and rain, the mechanics will cluster around it like so many flies around a jar of honey.

This morning the early rays of the sun slant over the aerodrome, and the sapphire changes a paler blue. The ruddy glow fades, and the smoke stands out in more relief against the pale sky. A calm day is promised, for the pillar rises almost vertically, undisturbed by the rude hands of the wind. Now and again, however, a sudden faint breath breaks up the sensitive formation, into wisps and phantom shapes, including the dawn, swirling now in this direction, now in that. In the east the sun mounts in a fleecy sky which merges into clearness and limpidity overhead. The silent passing of the night is pierced by a few sharp short flares of a bugle and voices follow.

"Fine day. Good morning. Ought to get some good work done to-day."

"Yes. Thank Goodness, the weather still holds out."

In a few minutes the long low sheds which border one side of the aerodrome are busy, and shortly after, the doors swing open, and "THEY" issue forth, guided by gentle and respectful hands. Nobody except those who have seen and tested can appreciate the value of these things of superb beauty. Words fail to convey any idea of the science and skill and time which have produced this perfection in aerial craft; it must suffice to say that "THEY" are the latest and best type of aeroplane.

One by one they are brought out, and one by one they take their places in a row fronting the sheds. They face a scene which is worthy of their own beauty. Resting on a plateau, the aerodrome commands a fine aspect. On each side of the plateau, rolling away into purple distances lie the downs. In the south, and not very far away, deep bluish green, reflecting in stabbing points of light the rays of the sun, is the sea revealing a myriad of colours in its depths. At the back of the aeroplane sheds there falls a gentle wooded slope, stretching away into fertile pasture lands and smiling landscape. It is as if the plateau of the aerodrome were a gigantic barrier between the land and sea, a large natural dike.

One by one the aeroplanes burst into life with a series of short sharp explosions.

One by one they leave the ground, and take to their natural home, the friendly air. They follow the smoke trail until they top the lambs wool cloud in the East, and, quickly diminishing specks black against white, they rapidly disappear. It is not like the old days, when so much time was spent in making height.

That quivering tracework, the aeroplane, pulsating with strong life and power, controlled by a master hand, is soon in realms of its own, and only the smoke pile is left to dominate the skies above the aerodrome.

The aeroplanes, separting to distances varying from one to two miles, turn seawards. The land fades in the faint mists of early morning, and they soar above the restless sea. Thousands of feet below them is a seemingly slow-moving speck; a tiny ship, lean and black, raises a trail of foam as it speeds on its course. A thick line of smoke almost obscured it from the airmen's view. Towards the shore three steamers are slowly making their way to the port which shows as a smear of smoke in the distance.

It is to guard these and other things that the aeroplanes are ceaselessly on the watch. Keen, trained eyes scour the seas in all directions waiting, almost longing, for the sight of the enemy, whether it be destroyer, aeroplane, or submarine. The aeroplanes look for all three.

The sun rises still higher in the sky, and not until it has almost reached its zenith do the pilots turn towards their aerodrome. The smoke fire shows on the plateau, and they glide down smoothly, coming to rest by the shade. The pilot's work for the day is done.

QUEBEC WILL ACCEPT ACT WITHOUT DEMUR

MONTREAL, Dec. 19.—With the smoke of the election clearing away and the Union Government firmly established with the full strength of the nation behind it, the administrators of the Military Service Act and the military authorities are settling down to finish their task of selecting and training for overseas the fighting power of Canada.

Major-General E. W. Wilson, officer commanding the Fourth Military District, said to-day that although he had nothing to do with the enforcement of the Act he was satisfied that when its provisions had been finally carried out and the necessary men supplied to him to be trained, he would have the material for an efficient body of fighting men.

"People who have feared trouble," said the general, "do not know the people anywhere than those of the Province of Quebec. They always have been law-abiding and they will continue to be so. Their leaders have said that if the country backed the Government the people of Quebec would submit to its mandate, and they will. The Quebec regiments that have gone overseas have made a splendid record and those which will be supplied under the Military Service Act will sustain that reputation."

PEOPLE WILL ACCEPT VERDICT

At the Registrar's office it was declared that the people would accept the verdict of the country and that the administration of the Act would proceed as in the past. There had been no politics in connection with the carrying out of the Act, it was asserted, and the only reason why the work seemed to have gone more slowly in this Province than in the others was that the registration had been late because of the failure of some of the people to understand at first what was required of them.

Almost a full battalion of volunteer service men are already in khaki and have entered upon their training for service. The English-speaking depot battalion, under Col. M. A. Piche, has reached a strength of 600 officers and men, while the French-speaking depot unit, under Lieut.-Col. Daly Gingras, D.S.O., has enrolled well over 300 men who voluntarily reported since the Act came into force. The officers and men of this unit to-day generally expressed their gratification over the result of the elections. The only regret they had was the temporary defeat of Lieut.-Col. Blondin and Major Henri Chasse M.C., candidate in Quebec West, and at present at the front with the 22nd Battalion This, they state, will be rectified when the members of the famous 22nd Battalion and other French-Canadian units in the firing line return their votes next month.

QUEBEC SOLDIERS FOR UNION.

"Despite reports to the contrary," said a French officer, "we have received many letters from our compatriots overseas expressing the hope that Canada would support the Union Government."

Although the military authorities have very little to say regarding the methods to be employed in rounding up defaulters, it is understood that they have by no means been idle during the past few weeks, and preparations have been completed for the arrest of all defaulters after January 3rd, the date on which men of the first-class will be called to the colours. The plans are so well prepared that when active steps are taken their operation will be decisive, and those who anticipate escaping the arm of the law are likely to be greatly disappointed.

PROTECTION AT MONTREAL.

Montreal. — The Freight Handlers Association of Montreal at a meeting passed a resolution governing the movement of munition ships and the guarding of the docks in the port. It decided that no ship having once received orders to sail, must remain at a less distance than three miles away, if further instructions are to be issued to it.

It was further resolved that no alien enemy is to be tolerated within half a mile of the harbour on both sides of the St. Lawrence; anybody violating this rule to be shot. No drunkenness on the docks is to be permitted by the association. The resolution will be sent to Premier Borden.

Music & Drama

VERY GOOD EDDIE.

For the second time in a week a musical comedy scored a big hit at the Grand on Saturday.

"So Long Letty" earlier in the week set the pace, and on Saturday "Very Good Eddie" flashed under the wire another winner. Saturday's offering was one of the snappiest and funniest musical shows that Peterborough theatre-goers have had a chance of seeing in a long period, and they were doubly fortunate, inasmuch as the production only visited half a dozen Canadian cities.

The story of "Very Good Eddie" was adopted from the farce, "Over Night."

Eddie Kettle, a young man of vast pocket dimensions, has married a woman of Amazonian proportions. Starting out on their honeymoon on a Hudson River steamer, they meet Mr. and Mrs. Darling, also just married, but in their case the husband is built on a large scale, while the wife is of Eddie's calibre. Darling and Mrs. Kettle go on shore to look after the luggage, and the respective couples, and are left behind when the steamer starts, leaving their spouses alone on the boat. Eventually Eddie and Mrs. Darling arrive at the Rip Van Winkle Inn, where they are taken for a honeymoon couple, and where the fun is fast and furious. Eventually everything is smoothed out, but not before the audience is exhausted from laughing.

Denman Maley, clerk at the Rip Van Winkle Inn, is responsible for the greater part of the fun. He is not on the stage until the second act, but he makes up for it when he does arrive, proving one of the funniest comedians seen at the Grand in many a moon. His funny speeches and business kept the audience convulsed. George Mack scored a hit as Eddie Kettle. He was irresistibly amusing in the part, and in addition to his clever fun-making, sang nicely as well. Theodora Warfield scored a personal triumph as Mrs. Darling, and Helen Raymond was happily cast as Mrs. Kettle.

The musical numbers were bright and catchy, and well sung. "On the Beach at Le Lei Wi" was probably the favourite with the audience. Elaine Ford and Ralph O'Brien contributed some clever danging specialties that were well received.

The costumes were lavish and the scenic investiture in keeping with the all-round high stardard of the production.

"Very Good Eddie" was very good indeed.

Gift of Socks Is Appreciated

Mrs. McKinstry, of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, has received the following letter of thanks from a Canadian soldier overseas:

Somewhere in France,
Nov. 25, 1917.

Dear Madam,—I received the parcel a few days ago containing socks, gum, etc., and was very pleased indeed to receive it as I can assure you. It could not have come in a better time as it is so hard to keep dry out here and especially this time of the year. I gave them out to the boys of my platoon and they were indeed very pleased to get them. My address is J. H. Gould, 19838, B Company, 15th Platoon, 1st Canadian Battalion, C.E.F., France. I am sure that Mrs. McKinstry, I appreciate your kindness to the fullest extent and I wish you may have every success in your good work as that is one article that is welcome to the men in the trenches at all times. We are having our first real winter weather to-day, as it is real cold and is snowing.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir, and to the People of Peterborough,—I saw in Friday evening's paper a piece about the voting on Monday and what happened to some of the women, and the man that saw them, what was he doing to be watching everything going on. Was he working on the streets or was he only watching for what he could see, and has he ever had anyone go to the front to do their bit, and is he going or does not the country require such men and his wife. I suppose she did not want, like himself, Mr. Burnham to get in at all for fear he would have to go. I say that it would not be worse for the likes of him to go than our dear ones for them to go and law down their lives fighting for the likes of his freedom. We all know that it is very hard, but if it will end this terrible struggle I say let's end it as soon as possible. I have given one dear son who now lies in France, and a good amny more dear mothers are like me.

Yours,
Soldier's Mother.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y M.C.A. building will be open as usual on Christmas Day.

On the evening of Christmas (Tuesday) a free entertainment will be given to members of the Boys' Department and their friends. About one hundred stereopticon slides will be used illustrating the story of Ben Hur and presenting a number of popular songs. Every boy is urged to be present. This entertainment will be given in the gymnasium. Parents are also invited to attend and occupy seats in the gallery at the gymnasium.

Parents should not fail to include a Y.M.C.A. membership in their Christmas presents, for this is a present that will bring enjoyment to a boy for the twelve long months of the year.

A special entertainment is being planned for the evening of January 8th, the proceedings of this entertainment to be devoted to paying the expenses of a few delegates to the Boys' Conference at Belleville, Jan. 17th to 20th. This will be a very pleasing entertainment and should be well patronized in view of its very worthy object.

COST OF LIVING GOES UP.

Ottawa. — A further increase in the cost of living is shown in the monthly report of the Labour Department for November. During the month the cost of the weekly budget of staple foods was $12.10, as compared with $11.81 in the previous month, and with $0.81 in November, 1916. Potatoes contributed more to the increased cost of living than any other commodity, rising in price in all the provinces but British Columbia, where a decrease was recorded. Increased prices obtained also for eggs, milk, butter, sugar and bread, while decreases were recorded in flour and beans. The prices on meats showed but little difference on the whole from the previous month.

Wholesale prices also showed some advance for the month. The chief increases were in textiles, grains, meats and miscellaneous foods, while the most important decreases occurred in the prices of hides, metals and implements.

TAFT WANTS 7,000,000.

Boston, Mass. — "We must have 7,000,000 men in France, 2,000,000 won't do." This is the opinion of former President Taft to-day following his address before the Associated Industries here.

"There is only one alternative," Mr. Taft declared, "beat Germany, or arm yourselves as the German people have been doing for the past 50 years."

DO NOT HOARD SUGAR.

Information secured by the Food Controller's Office appears to indicate that there is sufficient sugar in Canada for all ordinary needs. Many consumers, however, have purchased more than is sufficient for their immediate requirements, and if this hoarding is continued there is danger that those who have not been in a position to purchase large quantities may no be able to secure as much as they actually need. Hoarding is both unpatriotic and unwise. Householders are asked to buy only as much as they need for immediate use, and retailers are requested not to sell more than one week's supply per family, except in cases where it would be impossible for the consumer to secure supplies weekly.

POLICE CHIEF GETS NO HELP.

Stratford. — The city council, by the mayor's casting vote, decided not to pay the $500 damages assessed against Chief of Police Lannin in an action against him on a charge of slander and illegal search.

MR. HALL POINTS THE WAY TO SAVE OUR ALLIES IN EUROPE

Racial Hatred May Win an Election, But Food Is Needed to Win the War

The campaign of racial and sectarian hate and distrust is noy only one week away. During that compaign everything that "Big Interests" and "Little Interests" could do to inflame the passions and excite the prejudices of the electors, was done.

The campaign of racial and sectarian hate and distrust is now only one discord and hate might grow and flourish, our leading Canadian daily newspapers joined in a conspiracy of silence to conceal from the Canadian people the fact that many thousands of people in England were forming and marching in bread lines and hundreds of thousands of people in Italy were on the verge of starvation.

It is now conceded within one short week that the food situation in Europe "is grave beyond anything that was thought possible" a year ago.

These facts were well known to the so-called Union Government before this campaign began. Why were they concealed from the electors? Why did some of our clergy even refrain from reading the Food Controller's letter the Sunday before the election, showing each shortage was a stern reality? Why did not the Government take some action early this fall to attempt to cope with food shortage by breaking the prairie sod?

The answer is plain. They knew that racial and sectarian hate and distrust could be relied upon to win the election and to becloud the minds of the electors to reasons and arguments that were founded on common sense, of even a very common kind.

But the great forces of want and truth have at last, though too late for this election, appeared, and many electors are already zeginning to feel the effects of the jolt recived from taking a false step.

It is not yet too late for the electors to stir the government into immediate action to prepare for 1918, which will be a worse year of food shortage and high food prices than 1917.

The government should be urged to take immediate steps to bring millions of acres of our North Westh lands under cultivation during this coming spring. Millions of bushels of oats and flax can be grown where only grass will grow if prompt action is not taken.

The Government should place orders at once for thousands of tractors, plows, disc plows, harows, seeders, reapers, threshers and implements to till, to sow, to reap, and to thresh, and for storehouses to store the grain till it can be removed.

The labour resources of this country should be immediately organized to use these implements of husbandry.

We have prisoners of war who could be employed and even England could spare some of her war prisoners; yes, and so could the United States and so could France and Italy.

The American Army could no doubt help harvest the crop, if only our government would take steps to till and sow.

The Eastern farmers could be assured that there would be abundance of grain to feed their live stock. If so, they would double or treble their production of hogs and they would raise to maturity every calf and lamb to provide against meatless days.

Canada has the land all ready for the plow. She has the mony to buy the agricultural implements. This continent has the capacity to manufacture them. Canada has the men to till and to sow, but not to reap and garner.

She can however, call on our great neighbour to the South and that call will receive immediate response.

What an opportunity presents itself to Canada to save our Allies in Europe? Who will not offer up thanks to Almighty God that He has given us these great fertile lands to be used to save a starving world?

R. R. HALL.

Defeated Liberal Candidate, West Peterborough.

Miss E. A. Rae Receives Reading Lamp From Staff and Pupils of May's School

After the usual Christmas festivities on Friday at May's School, the pupils and staff presented Miss E. A. Rae, who is leaving to accept a position on the city staff, with a beautiful reading lamp, and the following address:

Dear Miss Rae,

It is with both happiness and regret that we have assembled with you on this, your last day with us. We cannot but feel happy, as Christmas is the happiest time of the whole year; yet our gladness is tinged with sorrow at the prospect of your leaving us. We feel sure that we can all say that we have enjoyed our term with you, and we feel that in all your experience at May's School you have been just as kind and faithful as you have been to us. When you have gone, we shall all remember with pleasure our term with you, and we hope that you in your turn will do the same, forgetting how very trying and troublesome we have been to you at times.

We, your pupils and the members of the staff, felt that we could not let you leave us without some mark of appreciation. So we ask you to accept this reading lamp as a token of the esteem in which we hold you.

We heartily extend to you our best wishes for your success in your new work and in any other work you may undertake.

Signed on behalf of your class and the members of the staff.

As the little folks filed past Santa Claus and his assistants, presented each of them with a drawing slate, a Christmas stocking containing a number of toys and a bag of candy, topped with an orange and an apple.

The children all agreed that Father Christmas had done splendidly, in view of the number of people he had to look after.

PICKPOCKET GETS TWELVE MONTHS.

David Walsh had his trail on Wednesday before His Honour Judge Ward, and was sentenced to twelve months in the Central Prison. Walsh was convicted on a charge of picking pockets on November 30th, the occasion of a big mass meeting at Millbrook to hear Sir Robert L. Borden and Hon. N. W. Rowell.

David Grant, who is believed to have been an accomplice of Walsh, was since arrested at Peterboro on a charge of vagrancy and on suspicion of being a pickpocket, and taken to Millbrook for examination.

Walsh was caught red handed with his hand under a man's coat, and was also supposed to have stolen $11 from a man named Campbell, who had his money in a vest pocket, with his coat, sweater coat and rain coat, all buttoned, over the vest. Walsh was found guilty by the judge. From a police record of Walsh it apears that most of his life since 1888 has been spent behind the bars, he having been convicted fourteen times for pickpocketing and larceny at Detroit, Erie, New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Toronto and other places; and once for throwing a stone through a railway coach at Peterboro. He is a man between 45 and 50 years of age. He was sentenced to 12 months in the Central Prison.

The Mayoralty

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes, sympathy, and support in favour of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for nine years, during which time I have served on all standing Committees and many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as Chairman of most of the Committes, which you will admit should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the workings of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present Election in suming up the situation, I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that, with nine years' experience, the people would expect nothing else but that Iwould be a contestant, and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for nine years to fail to offer my services at this time

In these days, when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions are so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city affairs. Much attention will have to be directed to sewage disposal with a view to disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of allowing the waters of the Otonabee to be poluted. The succesful completion of the Outfall sewer and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance If elected these will have my close and most careful attention.

There is also the building of the new bridge over the Otonabee at Hunter Street, which is supposed to be built by the end of 1919. This is one of the matters this year's Council will have to deal with and a great deal will depend upon labour conditions.

I will strongly oppose any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions.

I am in favour of extending our present street car lines to the north and west and to East City so as to give a beter service to the public generally.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of those measures which tended to promote good citizenship.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and Private Parties to endeavour to settle these matters without recourse to litigation and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

The securing of new industries consistent with the best interests of our city has always had and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your hands. During the past 23 years I have been in business for myself. Faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be the asurance that all will be equally and fairly treated. I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election may increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence, by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past and the hope that the year 1918 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours Faithfully,

G. H. DUNCAN

Win-the-War Men But Anti-Conscriptionists

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Reuter's is informed that allied Australia Anti-conscription League has expressed strong win-the-war views. Prominent Labour leaders are fighting at the front and others have sons there, including Senator Tudor, anti-conscriptionist leader and former Minister of Defence. Australia is maintaining larger forces than all the other Dominions together. All parties are unanimous for retention of German Pacific colonies and for no slackening of the war. Hon. Senator Tudor has been mentioned as successor to Hughes as Premier. It is thought likely that Hughes will resign himself as a result of conscription vote.

UNLUCKY THIRTEEN

Baker's Dozen in Race for London's Mayoralty.

London, Ont., December 24. — Unlucky thirteen—for someone—is going to prevail in the 1918 mayoralty election. No less than thirteen candidates have been nominated for the race. Every member of the 1917 Board of Control and Mayor H. A. Stevenson, were among the thirteen whose names were placed in nomination.

WHY WHEAT IS NEEDED

Wheat is the grain above all others that the Food Controller wants the people of Canada to produce and to save for export — and why? Three grains—wheat, rye, and barley—are peculiarly suited to making bread. None but these three will make it as it is commonly known There are at least two strong reasons why the Allies cannot use other cereals entirely to make up their deficiency in wheat: (1) People who are working under unusual stress are not in a situation to tolerate any marked deviation from the normal diet; (2) European trade conditions make such substitution extremely difficult

Two Candidates in Toronto

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—Mayor Church and Controller Cameron are the candidates nominated for Mayor here today. In Hamilton Mr. Charles Goodenough Booker was thought good enough for a second term and got it by acclamation. In London Mayor Stevenson, C. R. Somerville and Dr. R. W. Shaw were nominated.

Child Choked By Piece of Meat, Saved By Grandmother

By her presence of mind, Mrs. A. Billington, 496 Gilchrist Street, saved the life of her three-year-old grandchild, Mamie Weese, at noon to-day. While eating dinner, the child swallowed a piece of meat, which caught in her throat, choking her. In a few moments the little girl was suffocating, and had become black in the face, when the grandmother succeeded, after several attempts, in relieving the danger, which had become acute.

MORE SHEEP CALLED FOR.

While special emphasis has been laid on the increased production of hogs, more sheep are needed also. The increase in the number of sheep in all Canada this year amounted to 300,000 head, or 15 per cent.

HOTELS EFFECT SAVING.

Cards have been issued from the Food Controller's Office to about fifty of the leading hotels and restaurants throughout Canada, with blanks to be filled in, showing the saving effected by the white flour, beef and bacon regulations, which went into effect last September. In the case of bacon, incomplete returns show a saving of 39 per cent. over September, 1917, and of 41 per cent. over October, 1916.

PTE. W. A. MURPHY, formerly of the 85rd Battalion, who has been invalided home after being wounded in France.

No Four Per Cent. Beer Under New Regulations

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—In reference to a report in a Toronto morning paper that the manufacture in Ontario of four per cent. beer would be permissible under the new Dominion prohibition regulations, Hon. N. W. Rowell to-day states that the intention of the Union Government was to prohibit liquors of more than 2 1-2 per cent. proof spirits, which is the the standard already fixed by the Legislature in Ontario and other dry provinces.

TWO DEATHS FROM POISONING

Two deaths from poisoning occurred in the city over the week end. The first was that of Clifford Howden, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Howden, 251 Park street. Ptomaine poisoning was the immediate cause of death. The remains were taken this morning from the family residence to Omemee, where interment will take place.

The second death occurred in East City, when Percy Wallace Wall, aged four years, died suddenly last night as a result of an overdose of pills. His mother, three brothers and one sister survive. The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock to Warsaw. Rev. Mr. Whattam will officiate.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN THE CABINET

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 24. — Important changes are predicted for the new year. The Government as at present constituted, is more or less of a temporary character and will be radically changed in its make-up within the coming month. Two important portfolios are at present engaging attention. It is not believed here that Sir Edward Kemp will long remain overseas Minister of Militia. In fact it is not believed that the portfolio itself will long exist. It will probably be abolished in favour of a Militia Council, with a president responsible to the Minister of Militia here. The president will have to be a man, courageous enough to sweep aside the existing red tape and to clear the service of patronage and favouritsm with a view toward granting preferrment to the men who have seen actual service. The Government is said to be looking for such a man. Another important portfolio engaging attention is that of the Postmaster-General. The department has had so many different ministers in charge of it for the past six years that it has never had a chance to get into an orderly condition. The defeat of Hon. P. E. Blondin has now left the department without a minister. It is stated here that Hon. C. C. Ballantyne may become Postmaster-General and that Premier Brewster, of British Columbia may be taken in as Minister of Marine.

Boston. — John F. Moors, head of the American Red Cross unit which went from Boston to Halifax immediately after the disaster there on December 6th, reported on his return here to-day, that nearly 1,000 wounded persons are still in the hospitals, and that the cases of total blindness may reach 500.

Mr. Moors said the Halifax authorities had made great headway in bringing conditions back to normal, and providing for the destitute whose homes were wrecked by the explosion of the ammunition ship and burned.

SHORTAGE OF CLOTHING FOR Troops.

Washington. — Without waiting for Congressional applications, the War Department authorized orders for clothing equipment for 1,000,000 troops before the United States went to war, it was brought out to-day in the testimony of Quartermaster-General Sharpe before the Senate Military Committee. Secretary of War Baker in June approved orders to equip another half million. The only complaints of supply shortage received by the department has been in respect to clothing, General Sharpe said.

Excellent Programme Of Christmas Music At George Street Church

The Christmas music at George Street Methodist Church last night was of exceptional and uniform merit, enriching the service with an impressive touch of the spirit of the festive season.

The choir's numbers were Marchant's "He shall be Great," with soprano solo by Miss Kathleen Fanning, and Maunder's "Christians, Awake," with the solo parts sung by Miss Emma Worth. Both of these offerings, under the direction of Mr. J. H. Renwick, afforded new evidence of the tonal strength and beauty of the George Street choir.

Mr. Edward Jones sang "Star of Bethlehem," by Stephen Adams, and Mrs. Renwick, "The Angels' Song," by Louis Dressler, with violin obligato played by Miss Mignon Telgmann. Both soloists excelled themselves in voice and rendition.

A sextette of ladies' voices was probably the event of the musical programme. They sang Behrend's "The Gift," arranged by Mr. Renwick, with an effect that was highly commended by members of the congregation. The outstanding feature of this beautiful number was the fresh, sweet voice of Miss Elva McIntyre, to who mthe first soprano part was given. Only sixteen years old, Miss McIntyre revealed a tone of limpid quality and of natural beauty that should lend itself to easy development.

Miss Telgmann's violin solo, Elgar's "Salut d'Amour," was played with an effect that was striking evidence of the progress she has accomplished in her art. Her interpretation shows the subtelties of matured comprehension, and is enhanced by her mastery of technique.

A very large congregation was present. Rev. Mr. Thomas spoke on Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man."

HAD ENOUGH OF U-BOAT SERVICE

NEW YORK GERMAN TAKEN A PRISONER ON U-BOAT ADMITS LOW DOWN WORK.

London, Eng. — "Hey, Pete, don't you remember me? I've sold you a good many beers!"

That was the surprising greeting, in perfect Americanese, which an American bluejacket got from a member of the U-boat crew captured by the American destroyer. A sailor in town on leave to-day brought the story.

After the U-Boat had been taken by the destroyer and scuttled by its crew, the Germans were fished out of the water and put on board the destroyer. They were sent below, and given dry clothing.

While dressing and warming themselves by the heat of the engine room every one of the blue jackets who could leave his station filed own to look over the catch. Suddenly one of the Germans jumped to his feet and fairly shouted this unusual greeting.

"Don't you remember me?" he demanded of the astonished sailor.

"I tended bar at that saloon near the Brooklyn Navy Yard. You used to come in and tip one over frequently."

The group of Americans crowded around while "Pete" shook hands with his one time bartender.

"I lived in L'il ol' New York ten years," the German said. "Wisht I was back there now. Just before the war started I was in Germany on a visit. They grabbed me—and now look at me!

"I guess this war's over as far's we're concerned. But when I get out I'm going to hot-foot it back to New York. No more Kaiserland for me.

"This is a low down game this U-Boating, but it's better than standing in Flanders mud to your knees dodging shrapnel. When they get you in this sub game they get you good—usually.

"Wisht I was back drawing schooners over there on the Brooklyn side."

Three of the crew of 38 spoke English and talked with their captors. Most of them were surly and ill-natured although they owed their lives to the American blue jackets.

The Navy Department announced the sinking of the German submarine and capture of part of its crew on November 24th. The German U-Boat was injured by a depth bomb dropped by an American destroyer, and remained helpless, floating. The submesible was taken in tow but one of the German crew apparently opened the sea valves and the boat sank, her crew jumping into the water.

Special Programme By The Orchestra

At the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon and evening the Grand orchestra will play a special programme in connection with the visit of Marks' Bros. Mrs. Foster will play a violin solo at each performance. The orchestral programme will be as follows:

Overture, "Raymond" ..... Thomas
Violin solo, "Cavatina" ..... Raff
Fantasia, "Around the Christmas Tree"
Grand selection, "Faust" ..... Gounod
Overture, "Nebuchadnezzar" ..... Verdi

BOURASSA PRESS BLAMED

By La Patrie for Anti-Union Vote Cast by Quebec.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—La Patrie, Montreal, win-the-war independent: "Canada could not speak more clearly; yesterday's verdict is the expression of the civilian population's opinion. It is what we had forecasted. The sister provinces have reaffirmed their willingness to share the fate of the Mother Country, while Quebec did not share the same enthusiasm for the participation in the war. That difference in views and ideals is attributed to a certain school (Bourassa and his press), which misrepresented Great Britain and was allowed to carry on the greatest campaign of disaffection, discrediting both England and France and every day publishing ill-inspired attacks against the United Empire."

ALLIES BUY BACON

Will Purchase it From Canadian Packing Houses.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 20.—J. D. McGregor, Food Controller for the western provinces, has received a telegram from Food Controller Hanna stating that the latter had received a message from the allied buyers at Washington, that they had begun again to purchase from the Canadian packing houses, and hope that the situation will now be relieved. Mr. McGregor stated that this meant that $5,000,000 already available for purchasing bacon for the allied Governments would be immediately expended, the necessary cargo space having been secured for shipment. This will remove the congestion in the Canadian packing houses.

MAIL CLERKS NOT EXEMPT.

Vancouver, December 22. — Military representatives are understood to have received instructions to appeal all cases of post office clerks who were place in Class 2—that is, among the married men—but all the military representatives apparently have not yet followed their instructions. A mail sorter was before Judge McDonald in the Appeal Court, and the military representatives appealed to have the man taken out of Class 2. He was given until Feb. 1 to allow the department to make provision for training a man, the court intimating that delay in delivery of letters did not involve such consequences as delay in sending reinforcements to the troops at the front.

A Magnificent Christmas Gift Says Flavelle

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LINDSAY, Ont., Dec. 24.—At a special service of Thanksgiving held in the Cambridge street Methodist church last night to commemorate the fact that an order in council had been passed declaring that Canada was to have total prohibition, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario License Board, who was introduced as one of the leading temperance men of the Dominion, characterized the measure as a magnificent Christmas gift coming at a very opportune time.

"I had nothing to do with securing this new measure except that I was called in for one conference a few weeks ago with Mr. Warburton. Then I was told that Mr. Warburton had practically the assurance of the Cabinet for this order. It is sweeping in its effect and will mean the abolition of all beer and distilled liquors except 2 per cent. beer. The people of the Dominion are alone responsible for the measure, because of the return to power of the Union Government. Otherwise the measure would not have been passed, as no party would dare to put through such an order."

"Ontario will be dry except for liquid medicine purposes. Quebec will die out automatically, because just as soon as her present supply is exhausted she will be able to get no more."

Dog Afflicted With Rabies

A few days ago a dog belonging to Mr. W. H. Moore, 310 London St., showed symptoms of rabies. The animal was killed and the head forwarded to Toronto, where the diagnosis of Dr. Fortune, veterinary surgeon, was confirmed. An analysis of the head indicated pronounced symptoms of rabies.

A CHRISTMAS CARMEN.

(From Whittier.)

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands,
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands;
Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born!
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations!
The dark nigh tis ending and dawn has begun.
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Sing the bridal of nations! With chorals of love
Sing out the war-vulture and sing in the dove,
Till the hearts of the people keep time in accord,
And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord!
Clasp hands of the nations
In strong gratulations:
The dark nigh tis ending and dawn has begun.
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace;
East, west, north and south, let the long quarrel cease.
Sing the songs of great joy that the angels began,
Sing of glory to God and good will to man.
Hark, joining in chorus,
The heavens bend o'er us!
The dark nigh tis ending and dawn has begun.
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Voice of the People

LACK OF HARMONY
THE EVIL OF THE HOUR,

Sir,—A few years ago Germany and her people on account of their advanced ideas and progress were considered by many as a most enlightened country. Because Germany did not possess that true culture which is natural gentility, something that would force her to conform to humane ideals, that live humanity culture that is a proof against the ranker insincts, they have lost much honour and respect with the democratic and liberty-loving people of the world.

Germany earned the just condemnation by the breaking of her pledged word, the disregard and destruction of works of art and lack of consideration for the innocent.

In this democratic country of ours we are allowing an evil to grow that is a mockery of democracy. I refer to the lack of harmony on account of race and creed. Whether the cause may be ignorance, materialism, or lack of culture, we should get to the root of the evil. If our culture will not prevent us from encouraging this monster of hate, malice, and enmity, then we are not entitled to as much honour and respect as we give to Germany.

Democracy has its rights, but it has also its duties and responsibilities, and it is my belief that where Christian principles do not prevail, there can be no lasting harmony. The culture that prompts us to wish our neighbour "a merry Christmas" at this time of the year is only genuine when we have no malice in our heart.

Are we going to make a mockery of the hymns of peace or shall we return in spirit to the birthplace of democracy, the stable of Bethlehem? Can we forget and make a new start? I believe we can if we try. Then let us try and discourage any remarks of a discordant nature.

Some may say, after reading this that I am "sore" and starting to crawl. The more a man giveth himself to hatred in this world, the more he will find to hate. If we have enemies (and what honest man has them not?) let them be ours, since they must, but let us not be theirs, since we know better. In the words of a little poem:

He has no enemies, you say?
My friend, your boast is poor.
He who hath mingled in the fray
Of duty that the brave endure
Must have made foes. If he has none
Small is the work that he has done;
He has hit no traitor on the hip.
He has cast no cup from tempted lips,
He never turned the wrong to right;
He has been a coward in the fight.

Let us try and remember that we can only have peace and concord when the Christmas message is hearkened to by men of goodwill.

I wish you, Mr. Editor, and your many readers, a Merry Christmas.—Yours truly,

Joseph Begley.

Peterborough, Dec. 24, 1917.

OBITUARY

JAMES E. WATLEY.

James E. Watley, a well known builder and contractor, died Friday afternoon, at his home, 723 West Saginaw street, Lansing, Michigan, after an illness of only two days.

Mr. Watley was born June 24th, 1845, at Smith Township, Peterboro County, being 72 years old at the time of his death. He was married December 29, 1870, to Susan White, who is a sister of Samuel White, still residing in the township of Verulam. Mr. Watley has resided in Lansing for thirty years, retiring from active business two years ago, owing to the health of his wife. He was a member of the first Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Watley is survived by his wife, a son, Dr. S. Watley; a daughter, Mrs. Claude Coates; a grandson, Walter Coats; a nephew, William Kelly, both of the city; also a sister, Mrs. Henry Hutchison, of Swift Current, Canada.—Lindsay Warder.

BREAD AND BACON PRICES.

Persistent statements are made that the prices of bacon and bread are higher in Canada than they are in Great Britain. The allegation in regard to bacon has been emphatically denied and figures have been cited which prove conclusively that it is cheaper here than in Great Britain. The bread of Britain is war bread, subsidised by the Government, and containing other ingredients than white flour. A uniform price of a one-pound loaf at five cents was fixed. Already $200,000,000 has been appropriated to apply as a subsidy to sustain these prices

TRIUMPH FOR IMPERIALISM.

Ottawa. — The Prime Minister has received the following cablegram of congratulations from Hon. W. F. Massey, Prime Minister of New Zealand:

"I regard the result of your election as triumph for imperial cause, and proof that Canadians determined to do their full duty in defending the Empire and bringing this great fight for freedom to successful and satisfactory conclusion. Congratulate senior dominion most heartily."

PRODUCTION OF HOGS.

As a result of cooperation between the Food Controller and the Federal Department of Agriculture, the farmers throughout the Dominion have been informed of the necessity of increasing the production of hogs in Canada, and campaigns have been launched in every province under the direction of the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

RESTAURANT KEEPERS FINED

Prosecutions have been instituted in a number of cases against restaurant keepers who have failed to comply with the requirements of the Order-in-Council restricting the use of beef and bacon, and requiring that substitutes for white bread be provided in all public eating places. Action is pending in other cases.

FOOD CONTROLLER'S DUTY.

Speaking recently in Ottawa, Ven. Archdeacon Cody, of Toronto, said that there appeared to be a wide spread misunderstanding with regard to the functions of the Food Controller, whose primary duty was not to determine the price of food stuffs, but to see to it that there was a sufficient supply for export.

SPECIAL SERVICES YESTERDAY

Special Christmas services were conducted yesterday at Trinity Methodist Church by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, who in the morning preached on the "Magnificat," in the evening "The First Christmas."

The Music.

In the service the pastor paid an unusual tribute to the musical production, which he expressed as the finest he had heard in all his experience as pastor.

Special mention may be made of the fine rendering of "Calm in the Listening Ear of Night" by the quartette, and in the evening the anthem, "The Heavens are telling," by a full choir of 48.

Mr. King's splendid voice was heard to great advantage in "The Star of Bethlehem," and in the evening in "Oh Little Town of Bethlehem." To Professor King is due the credit of the splendid training of the choir.

Temple Band's Annual Appeal

Dear Friend:—

Here we are again with our Annual Christmas appeal. We hope you will be glad at this time and none the worse for our appeal. The past year has brought much of sorrow and heartache, yet considering all things we have very much to be thankful for in Peterborough.

We are still trying to hold our own, and a little to spare for the other fellow.

The band save the total amount of the civic grant ($300) as promised to patriotic purposes. One hundred dollars for huts in France for the boys' comfort, fifty dollars to the Canadian Red Cross, twenty-five dollars to the British Red Cross, and one hundred dollars to the Halifax sufferers.

A good number of our boys have paid the supreme sacrifice, others are wounded, while some are still in the firing line.

However we have tried to meet every civic, patriotic and religious demand upon us, and promise to do our best in 1918, if spared to do the same, with your assistance.

The band and officers together join in heartiest wishes for a most pleasant and joyous Christmas-tide for you and yours.

Yours and His to serve,
E. Hensley, Band Secretary.
J. Smith, Bandmaster.
J. A. McElhiney, Com. Officer.

The band will serenade to-night and to-morrow as usual

Presentation To Teacher

Pupils of S. S. No. 2, Anstruther, Say Farewell to Miss G. Dalton

On Tuesday evening, December 18, the parents, ex-pupils and pupils of S. S. No. 2, Anstruther assembled at the home of Mr. Philip Elmhirst to bid farewell to their teacher, Miss G. Dalton, and for the purpose of showing their appreciation of the work taken by her.

The evening was pleasantly spent by music, singing, games, etc., and closed by the presentation of a friendship bracelet, by Rub Rickles, while Maude Tucker, read the following address.

Dear Friend and Teacher, — Just before your departure from our midst, we, the scholars of this section, desire to show our appreciation of the services you have rendered us during the past few years.

As teacher you have endeavoured by your kindness and thoroughness, as well as by example and precept, to train us for our labours in the field of life. You have shown us by your ready sympathy and industry that you had our welfare and interests at heart.

It is needless to say we very much regret your intended departure from amongst us, but in your future life we one and all wish you health, wealth and prosperity. As you have the rare faculty of making friends and being able to keep them, we have no doubt as to your future happiness.

As a slight token of remembrance and friendship we ask you to accept this friendship bracelet, which will serve to remind you of the staunch friends you have made during your stay at Clanricarde.

Signed on behalf of the School— Roby Rickles, Maude Tucker.

300,000 DRUG FIENDS IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—There are approximately 300,000 drug addicts in New York city, and many of them are persons of "high social position," R. B. Sands, chief of the drug division of the Department of Internal Revenue, declared recently before the Whitney executive committee which is investigating the evil. The statement that in recent years the number of drug victims had decreased 80 per cent. made by Justice Cornelius Collins before the committee, was refuted. Sands testified, by his records.

The Brawn and Brain of a boy are not made out of books or sermons. They are built out of foods that supply in well-balanced proportion and in digestible form every needed element. These elements are found in Shredded Wheat Biscuit, a real whole wheat food which contains all the material for building the human body. A perfect food for growing youngsters. Its crispness encourages thorough chewing, which develops sound teeth and healthy gums. Children like it and thrive on it. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. For breakfast or any meal with milk or cream. Made in Canada.

Bolsheviki to Make Another Effort to Conciliate South Russians—Foes Will Make a Joint Reply

PEACE PROPOSALS

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 26.—The four Teutonic allied powers, according to a despatch from Brest-Litovsk, have agreed to reply jointly to the Russian peace proposals.

Trouble for Kaledines.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—A Caucasian army of 100,000 men is advancing on the rear of the troops of General Kaledines, the Cossack leader, according to an announcement made by the Bolsheviki press bureau.

The Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily Express says that one of Russia's peace delegates at Brest-Litovsy is a woman, Mme. Vizenko.

Countess Is Sentenced.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 26.—Countess Panin, who was Minister of Public Instruction in the Kerensky Cabinet, was on trial charged with misappropriation of public funds. Hers was the first case tried by "the Popular Revolutionary Tribunal." The Countess was convicted and sentenced to "imprisonment until the return of the money, and to public censure."

The small court-room in the Palace of Grand Duke Nicholas was filled with friends and sympathizers of the Countess. The Judges, five workingmen and two soldiers, were all elected mebers of the Petrograd Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies. They sat at a long table draped in red. To the left, near the wall, the defendant sat, a soldier with a bayonet on either side.

The President of the Bolsheviki Court read the indictment.

"Who wishes to speak to the prosecution?" he asked.

No one replied. The President then invited a statement for the defence. An elderly man, formerly employed at the Ministry of Public Instruction, arose, and spake of the great philanthropic and educational activity of Countess Panin. He denied the misuse of funds, and said that the Countess had refused to acknowledge the right of the present Government to demand the money. He declared that she would return the funds to the Constituent Assembly, which was the sole authority over her.

CATTLE MARKET

The live stock market at the Union Stock Yards on Monday was a quiet affair as compared with previous weeks. The run numbered only 875 cattle, but prices held steady with the close of last week, with the possible exception of canners and cutters, and they were sold at stronger figures. On account of being the day before Christmas packers did not buy heavily, the plants being closed down in some cases until Thursday. In the offering there was a number of choice butcher steers and heifers that brought from $11 to $12. The highest figure of the day was $12.50 per cwt., which was paid for a baby beef, weighing 750 pounds. It was the only one on the market on Monday. Good butcher killers sold at from $10 to $10.75 per cwt., and fair to medium cattle at from $9 to $9.50 per cwt.

PHENOMENAL PROGRESS AND EXPANSION REPORTED BY ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

During Past Year Bank Has Made Gain of Over Eighty-two Millions in Assets and Over Fifty-two Millions in Deposits—Full Assistance Given Dominion and British Governments—Strong Organization Chief Factor in New Records Established.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—The Royal Bank of Canada, in its Annual Statement for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30th, 1917, makes a most striking and valuable testimonial to the remarkable strength of Canada's financial position. For many years past the giant strides made by the Royal, have, perhaps, been one of the outstanding features of the expansion enjoyed by our larger Canadian banks.

Steadily the Royal has strengthened its general organization in every part of the Dominion and gradually the benefits of this organization have manifested themselves into a larger proportion of increased business that has come its way. While growing by leaps and bounds, the direction and management seem to have centered their attention on the maintenance of a position of almost unnecessary security. Canada, however, has been confronted with unprecedented problems during the war period and undoubtedly many dangers have been avoided because the leading banks have kept themselves in such exceptionally strong and liquid shape as to probably meet any situation that might arise.

Another special feature of the statement this year is afforded by the accounts indicating the manner in which the Royal has come to the assistance of the Dominion and British Governments in the handling of the large financing arising out of the conditions caused by the European war. By its wonderful records of the past few years it would have been thought very difficult for the Royal to duplicate them. It has gone even farther.

This year's showing in point of growth and assets, of increase in deposits, of business handled, of special government undertakings, probably constitutes a new record in the history of Canadian banking. In the case of the Royal such an achievement has perhaps added general interest because among the larger banks of the country, the Royal has established itself to a very considerable extent as the Bank of the People, as compared with the larger corporation or government accounts that are regularly handled by other institutions.

Every part of the general statement of assets and liabilities affords some indication of the remarkable manner in which the Royal has steadily forged ahead. In many instances the increases reported are so large that it becomes almost impossible to keep in mind that they are not being made by a country or a group of banks rather than by one single institution that, seven years ago, had total assets under the hundred million mark.

FEATURES OF YEAR'S BUSINESS

Total assets have jumped to $335,574,186, an increase for the past twelve months alone of $82,000,000. This increase in the one year is equal to the total assets the Bank had ten years ago, after thirty-five years of business. In the past two years the increase in assets has amounted to $137,000,000. A closer study of the statement shows more clearly how the Royal is benefitting from a strong organization in every section of the Dominion, as deposits have increased over $50,000,000 during the year and almost $100,000,000 in the past two years. The total deposits now stand at $252,987,382, as compared with $200,227,595 a year ago, and $154,976,327 two years ago. Of this total, deposits not bearing interest now stand at $70,498,667 compared with $59,365,396 and deposits bearing interest $182,488,715, as against $140,862,199, a year ago.

HALIFAX REPORT TO BE PREPARED AT ONCE

About a Month's Time Will Be Required — Other Clearing Depots For Returned Soldiers Will Be Utilized in the Meantime

About a month's time will be required for the restoration of Pier 2, the Reception Hospital and Clearing Depot at Halifax, which was badly damaged by the Mont Blanc explosion. Lieut.-Colonel J. J. Sharples, Commanding Officer of the Military Hospitals Commission Command, left for the scene of the disaster as soon as word reached Ottawa that Pier 2 was affected, and he is making arrangements with the Commission's works branch for the speedy restoration of the pier for its important function.

In spite of the temporary loss of Pier 2, the Commission has completed plans whereby no discomfort or inconvenience will be caused any wounded and invalided soldiers who may arrive before the Halifax Clearing Depot is repaired. There are several clearing depots in Eastern Canada and by arrangement with the transportation companies hospital trains will always be waiting for the arrival of any hospital ships. The men will then be dispatched with all speed to one of the other clearing depots where the usual routine will be carried on.

SOLDIERS SYMPATHIZE.

Returned soldiers all across Canada speak highly of the treatment received at Halifax on their first arrival in Canada, as in the past a great majority of the hospital ships have been received at that port. The people of Halifax will have no more earnest sympathizers than the boys whose reception to their homeland was so enthusiastically planned by many who are now homeless and maimed.

It is customary for the railway companies to arrange transportation west after the ship had docked and the precise amount of accommodation could be ascertained. Men bound for Quebec and provinces west of it were conveyed in sleeping cars in the Discharge Depot at Quebec City, if they were well enough to ride in an ordinary train. Cot cases were sent directly to the hospitals where their treatment was to be continued in Canada in special equipped hospitals on wheels provided for that purpose. Men destined for hospitals in the Maritime Provinces were medically boarded and assigned to institutions from the Halifax Clearing Depot.

NO HARDSHIP FOR MEN.

The Commission's facilities for handling cases at the various ports of arrival are such that with a very little re-arrangement and the co-operation of the railway companies no hardship will be entailed upon the soldiers returning in the near future.

It was a fortunate circumstance that the last ship-load of returned soldiers had been cleared through Pier 2 hospital several days before the accident, other wise there might have been heavy casualties in the depot, which was practically empty at the time of the explosion. Reports received at the Comission's offices early conveyed the assurance that there were no casualties in Pier 2, which was a solid steel and cement building. Fixtures, furnishings, and equipments, however, were sadly knocked about by the concussion.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $1, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, it is splendid.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

CHAPTER XXI.

"In reconstructing the case from the beginning," Duvall said, later in the day, "one fact stands out with especial prominence—the almost total absence of any definite clues."

He was sitting in the library of the Morton apartment, and with him were his wife, Mrs. Morton and Ruth.

"The thing was certainly very cleverly done," Mrs. Morton remarked. "I still do not understand it in the least. How, for instance, were the letters placed in my daughter's room?"

"I am coming to that," replied Duvall. "But first I will run over the case in the light of Miss Norman's confession to me so that you may understand it thoroughly and decide what action you wish to take against her and her sister, Miss Ford."

"Her sister?"

"Yes. The woman's name is not Norman. It is Ford—Jane Ford. Norman is an assumed name.

"The two of them came to New York about a year ago from somewhere up the state—a small town, near Rochester, I believe. One secured employment in the motion picture studio—the other, the one calling herself Miss Norman, worked as a stenographer.

"Her interest in motion pictures having been aroused by her sister's stories of the life in the studio, she became an ardent picture 'fan,' and spent every evening watching the films.

"Her attention was particularly devoted to the pictures in which your daughter appeared, owing to the stories her sister told her about Miss Morton's marvellous salary, her beauty, the ease with which she had become famous.

"These stories naturally inflamed her sister's mind. Working for ten dollars a week, she began to compare her state with that of a girl of her own age earning a hundred times as much, and gradually the idea began to possess her that she could become a motion-picture star herself.

"At first she admired Miss Morton immensely and never missed an opportunity to see the pictures in which she appeared. Then convinced of her own ability as an actress, she made application at the studio at which her sister worked for a position.

It seemed she haunted the studio for several weeks without getting any encouragement. Then, more to get rid of her than for any other reason, one of the directors offered her a place as extra woman in a picture Miss Morton was doing—a very minor part in which she had to appear momentarily as a saleswoman at a counter in a department store.

"Unfortunately, when Miss Morton saw her she happened to say to the director that she would have preferred a woman of a different type, dark, taller, so as to provide a more effective foil to her own type of beauty. As a result the girl did not get the position."

"I am so sorry," Ruth cried. "I hadn't the least idea who the girl was and, of course, I wouldn't have done her any harm for the world."

"I know that," Duvall replied, but she did not. She is mentally rather erratic, and she at once conceived the idea that you had singled her out for persecution; that, in fact, you were envious of her abilities and meant to prevent her from getting a chance.

"The thing preyed on her mind, and I fancy, unbalanced it a little. She conceived a violent hatred for you, and with her sister began to plot revenge.

"Her first move was to persuade her sister to move to the house on Fifty-seventh Street, close to your apartment. It took them some time to find the place—to secure a room situated as Miss Ford's was, but at last they managed it. Then they went to work.

"The letters were all typewritten on a machine belonging to a public stenographer whom the girls knew. Jane Ford would stop in at this woman's place late in the afternoon, and asking permission to use one of the machines would type the threatening letters. The paper she used was procured especially for her by her sister at a stationary store down town.

"The seal, a curious thing, had belonged to the girl's father, and she conceived the idea of signing the letters with it to add to the grimness of her threats. As a matter of fact, I do not think she ever had the least intention of carrying them out. It was to be solely a campaign of fear. She probably thought that she would so frighten you, Miss Morton, that your health would be broken down, and your work consequently interfered with to such an extent that you would lose your position. As I say, I think she is mentally somewhat unbalanced. I cannot account for some of her actions otherwise.

"The mailing of the first letter, the telephone messages, were comparatively simple. It was the delivery of those at the apartment that taxed her ingenuity. Yet the method was simple enough.

"The girl's father, I am told, had been an animal trainer in a circus, and one of his bequests to his daughters was a pet monkey named Jack, that had been taught to do all sorts of tricks. The girls brought this monkey to New York with them after their father's death. When the question arose of delivering the letters in your room, Miss Morton, she decided to make use of the animal.

"Creeping out of Marcia Ford's bedroom to the roof of the back building and taking the monkey with her, she crossed the roof of the second house and reached the wall of the apartment. From here she was in a position to reach either of your bedroom windows in the following manner:

"The monkey was led by means of a long thin rope, attached to a sort of harness about his neck and shoulders. By going to the rear edge of the back building they could readily swing him over to the fire escape, while by ascending to the top of the attic roof overlooking the court, they could in the same way enable him to reach the other window. The monkey had been trained to carry objects in his mouth. This accounts for the row of indentations on the letters found in your room. I had supposed they came from some mechanical device, fastened to the end of a long pole, but as a matter of fact, they were made by the monkey's teeth.

"The animal being light in weight, and the pads of his feet being of course soft, no traces of his presence were left on the newly painted surface of the fire escape. The handkerchief that I found there had been knotted about his neck as the collar to which the rope had been fastened had seemed a bit weak. In some way it became detached, probably when the girls jerked on the cord to summon him back after he had completed his task.

"In crossing the roofs of the two houses, the monkey's paws as well as the rope became covered with dust. This explains the spots which seemed to be finger marks upon the counterpane of your bed, and the long, dark straight line across the bed which I thought might have been left by a rod or pole. As a matter of fact it was made by a tightly stretched rope.

"The sending of the monkey on the night when you were lying in bed must have been a mistake. You will remember that, contrary to your usual habit you retired that night very early—a little after eight o'clock, if I remember correctly. The girls coming over the room saw that your room was dark and naturally supposed that no one was in it. The grinning face of the monkey standing on the bed beside you, was the death's head apparition you thought that you saw. At your cries the two women at once jerked on the cord, and the monkey hastened back to them through the partly raised window, leaving no trace of his presence except the black smudges of which I have spoken.

"I have no doubt that Jane Ford followed me back to my hotel after one of my early visits to your apartment, and thus learned my name and address. Her supposition that I was engaged in an attempt to ferret out the writer of the letters was a shrewd guess.

"The photograph was stolen from the studio by Marcia Ford who, being an employee, had ample opportunity to stroll about the place after office hours without exciting suspicion. She also arranged the subsequent delivery of the photograph and the substitution of the fake telegram.

"Even when I made my night visit to Marcia Ford's room and was attacked in the dark by the monkey, I did not suspect what it was. The room was pitch dark and in the gloom I got the impression of a much larger object—a person, in fact, and this impression was heightened by the fact that the animal wore a silken jacket, and I felt the sleeve of it against my throat. I only regret that the noise, the cries he made, singularly human in quality, made it necessary for me to leave the place so precipitately.

I became very weak and nervous. I took medicine without getting relief until I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and this medicine built me up in health and strength and I came through this critical period in a good healthy state. A TRIBUTE TO BRITAIN.

The British Empire still holds the reserve power in the war and the United States will spend fifty billions long before we approach the present fighting strength of the Briton. The British Empire has swept the seas from pole to pole and belted the earth at the equator. From Scotland to the ice-bound northern pole she guards a waterline of — miles day and night so effectively that no German cruiser has yet passed north of Scotland. From the Persian Gulf she has dredged the river Tigris of far-famed Babylon for 500 miles. It is like a romance of the Arabian Nights to contemplate the English moving from Egypt and the Sue Canal to Jerusalem in a northern line that may yet meet her forces coming from Bagdad and the East.

The restoration of Palestine and Babylon, their refertiliastion and the harnessing of their water powers are in sight with the dawn of peace and the loosening of the Turk stranglehold on progress and the waters of the Bosphorus.

England has punctured the Zeppelin, crushed the submarine, and transported thirteen million passengers during this war with a total loss of less than 2,500. It only remains for America to reinforce the finances of the Allies and the man power denfending civilization on the western front and put the liberty motor into the air over Germany in flocks of 10,000 with tons upon tons of dynamite, and the military power of Prussia endangering the peace of the world will be but a matter of history.—Boston News Bureau.

Habits of the Black Bear

THE black bear came shuffling down the mountain side through the fallen timber, passing here and there to turn over a rotten log in search of grubs. It was summer and the food was good. He was quite well satisfied with the world. He had found a very good bird for investigating in the new territory he had just taken up. In the tangle of the burnt and fallen trees he was sure of staples of life, and down on the edge of the river beside the trail he often discovered rare titbits left by camping parties.

A hoarse whistle boomed up from over the shoulder of the mountain on his left season caused him to pause, for it was a section of his every day life. Ever since his youngest cub days he had heard the roar, far or close, on one side or another. Sometimes he crossed the steel bars on which the roaring monsters slid down or rolled up out and into Field. He was a British Columbia bear, and the Canadian Pacific main line was as much a part of his life as the mountains were.

He drifted down further, and spied a tent. It looked tempting and he scented close. There was no one around, and he thrust an inquisitive nose within. Strange sights and wonderful smells greeted him. He made a tentative sweep at a bag with one armed paw and a snowy mass of sugar rolled out. He ate. Then he tried the bacon and found it good. He searched for a dessert and found a tin. This was held firmly in his paws while he bit at the top. It came off, and the contents lashed red and delicious. Being a cautious bear, he investigated further by thrusting his nose into the opening and sniffing deep. Instantly he coughed violently and a cloud of particles arose from the can and filled his eyes and mouth. With a strangled roar he reared blindly about. He tore up blankets, he wallowed against the camp stove, he ripped the tent walls with his frantic paws and finally brought all down upon him in a ruin of wreck. Fighting madly he worked free and dashed to the river where he plunged madly into the flood just as Jim Simpson, a guide and hunter, rounded the trail and saw the ruin wrought.

Simpson looked at the damage and swore, he pulled the canvas from the tangled mess of camp paraphernalia and disturbed a fine dust. He sneezed. He looked further. Red particles arose in little clouds when he moved any article. He picked up the can which caused the trouble, and he laughed. It was cayenne pepper.

But he thought the bear was provision enough, so he rode ten miles to his winter camp and brought back a huge-jawed bear trap. And he set the grim maw of metal in the thick of the tastiest-looking pile of rotten logs on the edge of the down timber, for he knew the habits of bears.

When the next dawn painted the peaks he started out with his rifle and his kodak. Men who hunt in the Canadian Pacific Rockies for their livings have realized that the camera-gun is as much of a money-getter as the bullet. When the bright morning sun poured warmly and cheerily over the low shoulder that rounded out into the broad valley of the view he was looking down from a mass of [illegible] When he [illegible] trembled [illegible] of the trapped bear, and the latter was looking at him. Its paw was clamped in the rusted teeth of the trap and the latter was fixed immovably in the mashed logs.

The camera clicked on the living animal just about thirty seconds before the rifle mechanism slid a big cartridge from magazine to barrel. Then another camp vandal had gone "over the mountains." A. T.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ANANIAS ELOPES

His Tale of Woe

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Ananias Sline had at last made up his mind. Of all the desirable widows and spinsters in Quince Harbor none seemed so attractive as Mrs. Em Bevis, who was the proprietor of the Quince Harbor dry goods store. If any one had remotely suggested to Ananias that the profitable little business had enhanced the charms of the Widow Bevis in his middle aged eyes he would have laughed one to scorn. Still, being half proprietor of a dry goods business was infinitely better than being porter in a village bank. Any one would admit that!

When he put the question to Mrs Bevis it was noontime and her two rosy cheeked clerks had gone home to dinner. Ananias had assured himself that they two were alone, and he had promptly possessed himself of the widow's generous hand and told her the story of his lonely life and his longing for a home, provided she would preside over it.

"Oh, Ananias," she simpered. "I never dreamed—I never thought—oh!" she shrieked as Ananias imprinted a kiss on her work worn hand.

That evening Ananias called upon her and discussed their early marriage.

"There's only one obstacle to a fancy wedding," said Ananias when Em Bevis had outlined a plan for the ceremony to take place in the Baptist church, with her little niece as flower girl and white satin ribbons festooned from the tops of the pews.

"And that is?" asked Em in a disappointed tone.

"My landlady."

"Hetty Rowell? My land, you ain't engaged to her, be you?" inquired the widow sharply.

"Not if I know it," said Ananias cautiously, "but somehow I never know where I stand with Widow Rowell, Em! I swan I never proposed marriage to her in my life, but half the time she talks like she was engaged to me. I wish we could be married in a few days," added Ananias.

"But what's your hurry?" protested Em. "I'd like a chance to make some wedding clothes and get ready!"

"I know it, my love," cooed Ananias in her ear, "but I am afraid of the Widow Rowell. Great blizzards, I am! I talk in my sleep, you know. What if she should hear me saying something about you! It would be all up in the air!"

By the time Ananias went home he had persuaded his fiancee that she could select a very presentable trousseau from the stock of her own department store; so, relieved of this momentous question, Em agreed to elope with Ananias on the following Thursday, and Ananias wrote a note to the Rev. Josiah Twigg apprising him of the coming event and asking him to consider the matter as entirely confidential.

That night Ananias let himself into his boarding place and tiptoed up to his room with unusual caution. One never knew when the Widow Rowell would pounce out. And one never knew in what part of the house she was seeking a night's repose. She had a pleasantly careless custom of taking prospective guests through her spacious old house and permitting them to choose whatever room suited the moment's fancy, provided it was disengaged. As for herself, she slept around as fancy dictated—one night the west front chamber appealed to her, for she loved to hear the roar of the waves on the beach; the next night it might be a small hall room for the moment unoccupied that would tickle her restless impulse.

What Ananias did not know was that on this particular evening the widow had been approached by the proprietor of the Quince Harbor hotel and asked to accommodate a half dozen guests for whom he could find no room until the following day. Mrs. Rowell sweetly assented and gathered up her own belongings and carried them into a tiny room next to the room of Ananias Sline. Here she dropped her weary limbs upon a most uncomfortable cot and slept.

The sound of the softly closed front door aroused her. If that was Ananias Sline tiptoeing in at such a late hour she would have a serious talk with him in the morning. Either he had been courting—and that was not to be allowed, for Hetty Rowell felt that she had a prior right to the affections of Mr. Sline—or he had been to lodge meeting, and as it wasn't lodge night—why, he must have been courting! So there the widow's logical mind calculated the matter, as we know, quite correctly.

She dozed off to sleep again and awoke to the resounding snores of Mr. Sline in the next room.

"Drat him!" she muttered, turning over. But she could not sleep again. She got to thinking about Ananias and where he had spent the evening, and she decided that it was Em Bevis who had captured him.

She was convinced of it when Ananias ceased snoring and fell to talking, as was his habit when the day had been an exciting one.

"Ahem!" babbled Ananias. "Ahem, next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock! My dear Mr. Twigg, would you perform a most interesting service for me? Of course I shall wear a white flower in my coat—ahem! I'm not afraid—no, siree! I, Ananias, take thee, Em Bevis—no; that's not right. Em—Em—Emma—or Emmaline—ah!" Mr. Sline resorted to snoring once more, and the widow, now thoroughly awake to the perfidy of her star boarder, sat up in bed and fell to planning.

When the Widow Rowell fell to planning—well, things usually happened.

For an entire week she watched and waited and listened and peeked and pried, and when Thursday evening drew around she was possessed in some mysterious manner of most of the details of the approaching elopement. She knew that Hep Riddle's buggy had been engaged and that Hep was to harness the sorrel horse, although Hep Riddle himself didn't know what Ananias Sline wanted to do with a buggy.

By Thursday evening Ananias Sline was shivering with nervous dread. He had a feeling that in some way or other his elopement would be frustrated. Time and again he had found the Widow Rowell's wits could outmatch his own, but so far as he knew not a soul was aware of the approaching marriage save the prospective bride, the minister and himself.

Ananias ate scarcely any supper, although Mrs. Rowell had prepared his favorite dish of oyster stew. She sat opposite him and blinked her eyes at him until he gulped down a huge cup of scalding hot tea and bolted away from the table.

"Little dear!" murmured the widow with a strange smile on her face.

Ananias locked himself into his room and made an elaborate if hasty toilet. After many maneuvers he let himself out and managed to escape by the back hall door. There was no sign of the widow, and he hoped she had gone to call upon one of her cronies. It would be ill luck indeed if she had taken it into her head to call upon Em Bevis, though the two rivals were not the best of friends since Ananias came between them.

Still, the Widow Rowell was apt to do the most baffling things.

Ananias hurried to Riddle's stables and climbed into the buggy which a grinning negro had prepared for him. He drove rapidly out of the yard, nearly losing a wheel in the turn, for he was not a skillful driver.

Quince Harbor folks are inquisitive and prone to mind each other's business to a most annoying degree; therefore it had been decided that Em Bevis was to wait for Ananias in Whippoorwill lane by the brook. He would catch her up into the vehicle, and away they would go to Big Harbor.

Whippoorwill lane was there, and so was Em Bevis, for Ananias recognized the white veil she was to wear about her uncovered head.

He pressed her hand and received a tender pressure in return. After that they rode in silence through the woods toward Big Harbor.

At last they reached the main street of Big Harbor, and the sorrel horse chose to gallop madly until Ananias, sawing at the reins, managed to bring him to a stop before the gate of the parsonage.

"Belay there!" yelled the little ex-sailor angrily just as the minister opened the front door and stepped into the porch to meet them.

The prospective bride got out unaided while Ananias was tying the sorrel horse and she was inside the house by the time Ananias had reached the gate.

When Ananias Sline reached the parlor, where stood the beaming clergyman and his smiling wife and a couple of servants for witnesses, he stood in the doorway aghast at the sight that met his amazed eyes. The bride was there—a bride was there, indeed, but not the one he had so carefully chosen! Standing there in the modest splendor of a gray satin dress hurriedly garnished with white lace and bunches of artificial orange blossoms was the Widow—Rowell!

Em Bevis was nowhere to be seen.

Somehow he had been tricked by the artful widow whom he had at first courted, only to leave when a better chance presented itself. Surely retribution was close upon the heels of Ananias Sline!

"We are waiting, Mr. Sline," reminded Mr. Twigg, smiling benevolently.

"Dear Ananias!" cooed Hetty Rowell, fixing her agate colored eyes upon him.

Ananias moved forward mechanically. There seemed nothing else to do. Things were hideously mixed and a bitter fate seemed to have driven him straight into the arms of the Widow Rowell. He felt that she had outwitted him again—never more would he try to get the best of her. He would admit defeat. As for Em Bevis, what could he do about it now without creating a scandal that would shake the three villages to the core?

Nothing!

So Ananias went forward and was joined in the bonds of holy matrimony to Hetty Rowell. When the ceremony was over Mrs. Twigg congratulated them warmly.

"It's the oddest thing," she babbled, "but Josiah and I really thought the bride—we understood it was to be another. We are quite surprised!"

"So are we!" smiled Mrs. Ananias Sline as she took her husband's arm and went down to the waiting buggy and the impatient sorrel horse.

Somebody tossed an old shoe after them for luck and it struck Ananias right in the back of the neck, so that he uttered an explosive blast of profanity that caused the minister and his wife to close their front door hurriedly.

But the Widow Rowell—I mean Mrs. Ananias Sline—merely smiled compassionately, as if she knew that her husband had just cause for exasperation.

SALUTING MOUNT VERNON.

A Tribute of Respect to the Memory of Washington.

When the Mayflower, bearing the French commissioners to the United States up the Potomac to Washington, passed Mount Vernon we were told by the newspapers that the crew of the vessel were drawn up at salute and the ship's bell was tolled. Marshal Joffre was particularly touched by this ceremonial, and as the yacht passed on up the river he walked to the stern and stood silently watching the old mansion until it was hidden from view.

What the newspapers did not tell us and what many Americans do not know is that the ceremony that so impressed our distinguished visitors has been for a great many years prescribed by the naval regulations. No United States ship of war may pass Mount Vernon without paying that tribute of respect to the memory of Washington.

As the vessel approaches the beautiful old place the commander orders the bugler to "Sound to quarters." The crew, officers and men hurry to their places, the word passes to form along the side of the ship that faces Mount Vernon and to stand at attention. As the ship comes abreast of the mansion, the command "Salute!" rings out. Every man raises his right hand to his cap and holds it there while the ship's bell tolls twenty-one times, once for each gun of the national salute.

"Sound the retreat!" comes the order as the last stroke of the bell trembles into silence, and the bugle sends its plaintive notes across the water to the tree clad slopes of Mount Vernon, from which the echo faithfully repeats them to the ship.

It is a charming ceremony, simple, yet indescribably moving, no matter how often one sees it.

Deaths From Athletic Sports.

Dr. Robert E. Coughlin of New York city, writing in the New York Medical Journal, says 943 lives were sacrificed on the fields of athletic sport in the ten years ending with, but not including, the year 1916.

"Baseball heads the list with 284 fatalities," he says. "Football is second with 215, auto racing third with 128, boxing fourth with 105. Seventy-seven cyclers and fifty-four jockeys lost their lives, fifteen wrestlers perished on the mat, fourteen persons lost their lives playing golf, nine were killed at bowling and one died while playing lawn tennis."

Influence of America.

It is a fact that no matter how backward, how crude, how ignorant, how illiterate, are the workers and aliens who come to your shops something in the American life and environments puts a civic intelligence and sense of independence into the workers which every executive must understand and co-operate with.—Meyer Bloomfield in Industrial Management.

Fighters.

Nearly all successful business men possess fighting qualities. Commodore Vanderbilt was a fighter. Harriman, Hill and Morgan were fighters. Men who aspire to do big things must have daring, must have courage, must have self confidence. They must be prepared to accept risks. They must exhibit boldness when others show timidity.

How She Changed.

"I suppose the young men do not regard Miss Barrowcliff as so handsome now that her father has lost his money."

"Well, they don't think she has such a fine figure as she once had."

His Nerve.

"The floorwalker called me down for being late this mornin'."

"He's got a nerve expectin' us girls to dance till 3 in the mornin' and get here at 8."

Velvet.

Velvet was developed and originated in China. Thence velvet making was introduced into India and in the fourteenth century into Italy, where that sort of fabric especially appealed and where the art of velvet making reached its height. It is said that velvet was first inspired by fur and that it was in order to make a silken fabric on the same order as the fur that man first set his wits about to invent this.

Encouraging Outlook.

"Well, old man, how are you getting along with your poultry raising? Making expenses?"

"Not yet, but my hens have taken to eating their own eggs, so I hope that they will soon become self supporting."

Similar Sport.

"We have nothing like the terrible bullfights in Spain."

"What's the matter with the awful bullfights in Wall street?"

Needed Repairs.

"Do you have running water in your new homes?"

"Well, we do whenever it rains."

ITALIAN LINES VIGOROUSLY ATTACKED

ENEMY IS MAKING A SUPREME EFFORT

Foe Making Supreme Effort To Reach The Venetian Plains

General Conrad's Austrians Have Been Battering Unceasingly Against the Italian Lines Since Saturday and Further Assaults Are Expected ---Little News Reported From the British on French Fronts in the West.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Henry Wood.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN ITALY, December 26.—The Teutons are making their last supreme effort to reach the Venetian Plains today before winter irrevocably checks all operations. Since Saturday General Conrad's Austrians have been battering unceasingly against the Italian lines.

It is confidentially expected his assault west of the Brenta will be followed quickly by a new assault by Generals Grauss and Below, east of the same river—particular around Bont Grappa where the Austro-Germans are now freshly concentrating.

The battle as thus developing will decide whether the Italians will be able to maintain their present positions until spring. Snow and ice are already checking the offensive possibilities through all the mountain region. The winter, nevertheless, continues unseasonably open. As yet there is no sign of heavy snow having fallen in the mountains, yet passes are gradually being covered with a mantle sufficient within a week or ten days or more to check the enemy's operations. Already a snow fall has curtailed the bringing up of food to such an extent that the enemy has been forced to substitute for massed attacks a drive of special troops, carrying emergency rations. These forces fight until relieved by others like themselves carrying equipment for four days' service.

The fighting to-day is the culminating decisive stroke of the past two months' operation. The credit to date is with the Italians in the struggle. Enemy prisoners unanimously declare the vigorous Italian resistance has already forced the Teutonic staffs to abandon their original plan to establish a military and political front from the Trent to Venice. They are contenting themselves now with the mere hope of reaching the Venetian plains before a defeat—and by defeat they mean the necessity of a winter campaign in the ice and snow covered summits of the Alps. The allies are determined not to permit the Austro-Germans even to reach the dominating summits of Asiago and Grappa. The Austrian-German decision to accent their present front for the whole winter has been further indicated by their feverish fortifications of the Piave into a permanent front, while all offensive efforts are concentrated against Grappa to improve permanent positions there. The resistance of the Italian first army at Asiago equals that exhibited by the fourth army in its recapture of Asolone last week. These two examples of splendid courage and fighting ability give Allied officers the highest hopes of the Italians' ability to pin down the enemy to his present positions. The tenacity of the Teutonic assault against Monte Grappa resembles strikingly the German assault on Verdun. German prisoners declared this is to be explained in the German staff's opinion that Grappa constitutes the "Achilles heel" of Italy at which next spring the Austro-German's hope to deliver a fatal drive.

LONDON, December 26.—Monday's British air raid on the German city of Mannheim was the first instance of an exact reprisal policy for the Hun air murders over England, according to announcement to-day. It was the first air raid carried out by the British flyers which did not aim at purely military objectives. All London newspapers expressed satisfaction at the actual carrying out of the policy of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" reprisal announced by Premier Lloyd George in October, and on December 14, reiterated by Lord Rothermore, the British Air Minister, in his Gray's Inn speech.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, December 26.—Finland has asked Germany to recognize her independence, according to reports which reached here to-day from Brest-Litovsk.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES, December 26.—Fierce fighting between Boso and Monte Vobella was in progress to-day. Despite violent Italian attacks, the enemy at fearful cost, still held to the two-thirds of a mile gain which they achieved Monday. The enemy's advance was made possible by an immense concentration of enemy artillery of all calibres which smashed the Italian front lines. The Austrians managed to pinch off a tiny salient, the apex of which was at Monte Vobella. On the next attack the enemy consolidated this position. Around Monte Grappa the enemy tried an attack timed to coincide with the Vobella assault, but failed to gain. On the lower Piave the Austrians vainly endeavoured to fraternize, but were answered by Italian machine gun fire.

LONDON, December 26.—There was nothing special to report on the British front in France yesterday, says the official statement issued to-day by the War Office.

PETROGRAD, December 26.—Germany has asked the postponement of peace negotiations until January 24, according to a semi-official announcement here to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, December 26.—Frank belief that the Bolsheviki regime will not be able to retain its grip on Russia after forcing through a separate peace with Germany, was expressed by the Bolsheviki Minister Vorovsky to-day. "The Bolsheviki will never conclude an undemocratic peace," he told the United Press. "The war will be continued if Germany insists on a policy of annexations."

"We still hope that general peace negotiations will be possible.

"We will fight defensively until a general democratic peace is achieved.

"I admit we do not intend and will be unable to remain in power after peace." Vorovsky flatly denied the reports that German agents were in Petrograd financing the Bolsheviki.

"The Bolsheviki do not need German money," he declared. "We are printing all that is necessary."

Arrivals from Petrograd to-day reported a strong monarchist movement developing in the Russian capital, supported by some cadets and German agents.

LOCAL DRAFTEES RECEIVE ORDERS TO REPORT FOR DUTY

Christmas Mail Brought Instructions to Available Men of Class One to Present Themselves For Service at Kingston on January 3rd

WILL TRAIN THERE

The Christmas mail yesterday morning carried unusual Noel-tide gifts for a number of Peterborough young men in the shape of official orders to report for duty under the Military Service Act on Thursday, 3rd January, 1918, at Kingston.

A few of these orders arrived on Monday, but the majority were received on Christmas morning. Just how many were issued in Peterborough has not been given out.

The order to report for duty reads as follows:

"You are ordered to report for duty at the headquarters of the Depot Battalion at Kingston.

"Failure to obey this order will render you liable to punishment by the civic courts, as well as making you subject to be taken into custody at any time as a military offender.

"You will retain this portion of the order and will present it upon your reporting at the headquarters of the Depot Battalion. Keep it carefully as your means of identification."

Accompanying the order is a warrant for transportation.

Apparently the draftees for No. 3 Military District will undergo their preliminary training before going overseas at Kingston, as all local men called up under the Act have been ordered to report in that city.

Bonus For The Employees Of The Bonner-Worth

On Saturday last the employees of The Bonner-Worth Company Limited received a very welcome Christmas box from the Management.

Every employee at the above factory received a special Christmas bonus of 20 per cent of their previous week's pay.

The gift was appreciated very much by the help and shows the cordial and co-operative spirit existing between the management and help at The Bonner-Worth Company, Limited.

LOCAL BOY IS MISSING

Flight Lieut. Fred Cressman of the Royal Naval Air Service is Believed To Have Been Drowned

CABLE FROM ADMIRALTY

In the midst of the Christmas festivities at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, Brock street, last evening, came a cablegram from the Admiralty containing the sad message that their younger son, Flight Lieutenant Fred Cressman of the Royal Naval Air Service, is reported missing and believed to have been drowned. No particulars were given in the official message, the news of which will be a shock to a very large circle of friends.

Flight Lieutenant Cressman trained as an aviator at a training school in the United States, and was then awarded a commission in the Royal Naval Air Service. He was on duty for some time and then was invalided home on sick leave. He left Peterborough to report for service again only a few weeks ago, in company with Flight Lieut. Leslie Stevens of the Royal Naval Air Service, and Lieut. Wilfrid Stratton of the Royal Flying Corps, both of whom had also been home on furlough.

Lieut. Cressman was widely known in Peterborough, where he has lived most of his life, and it is hoped that better news will be received in the near future.

20,000 In First Draft

Officers in Charge of Mobilization and Training of Drafts Will Be Men Who Have Seen Service Overseas

REPORT ON JAN. 3rd

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 26. — The first draft of Class A under the Military Service Act will be required to report at various divisional headquarters on Thursday January 3rd. All preparations have been made to receive, equip and train the men of the new drafts, and about 20,000 is the number expected to be ready by the date set. Twelve battalion depots with accommodation for 2,000 men each, and with headquarters corresponding with the headquarters of twelve military divisions and districts have been established. The officers in charge of mobilization and training will so far as possible be men who have seen active service overseas.

It is stated here that all uniforms and equipments necessary to fit out the new draft immediately are ready and that no time will be lost getting down to intensive training at once. The new men who are destined to provide reinforcements for battalions overseas will be gathered territorially and will be disposed overseas according to territorial arrangement at present in force. That is men who have been drafted in the Toronto, Kingston, Winnipeg or other divisions will go to reinforce regiments whose natal division was Toronto, Kingston or Winnipeg, as the case may be. No official figures are as yet available as to the number of men secured in the various districts under the first draft.

The proportional numbers vary considerably in various districts. In some a great many appeals lodged by military representatives of the tribunals are still pending—in others many appeals lodged by the men themselves for exemption are still to be heard. Out of 400,000 men estimated to come under the first class about half have been found to be medically fit for service. Of these it is estimated that at least half will receive exemption for various causes.

The drafts will be called without much consideration for the numbers already sent under the voluntary system for particular districts. The reason for this is that it is not expected that the first class will supply much more than 160,000 required. This being so the district which has still the most unmarried men available will provide the most for the draft.

FLIGHT LIEUT. FRED CRESSMAN—A Peterborough member of the Royal Naval Air Service, who is reported missing and believed drowned. The sad news reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, last evening.

INFLUENCE OF THE BOLSHEVIKI IS ON THE WANE

Defection From the Organization is Growing Steadily and There is a Tremendous Opposition to Present Regime Among All Classes

TROOPS ARE MUTINOUS

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 26.—There have been occasional assertions in recent Petrograd despatches that the influence and power of the Bolsheviki was waning, but never with such unanimity as in special despatches dated from the Russian capital Sunday and printed today. Nearly all make the point in one form or other that defection from workmen's and soldiers' organization is growing constantly. Among the causes alleged are the general lack of authority, the increase in drunkenness, the reluctance of the population to work and the scarcity of foodstuffs. The main desire of the soldiers is said to be for peace. The correspondents cite instances of Bolsheviki troops refusing to march, declining to attack Ukrainians and permitting the Cossacks to disarm them without resistance. The Bolsheviki leaders, the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post says, appear to be becoming conscious of hopeless failure, while the correspondent of the Daily News writes that there is tremendous and growing opposition to the Bolsheviki among all classes. Men who formerly supported them are turning against them, and German hirelings is a common term of denunciation.

Lieut. Flower Is Killed

Mr. John Allan, Brock Street, received a cable last night from Captain William Charles, saying Lieut. Fred G. Flower of the R. F. C., had been killed in action. Lieut. Flower had made many friends in Peterborough, having been a frequent visitor before the war, and they will deeply regret the death of a young man of such brilliant attainments and so fine a character.

BOYCOTT AGAINST ONTARIO THOUGHT TO BE POSSIBILITY

Le Canada Prints Significant Despatch From Ottawa in Which Likelihood of This Action on the Part of Quebec is Foreshadowed

DOESN'T NEED SYMPATHY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.— A commercial boycott against Ontario is a possibility according to a despatch from Ottawa in Le Canada this morning. Here is what the despatch says: 'The Francoeur motion has its raison d'etre, it sets it up to us to say to Ontario or the other English provinces, "If you find we are a nuisance we will leave Confederation."

No, Quebec has a great deal more practical means at its disposal to make it felt that it counts for something in Confederation, and it would need but one concerted move on the part of all our large business establishments to bring the Orange hot heads back to their senses.

On the day after the election I had a talk with a business man of Toronto and he did not hide his fears lest "French money" should be diverted from Ontario elsewhere. Therein lies Quebec's last resource to bring back to their senses, those fools whom the "Union" government used as catspaws to serve its own vile ends. "Certain newspapers speak of sympathy for Quebec. Let them make a laughing stock of themselves. Quebec needs sympathy from no one. On the contrary, Quebec can boast of being the province which possesses the best government of them all. It possesses the greatest amount of natural resources: it is the only province whose annual budget shows a surplus; it is the only one that can meet its obligations as they fall due, and it is the only one with a bilingual population.

"Lord Shaughnessy, who knows the French Canadians as well as Anglo-Saxons, never failed to proclaim that the French Canadians are an honour to Confederation and to the Empire. Testimony from such source more than compensates for the insults which the Union Cabinet may cause to be

The expiration at noon to-day of the time prescribed for the confirmation of the candidatures of the nominees for municipal service returned the above list for the elections on New Year's Day.

Mr. George H. Duncan is Peterborough's Mayor-elect for 1918. The only other candidate nominated on Monday was ex-Ald. G. Walter Green, who has declined to enter the Mayoralty race. Alderman Duncan's election is, therefore, tendered him by acclamation. His elevation to the Chief Magistracy of the city is a fitting reward to the faithful service he has rendered during his long aldermanic experience. He accepts the Mayor's mantle with the determination to maintain the efficiency that has characterized the civic administration for more than a decade, and may feel confident of the support and the best wishes of the ratepayers.

The Aldermanic Contest.

Two wards have already chosen their representatives to the Council. Ald. Langford received his appointment from the north ward on nomination day, when his name was the only one proposed.

The west ward will stage no contest on election day as the result of the withdrawal of all the proposed candidates except Mr. Robt. N. Jones, who thereby became Alderman Jones by acclamation.

"Pshaw, I'd just a soon had a contest" he remarked at noon when he was informed of his election.

The citizens who declined nominations in the west ward were W. C. Austin, Frank H. Dawson, R. G. Sturgeon, H. Phelan and G. Walter Green.

Contested Wards.

There will be contests in the other wards. In the south the ballots will present the names of Joseph Saunders, whose present aldermanic term expires on Dec. 31, Mr. John J. Turner who has had aldermanic service and Mr. George T. Dryland. Ald. Weir will be opposed in the east by Mr. T. W. Oke, and in the centre ward Ald. Stratton finds himself lined up against ex-Ald. John Edgar, Mr. C. E. Adams and Mr. E. F. Mason have retired respectively from the east and centre wards.

STOCKHOLM, December 26.—Frank belief that the Bolsheviki regime will not be able to retain its grip on Russia after forcing through a separate peace with Germany, was expressed by the Bolsheviki Minister Vorovsky to-day. "The Bolsheviki will never conclude an undemocratic peace," he told the United Press. "The war will be continued if Germany insists on a policy of annexations."

"We still hope that general peace negotiations will be possible.

"We will fight defensively until a general democratic peace is achieved.

"I admit we do not intend and will be unable to remain in power after peace." Vorovsky flatly denied the reports that German agents were in Petrograd financing the Bolsheviki.

"The Bolsheviki do not need German money," he declared. "We are printing all that is necessary."

Arrivals from Petrograd to-day reported a strong monarchist movement developing in the Russian capital, supported by some cadets and German agents.

LOCAL DRAFTEES RECEIVE ORDERS TO REPORT FOR DUTY

Christmas Mail Brought Instructions to Available Men of Class One to Present Themselves For Service at Kingston on January 3rd

WILL TRAIN THERE

The Christmas mail yesterday morning carried unusual Noel-tide gifts for a number of Peterborough young men in the shape of official orders to report for duty under the Military Service Act on Thursday, 3rd January, 1918, at Kingston.

A few of these orders arrived on Monday, but the majority were received on Christmas morning. Just how many were issued in Peterborough has not been given out.

The order to report for duty reads as follows:

"You are ordered to report for duty at the headquarters of the Depot Battalion at Kingston.

"Failure to obey this order will render you liable to punishment by the civic courts, as well as making you subject to be taken into custody at any time as a military offender.

"You will retain this portion of the order and will present it upon your reporting at the headquarters of the Depot Battalion. Keep it carefully as your means of identification."

Accompanying the order is a warrant for transportation.

Apparently the draftees for No. 3 Military District will undergo their preliminary training before going overseas at Kingston, as all local men called up under the Act have been ordered to report in that city.

Bonus For The Employees Of The Bonner-Worth

On Saturday last the employees of The Bonner-Worth Company Limited received a very welcome Christmas box from the Management.

Every employee at the above factory received a special Chistmas bonus of 20 per cent of their previous week's pay.

The gift was appreciated very much by the help and shows the cordial and co-operative spirit existing between the management and help at The Bonner-Worth Company, Limited.

LOCAL BOY IS MISSING

Flight Lieut. Fred Cressman of the Royal Naval Air Service is Believed To Have Been Drowned

CABLE FROM ADMIRALTY

In the midst of the Christmas festivities at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, Brock street, last evening, came a cablegram from the Admiralty containing the sad message that their younger son, Flight Lieutenant Fred Cressman of the Royal Naval Air Service, is reported missing and believed to have been drowned. No particulars were given in the official message, the news of which will be a shock to a very large circle of friends.

Flight Lieutenant Cressman trained as an aviator at a training school in the United States, and was then awarded a commission in the Royal Naval Air Service. He was on duty for some time and then was invalided home on sick leave. He left Peterborough to report for service again only a few weeks ago, in company with Flight Lieut. Leslie Stevens of the Royal Naval Air Service, and Lieut. Wilfrid Stratton of the Royal Flying Corps, both of whom had also been home on furlough.

Lieut. Cressman was widely known in Peterborough, where he has lived most of his life, and it is hoped that better news will be received in the near future.

20,000 In First Draft

Officers in Charge of Mobilization and Training of Drafts Will Be Men Who Have Seen Service Overseas

REPORT ON JAN. 3rd

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 26. — The first draft of Class A under the Military Service Act will be required to report at various divisional headquarters on Thursday January 3rd. All preparations have been made to receive, equip and train the men of the new drafts, and about 20,000 is the number expected to be ready by the date set. Twelve battalion depots with accommodation for 2,000 men each, and with headquarters corresponding with the headquarters of twelve military divisions and districts have been established. The officers in charge of mobilization and training will so far as possible be men who have seen active service overseas.

It is stated here that all uniforms and equipments necessary to fit out the new draft immediately are ready and that no time will be lost getting down to intensive training at once. The new men who are destined to provide reinforcements for battalions overseas will be gathered territorially and will be disposed overseas according to territorial arrangement at present in force. That is men who have been drafted in the Toronto, Kingston, Winnipeg or other divisions will go to reinforce regiments whose natal division was Toronto, Kingston or Winnipeg, as the case may be. No official figures are as yet available as to the number of men secured in the various districts under the first draft.

The proportional numbers vary considerably in various districts. In some a great many appeals lodged by military representatives of the tribunals are still pending—in others many appeals lodged by the men themselves for exemption are still to be heard. Out of 400,000 men estimated to come under the first class about half have been found to be medically fit for service. Of these it is estimated that at least half will receive exemption for various causes.

The drafts will be called without much consideration for the numbers already sent under the voluntary system for particular districts. The reason for this is that it is not expected that the first class will supply much more than 100,000 required. This being so the district which has still the most unmarried men available will provide the most for the draft.

FLIGHT LIEUT. FRED CRESSMAN—A Peterborough member of the Royal Naval Air Service, who is reported missing and believed drowned. The sad news reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, last evening.

INFLUENCE OF THE BOLSHEVIKI IS ON THE WANE

Defection From the Organization is Growing Steadily and There is a Tremendous Opposition to Present Regime Among All Classes

TROOPS ARE MUTINOUS

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 26.—There have been occasional assertions in recent Petrograd despatches that the influence and power of the Bolsheviki was waning, but never with such unanimity as in special despatches dated from the Russian capital Sunday and printed today. Nearly all make the point in one form or other that defection from workmen's and soldiers' organization is growing constantly. Among the causes alleged are the general lack of authority, the increase in drunkenness, the reluctance of the population to work and the scarcity of foodstuffs. The main desire of the soldiers is said to be for peace. The correspondents cite instances of Bolsheviki troops refusing to march, declining to attack Ukrainians and permitting the Cossacks to disarm them without resistance. The Bolsheviki leaders, the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post says, appear to be becoming conscious of hopeless failure, while the correspondent of the Daily News writes that there is tremendous and growing opposition to the Bolsheviki among all classes. Men who formerly supported them are turning against them, and German hirelings is a common term of denunciation.

Lieut. Flower Is Killed

Mr. John Allan, Brock Street, received a cable last night from Captain William Charles, saying Lieut. Fred G. Flower of the R. F. C., had been killed in action. Lieut. Flower had made many friends in Peterborough, having been a frequent visitor before the war, and they will deeply regret the death of a young man of such brilliant attainments and so fine a character.

BOYCOTT AGAINST ONTARIO THOUGHT TO BE POSSIBILITY

Le Canada Prints Significant Despatch From Ottawa in Which Likelihood of This Action on the Part of Quebec is Foreshadowed

DOESN'T NEED SYMPATHY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.— A commercial boycott against Ontario is a possibility according to a despatch from Ottawa in Le Canada this morning. Here is what the despatch says: 'The Francoeur motion has its raison d'etre, it sets it up to us to say to Ontario or the other English provinces, "If you find we are a nuisance we will leave Confederation."

No, Quebec has a great deal more practical means at its disposal to make it felt that it counts for something in Confederation, and it would need but one concerted move on the part of all our large business establishments to bring the Orange hot heads back to their senses.

On the day after the election I had a talk with a business man of Toronto and he did not hide his fears lest "French money" should be diverted from Ontario elsewhere. Therein lies Quebec's last resource to bring back to their senses, those fools whom the "Union" government used as catspaws to serve its own vile ends. "Certain newspapers speak of sympathy for Quebec. Let them make a laughing stock of themselves. Quebec needs sympathy from no one. On the contrary, Quebec can boast of being the province which possesses the best government of them all. It possesses the greatest amount of natural resources; it is the only province whose annual budget shows a surplus; it is the only one that can meet its obligations as they fall due, and it is the only one with a bilingual population.

"Lord Shaughnessy, who knows the French Canadians as well as Anglo-Saxons, never failed to proclaim that the French Canadians are an honour to Confederation and to the Empire.

Testimony from such source more than compensates for the insults which the Union Cabinet may cause to be

The expiration at noon to-day of the time prescribed for the confirmation of the candidatures of the nominees for municipal service returned the above list for the elections on New Year's Day.

Mr. George H. Duncan is Peterborough's Mayor-elect for 1918. The only other candidate nominated on Monday was ex-Ald. G. Walter Green, who has declined to enter the Mayoralty race. Alderman Duncan's election is, therefore, tendered him by acclamation. His elevation to the Chief Magistracy of the city is a fitting reward to the faithful service he has rendered during his long aldermanic experience. He accepts the Mayor's mantle with the determination to maintain the efficiency that has characterized the civic administration for more than a decade, and may feel confident of the support and the best wishes of the ratepayers.

The Aldermanic Contest.

Two wards have already chosen their representatives to the Council. Ald. Langford received his appointment from the north ward on nomination day, when his name was the only one proposed.

The west ward will stage no contest on election day as the result of the withdrawal of all the proposed candidates except Mr. Robt. N. Jones, who thereby became Alderman Jones by acclamation.

"Pshaw, I'd just as soon had a contest" he remarked at noon when he was informed of his election.

The citizens who declined nominations in the west ward were W. C. Austin, Frank H. Dawson, E. G. Sturgeon, H. Phelan and G. Walter Green.

Contested Wards.

There will be contests in the other wards. In the south the ballots will present the names of Joseph Saunders, whose present aldermanic term expires on Dec. 31, Mr. John J. Turner who has had aldermanic service and Mr. George T. Dryland. Ald. Weir will be opposed in the east by Mr. T. W. Oke, and in the centre ward Ald. Stratton finds himself lined up against ex-Ald. John Edgar, Mr. C. E. Adams and Mr. E. F. Mason have retired respectively from the east and centre wards.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

The election by acclamation of Alderman Duncan as Mayor and the retirement of candidates in West Ward, permitting acclamation as alderman to Mr. R. N. Jones—Mr. Edgar Worth having another year to complete his two-year term—considerably simplifies the work of the electors on 1st January, but still imposes the duty of careful selection of aldermen in the remaining three wards, the West and North having gone by acclamation.

Mayor Duncan is to be personally congratulated upon receiving the great honour and responsibility of the Mayoralty by acclamation; and the city is to be congratulated upon having secured his services. Though the coming year presents municipal problems requiring special ability for their solution, there is excellent reason to think that Mayor Duncan, by virtue of his especially valuable experiences and varied services as an alderman, will be able, by the help of a good Council, to measure up to the demands of the occasion. He has always shown himself a conscientious, careful, and painstaking alderman, and there is reason to feel confident that, with similar conditions applied to the discharge of his duties as Mayor he will give Peterborough effective and valuable service.

There was an embarrassment of candidates for membership of the Board of Education, an evidence of lively interest in the very important matter of our educational affairs; but the retirement of eight candidates cuts the list in half. In the case of school trustees, the whole body of electors will have the opportunity of voting for the whole five to be selected out of the eight candidates, who will consequently represent the whole city electorate and not a fractional part of it.

This suggests another very important question to be decided on 1st January. The electors will be required to vote for the present system of electing aldermen, by wards or by the general vote of the ratepayer, as in the case of Mayor and members of the Board of Education. On 1st January every qualified elector can vote on this qestion, while, in the matter of aldermen, they will be elected by the restricted vote of the ward for which they are nominated. Which is the better way, the limited vote under the ward system or the universal vote, is for the people to decide. Under the ward system, each alderman is elected by, and practically represents, only two-tenths of the electors. The other eight-tenths of the electors are virtually disfranchised—have no voice in choosing eight of the ten aldermen who are put into the Council to do their business. If the ward system is the best, why not apply it to the election of members of the Board of Education? But few, however, would wish to change; for the general vote in electing members of the Board of Education has resulted in the past in providing members of exceptional quality of character and ability.

The people will also be called upon to vote in favour of granting to the De Laval Company part of an unused street—and with no prospect of ever being opened—as a site for adding to the already splendid group of buildings of the company, to meet the demands of their expanding business. The electors in granting the company the use of a part of this street for building purposes will not add a cent to the financial liabilities of the city. They will, however, be maintaining the reputation the city has gained abroad for fair and generous recognition and appreciation of our important industries. The company has kept literal faith with Peterborough. It has far exceeded its promises in relation to the erection of buildings and the employment of hands.

A company, which through the distribution of its products—"Made in Peterborough"—advertises the city all over the Dominion; contributes to the ready money circulation of the city $200,000 every year in the form of wages, and pays every year in school and special taxes one-tenth of the total amount of assistance it received from the city, deserves well at the hands of the ratepayers.

Australia is by no means out of the war because she gave a treasonable majority of 175,000 against conscription. There are more ways than one.

AN EXCELLENT SHOWING.

One of the features of the annual statement of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, just issued, that demands attention is the increase in assets by $65,947,683—to $344,573,232. Short loans, securities, etc., including advances by the bank to the Dominion and British governments, including advances for munitions purchased, show an increase of $29,354,260. This item alone indicates the important part played by the Bank of Commerce in financing the provision of munitions for the allied forces. The Bank's holdings of securities show a notable increase of ratio to its total assets—from 9.6 per cent. in 1916, to 16.2 per cent. in 1917. The total of commercial loans, $149,828,036, is an increase of $16,035,897 over the corresponding period a year ago, the total of commercial loans being the largest in its history, save 1912. The total represents 16.5 per cent. of the total current loans of the chartered bank of Canada.

A very satisfactory showing of the statement is that the liquid assets of the Bank of Commerce represent 53.3 per cent. of its liabilities, a very important feature in these times of unsettlement. The net profits of $2,657,555 represent 9.2 per cent. of combined capital and reserve. On the whole the Bank's situation, in all regards, is very satisfactory and adds another triumph to its great achievements from year to year.

The pith of the phrase—"safe as the Bank of England"—might be imported into Canada, and the name of some

KEEP THE GOOD WORK GOING.

The government reports as to the out come of last season's campaign of home and vacant lots gardening, show that the campaign was a success.

While there may have been individual disappointments owing to inexperience in gardening or other causes, it must be admitted that the total yield of these small gardens represents a very important aggregate of contribution to the food supply of the country.

The immediate supply of families with abundance of fresh, wholesome vegetables is not the chief value of the small garden enterprise. It amounts to a saving of other foods, foods that are exportable, so that it helps meeting the most critical need, food for our allies, one of the conditions of victory.

We are, on this account, to economize on certain kinds of exportable foods so that we may have a larger exportable surplus. But we must eat, and if we save in these kinds of food, we must grow, in order to have, other kinds to take their place. The amount saved may seem unimportant, but seven and a half million people each saving a trifle, will contribute to a very considerable total. This saving can so effected by increased production and consumption of other forms of food, so that we may save beef and bacon and bread.

It seems, therefore, worth while to continue the home and small garden campaign. And it is none too early to renew the agitation. Spring will soon be here and timely preparation in the provision of fertilizers, seeds, etc., will contribute to greater success.

There is enough vacant soil in Canada, and of the best, if it were used profitably, to make Canada not only the granary of the Empire, but the bread basket of the world.

NONE TOO SOON.

The heading of a news paragraph in the Mail and Empire says: "Methodists sing Borden's praises." At Kitchener a Methodist congregation carried a standing vote of thanks to Sir Robert Borden because he had decreed prohibition. This is carrying votes of thanks, as well assumption, pretty far. In the order-in-council passed by the Union government bringing Dominion wide prohibition into force, we see, not the hand of Sir Robert Borden, but the hand of Hon. N. W. Rowell. He is the father of the Ontario Temperance Act, and what more natural than when he got the opportunity he should use his power and influence to make the Temperance Act right by forbidding importation from outside the province and extending prohibition to the whole country.

Sir Robert had three years in which the war and its needs demonstrated the duty of enforcing prohibition—to arrest the waste of manhood and the waste of food in manufacturing, the cause of the waste of manhood and national energy. Sir Robert Borden could, any day these past three years, by a stroke of the pen, have brought prohibition. But he was afraid. Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario License Board, speaking at a church jubilation in Lindsay, said we could not have had prohibition without the Union government—"no other government would have dared" to decree prohibition. Instead of Sir Robert Borden deserving credit, he is convicted by Mr. Flavelle of cowardice. He did not dare when he was at the head of a strongly supported government, provide prohibition. It was not, however, fear, but disinclination that restrained him. He knew, as we all know, that ever since the war began, the overwhelming sentiment of Canada was in favour of prohibition, both as a war measure and as a matter of right principle. By enacting prohibition, Sir Robert would have offended nobody but the traffic—the brewers and distillers and the big interests that were behind them.

Food Controller Hanna is satisfied with the price of oleomargarine in Canada. But he does not have to buy it and eat it at prices from 17 to 18 cents hifher than it can profitably be sold in the United States.

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS THAT MAY FACE THE NEXT PARLIAMENT

As has been suggested in various quarters the elections act by which the Borden Government was returned to power, is, on more than one ground, of very doubtful constitutionality.

A radical change was made in the electorate of Canada, an amendment of most far-reaching character to the franchise law of the land, by a Parliament whose life had been prolonged a full year beyond the constitutional term for the prosecution of the war and not for worse than gerrymandering and boodle. By Dominion law, before this Prussianism was engineered, all the women of those provinces in which the franshise had been given them were automatically Dominion voters also. Thousands of these women were set upon as by highway robbers and bludgeoned out of their legal votes, while a considerable number of women not residentially qualified were brought to the polls.

The franshise measure, which many of the Borden party's own better men regretted and only reluctantly indorsed, has no legal or moral justification whatever. It is throughout opposed to the fundamental spirit of our constitution and British traditions, and by the most rabid Bordenite can be approved only as "a bad means to a good end," the good end of putting back into the seats of power the friends of Robert Rogers on the one hand and the Lash-Mackenzie-Mann element on the other.

Years ago in Quebec, elections of Conservatives were voided on the ground of undue clerical intervention. Laurier had this to contend with at the outset of his career. But the clericals were compelled to forego these activities when the election of their favourites was thereby made impossible. In the election just over, the Liberals have had to contend against another form of illegality. Should not this illegality be tested, like the former, in the courts, and carried if necessary to the privy council?

It may be expected that a resolution will be moved, when Parliament assembles, to condemn the illegalities of the late election. From the result it will at once be seen how Liberal the new recruits of Bordenism really remain, or how far they have been painted over like Sir Thomas White. If the resolution fails to carry, the matter may not necessarily be dropped there. A test case might well be made of the election in any one constituency. It does not seem probable that the privy council, when fully informed on the whole question, would allow the post-mortem legislation of the late Parliament to be constitutional or legal. The privy council might find it hard to distinguish between the actions of King Constantine at Athens and the coup d'etat of Bordenism at Ottawa, Canada.—London Advertiser.

Christmas Enjoyed By S. A. Children

The annual Christmas entertainment at the Temple last night for the S .A. Sunday School children was a splendid success from every viewpoint. The entertainment, which was prepared by Guard Leader Mrs William Badley, was one of the spiciest and well ordered and conducted ever held in the Temple. The scholars who took part did exceedingly well indeed.

Presents were given by the teachers and Sunday School to all the children, together with some fruit and candies, which were delivered by Santa Claus.

Santa Claus came out of a grate in a mantel in the corner, and was preceded by Jack Frost, who amused the children very much by snowballing the chairman and then disappearing up the chimney.

Altogether the evening was a real enjoyable and profitable time. The building was packed to the doors.

Part of the programme will be repeated at the Junior meeting on Thursday night.

RADIUM PAINT BEING USED IN THE WARFARE

The value of radium paint and other luminous compounds in warfare is recognied by an English firm which is turning out numerous luminous devices for use at the front. Some of these are briefly described in "Metallurgical and Chemical Engineering." There is a night marching compass, of which more than 100,000 are being used by the allied armies; a linen collar beacon, which is merely a linen tab presenting a luminous surface of ten square inches, to be attached to the back of the tunic. Thus when the first line of men goes over the top they are not mistaken for enemies in the dark by the second line.

Spiked beacons made in the shape of large buttons (1 1-4 inches in diameter) have a luminous painted top covered with transparent celluloid and mounted on a small steel spike. Affixed to short wooden stakes driven in the ground about thirty feet apart, they afford a guide to relief parties going back and forth in the dark.

Luminous tape, particularly useful for night movements, is placed on the ground and secured by stakes or stones to prevent shifting by the wind. The account proceeds:

"The tape-layer places the tape in position during the day choosing a safe path across the country and diverting from the straight path according to the condition of the ground. The path should be wide enough for men to march four abreast in one side, say, in all about twelve fees wide. Where this is not possible, the tape layer makes a break in the tape every few yards, and starts again continuously when the path is wider. Any obstacle in the way, such as a tree or post, could have a small length of tape tied around it.

"But should a ditch come across the path he would lay short pieces of the tape at right angles on either side of the ditch; in case of the ditch being over four feet deep, the man should have a luminous beacon with him and write on it the depth of the ditch, also the width, with a special pencil, and place it by the tape when near the ditch.

"These luminous beacons have been used for signalling silently by night. They are specially useful in trenches which are in close proximity to the enemy, saving the need of whispering the words of command. . . . A No. 2 size beacon will carry a message a distance of 20 yards. . . The signalling can be either done with the Morse code or by describing large capital letters of the alphabet in the reverse way, and by the hand waving them in the air. The Royal Engineers were the first to use these devices.

"The tape is also very useful for R. A. M. C. worn—the tape layer by daylight choosing fairly level ground to guide the stretcher-bearers, thus saving their labour in the dark and less jolting to the wounded. Moreover, lamps afford a mark for the enemy, whereas the tape can be seen only by those immediately over it."

FIVE CARS OF COAL ARRIVED TO-DAY AND SHOULD COVER DEMAND

Five cars of "run of mine" coal were received in the city this morning and will be crushed and sold by the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company. The city had arranged to import ten cars and retail the coal, but "run of mine" is a variety that extends from pea or nut to wash tub sizes and entails considerable work to reduce it for furnace and stove uses. Mr. Wellock, of the Fuel and Cartage Company, agreed to assume the deliveries which will amount to ten cars or about four hundred tons, and will run the coal through the city's stone crusher, which Engineer Parsons is arranging to bring from the city's gravel pit to the company's yards on Aylmer street. The coal will be unscreened, but will be otherwise suitable for household purposes. Ald. Dobbin remarked this morning that it should relieve the present scarcity. He believed that it would prove altogether acceptable to the public.

SYMPATHY FROM THE KING AND QUEEN

Mrs. W. H. Blanchard has received the following letter of sympathy in connection with the death of her husband, Capt. W. H. Blanchard:

The King and Queen deeply regret to hear of the loss you and the army have sustained by the death of your husband in the service of his country, and I am commanded to convey to you the expression of Their Majesties' true sympathy with you in their sorrow.

Yours very truly,
Keeper of the Prime Purse.

AUSTRIAN CHILDREN SUFFERING.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 26.—Living proofs of the terrible economic conditions in Austria were furnished recently by the arrival of Bochs, on the frontier, of 576 pale and suffering children, between the ages of seven and nine. They are from Vienna and other Austrian towns. The children had not tasted milk for months. They had received bad bread in insufficient amounts, stomach diseases resulting. Their clothing was most scanty and there was no fuel in their homes.

SHUN WATER HEMLOCK.

It Is a Deadly Plant and One Not Generally Recognized.

Many deaths, both of human beings and domestic animals, are caused every year by cicuta, or water hemlock, a poisonous plant. It is the most violently poisonous of temperate region plants, yet it is not generally recognized. Learn to know it and look out for it. A warning has been issued by the specialists of the United States department of agriculture in the form of a circular from the bureau of animal industry, "Cicuta (water hemlock) as a Poisonous Plant," which describes this plant and gives remedies, though cases among domestic animals must be considered as practically hopeless so far as treatment is concerned.

Cicuta is widely distributed. Unfortunately it resembles a number of harmless plants and is not easily recognizable. It belongs to the same family as carrots and parsnips. It has a number of popular names, of which the most common is "cowbane," or "water hemlock." The plant grows in wet places and is especially common in some parts of the west along irrigating ditches. It has a thickened root stock, with roots which sometimes take the form of a group of tubers. The cicuta is most readily distinguished from plants of similar appearance growing under the same conditions by the transverse chambers in the root stock. These can be seen by making a longitudinal section.

Only the root of cicuta is poisonous. Cases of poisoning are more frequent in the spring, partly because the roots are more likely to be noticed at that time and partly because they appear to be more poisonous then than later in the season. In cases of the poisoning of human beings the recognized treatment is to give an efficient emetic, followed by a cathartic. Some form of opium may be given to control the convulsions when they are violent. If free vomiting is promptly produced the patient is likely to recover.

Perhaps there is no way to prevent some cases of poisoning of children. Something might be accomplished, however, if parents and teachers would attempt to make clear to children the danger of eating strange roots.

Served Him Right.

This is the way the agent got a lesson in manners. He called at a business office and saw nobody but a prepossessing though capable appearing young woman.

"Where's the boss?" he asked abruptly.

"What is your business?" she asked politely.

"None of yours!" he snapped. "I got a proposition to lay before this firm and I want to talk to somebody about it."

"And you would rather talk to a gentleman?"

"Yes."

"Well," answered the lady, smiling sweetly, "so would I." But it seems that it's impossible for either of us to have our wish, so we'll have to make the best of it. State your business, please!"

Can't Kill Languages.

One of the most effective means of prolonging the life of a hated language is to attempt to kill it, as the Germans and the Austro-Hungarians have from time to time found out. It was the effort to make all Bohemia talk German that lit the fires that revived the flames of the dying Bohemian speech, so that today it is one of the official tongues and dominates two-thirds of the country. Hungary, fighting on behalf of the Magyar speech, awoke Slav and Roumanian echoes. We found English prosper best in Canada when English was offered to be "taken or left."—London Standard.

The Seven British Languages.

There are seven distinct languages spoken in the British Isles. In addition to English there are Welsh in Wales, Erse in Ireland, Manx in the Isle of Man—church services in Manx were discontinued there but recently—Gaelic in Scotland, French in the Channel Islands, and Cornish was spoken in Cornwall more recently than either historians or the public know.—London Globe.

Out of Date Cars.

Few people realize how many different cars are still to use whose makers have gone out of business and how many models of existing builders that are so far obsolete that spare parts are no longer carried at the factories of their origin. The Horseless Age recently published a list of 300 orphan cars and is not entirely sure that it includes all of the tribe.

One Relief.

"What are you reading there?"

"My life insurance policy, and it gives me a frightful headache."

"Can't tell what it means, eh?"

"No, and my only consolation is that somebody else will have to settle it in the end."

Different.

"He used to say he loved the ground she walked on."

"Now?"

"Since her father bought a limousine she'd be insulted if he even dared to hint that she ever walked."

Our idea of a model wife is one who keeps her husband from making a fool of himself.

PERIL OF LIGHTNING.

Rules That Will Help You Avoid It During a Thunderstorm.

If you are out of doors in a very severe electrical storm the Electrical Experimenter offers the following rules for your protection:

Keep away from wire fences. They may carry a dangerous electrical charge long distances. Cattle in pastures are frequently killed from the neglect of farmers to ground the wire of the fence.

Keep away from hedges, ponds and streams.

Keep away from isolated trees. Oak trees are frequently struck; beech are seldom struck. It is safe in a dense forest.

Keep away from herds of cattle and crowds of people.

Do not hold an umbrella over you.

It is safer to sit or lie down in an open field than to stand.

Drivers should dismount and not stay close to their horses.

Do not work with any large metal tool or implement.

If you are indoors:

Keep away from the stove and chimney. The hot gases from the chimney may conduct the lightning to and down the chimney.

Do not take a position between two bodies of metal, as the stove and water pipe, for example. An exception to being near metals is the case of an iron bed. One of the safest places is on a mattress in an iron bed, provided you do not touch the metal. The metal surrounding you makes a safe cage which will prevent the lightning from reaching a person inside.

Do not stand on a wet floor nor draw water from the well or faucet.

Do not stand directly under a chandelier, near a radiator nor on a register.

Do not use the telephone.

"Blind Alley Jobs."

Vocations that lead boys nowhere in particular are in Canada called "blind alley jobs," and the name is a fitting one. The inspector of the Ottawa public schools points out in a recent report that 80 per cent of boys leaving those institutions gravitate toward positions that require little skill and offer little hope of advancement. A similar discovery might be made in any large city of the Dominion or in any considerable community of the United States, where vocational training is not receiving serious attention.—Christian Science Monitor.

Million Dollar Counterfeit Plot Bared By Chief Flynn

NEW YORK, Dec. 26. — Chief Flynn and Secret Service agents seized six Italians, an elaborate counterfeiting outfit and $130,000 in counterfeit ten dollar Federal Reserve Bank notes on the eve of what was to have been the opening of a campaign to circulate a million dollars in spurious bills.

The counterfeiters were to have started in the crowds of Christmas shoppers Monday and virtually had finished bills representing $130,000 which they intended to exchange for legal money in the busy shops the day before Christmas.

Chief Flynn and Captain John Henry, in charge of the New York bureau of the Secret Service would not say how they knew that the counterfeits were being made, but they said the band had been under observation for four months and that every move had been watched.

SPURIOUS BILLS SEIZED.

In a furnished room at No. 148 West Houston street they seized counterfeit bills representing $25,000 and arrested Giovanni D'Infanta, a jeweller, of No. 11 Prince street, and Marcio Loweris, a printing press man, who occupied the room.

In a store room at No. 395 West Broadway the detectives found $60,000 in bad bills, the printing press, inks and a large case of paper specially prepared in imitation of the paper used for currency.

There they arrested Antonio Sutaria, a real estate dealer, of No. 800 East 175th street, the Bronx; Antonio Puliese, a clerk, living in South street; Salvatore D'Allesia, a printer, No. 16 Sixth avenue, and Ostello, an engraver, of No. 149 Bleecker street.

MILLION DOLLAR CAMPAIGN.

In Landi's room they found an engraver's camera and plates, engraving implements, the plates from which the counterfeit had been printed, and $45,000 in the counterfeit money.

Chief Flynn said he had certain knowledge that not one of the counterfeit bills had been placed in circulation, but that the campaign was to have begun this morning. He said the band proposed to operate in all shopping districts of the metropolitan area, and had hoped to exchange the $130,000 in bad notes for good money before Monday night. By the first of the year, he said, they had arranged to place $1,000,000 in counterfeits in circulation and then to divide the profits and disappear.

Boycott Against Ontario Etc.

heaped upon us. "No—Quebec will not step out of Confederation, and the time will come when, as in troublous times in the past, it will be from Quebec that salvation will emerge.

"No—Quebec is not isolated in Confederation. It has on its side the Maritime Provinces and, when Ontario has been one year without seeing the colour of "French money," it will speak with less arrogance and with less bile in regard to French domination.

"Quebec won't go a-begging for any favours and Ontario, which is moved by and has its being in the concept of the almighty dollar rather than of the true ideal, will come a-howling. Already its hypocritical press is beginning to strike its breast and cry out like Wilhelm the second, "I did not will this."

"Last night the naves of all our churches resounded to the chorus, "Peace on earth, good will to men" and hearing this celestial message, I could not help thinking how lamentable it is that these "yellow" people in Ontario do not understand this language. Yes, "peace to men of good will," but is it in this province, Ontario, where destiny has led me that one may understand the meaning of such an appeal, which was never more appropriate? Now, more than at any other time has our much-tried country need of men of good will, but never for over half a century have we seen in this country so much ill-will."

CHRISTMAS ON CANADIAN FRONT WAS VERY QUIET

(By W. A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent in Flanders.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Dec. 26.—The Canadian front was quiet over Christmas. Our patrols recently have been active, while our artillery, trench mortars and machine guns have been a trifle busier. Poor visibility has made aeroplane observation difficult. In fact three low-flying enemy machines mistaking trenches, swept their own with gun fire yesterday. Taking advantage of snow on the ground, a small German party endeavoured to approach our wire dressed in white. It was dispersed by our machine guns.

DEATH IN ITS STING

Fearful Effects of the Venom of the Dreaded Fer-de-lance.

THE WORST OF ALL SERPENTS

Only Instant and Heroic Treatment Can Save Life After a Stab by Its Deadly Fangs—A Battle With Its Enemy and Master, the Mongoose.

There exist a large number of venomous serpents—we have many of them in the United States—but probably no other spot in the known world has such a death dealing snake as the island of Martinique, in the Caribbean sea. This is the fer-de-lance, scientifically known as Trigonocephalus lanceolatus, and it can, beyond the shadow of a doubt, lay claim to being the most deadly serpent of the earth. Its bite means death.

There are eight distinct varieties, the most common being a dark gray and black speckled, which coloring enables it to conceal itself easily among roots and stumps of trees. Another variety is a clear, bright yellow, and when hidden in the freshly cut cane it can scarcely be distinguished from the stalks. It also may be a dark yellow or coal black with a yellow belly.

This is not a large snake, rarely exceeding five feet in length and in circumference approximately the size of a child's arm. To repeat, the bite means almost certain death and should not the service of a physician, or penseur, as the natives call him, be obtained within a very short time the venom does its deadly work—the flesh grows cold, softens, becomes pulpy, changes in color, quickly begins to spot, and a great chilliness creeps through the blood. This lasts only a few minutes, possibly half an hour—then death.

If the victim be fortunate enough to get a physician upon the scene, post haste and no artery or vein has been pierced there is hope—just a faint hope. But even if life be saved the danger is not entirely removed, for in many cases necrosis of the tissues follows—the flesh corrupts and falls from the bones, and the body molders as does a tree.

There is, however, a heroic method of treatment often brought into use by the Martiniquians. It is the immediate amputation of the leg or arm if the bite happens to be in either. Even this has to be done at once and before the venom circulates through the system. There are to be seen today upon the island many natives with limbs missing, and in the majority of cases it is the result of having the machete, or cane knife, applied after an experience with a fer-de-lance.

The fer-de-lance is a fighter, and no domestic animal, with the exception of the cat, has any chance in a battle with this serpent. The cat, however, by about nine cases out of ten will come out of the fight with flying colors because of the fact that it is apparently quite as quick in movement and at the same time uses what might be termed ring generalship.

There is but one animal other than the cat that successfully wages war against the fer-de-lance. It is the mongoose (ichneumon), imported from India a number of years ago for the sole purpose of getting rid of the snakes in Martinique.

Of the weasel family and looking very much like those creatures, this little fellow is absolutely fearless so far as reptiles are concerned and will just as readily attack one five feet in length as one a foot long.

From the mongoose the fer-de-lance will flee, but if cornered will put up a great fight, using every trick at its command, a useless sort of contest, however, for within a short time it will be stretched out lifeless.

A battle between these two natural enemies is well worth witnessing. It is never a limited fight, but to a finish always, and probably the snakes by this time have come to understand that when they enter such a combat it is with the odds greatly against them.

The mongoose is quite as clever a ring general as the cat and uses that gift to advantage. Strategy more than strength is its asset.

When they meet and if the snake sees no avenue of escape it prepares for battle as does the mongoose, but in a more leisurely manner. It takes about one minute for them to get fully prepared. There is no trifling, however.

The mongoose circles about the reptile, always at a safe distance and "drawing fire," inviting it by moving closer and closer, to dart out its head and then quickly jumping out of harm's way. It torments in every possible manner, causing the snake to change position time and time again without ever reaching the objective point. At last, seeing its opponent at some particular disadvantage, the mongoose springs forward quick as a bolt of lightning, catches the serpent firmly with the teeth behind the triangular head, a shake, possibly two—no more—and in less time than it takes to tell it the fer-de-lance is dead, its vertebrae severed.

Aviation and War.

Before the Battle of the Wilderness General Sheridan spent three weeks and used up many thousand men and horses in making raids, the sole purpose of which was to get information about Lee's left. "All that he accomplished," says a modern commentator, "one aviator could have done in a morning's flight."

Christmas Tree At Chandos

Excellent Programme Was Provided

A Christmas tree and grand entertainment was held at S. S. No. 8, Chandos, in "Hawkes' school house on Friday evening, Dec. 21, which was carried out with success. The night was ideal and the school was crowded to capacity. The school house was beautifully decorated with Union Jacks, Canadian flags, pennants, streamers of red, white and blue, Christmas bells, evergreens, etc. The tree was a marvel of beauty and contained presents to delight the little folks. The children carried out their parts without a mistake and are certainly a credit to the school. The following was the programme rendered:

At the close of the programme a vote of thanks was extended to the teacher, Mrs. Staples, by Mr. Robert Tanner, sec.-treas. of S. S. No. 8, Chandos, for the trouble she had taken in training the children. The motion was seconded and carried unanimously. A vote of thanks was also extended to all who had assisted in any way in making the evening a success. Mr. Tanner also said it gave him much pleasure to see so many out to meet together with the people of the neighbouring school sections.

The tree was then disrobed and presents distributed, after which refreshments were served. Before dispersing all joined in singing the national anthem.

The proceeds will be given to our local Red Cross Society to be used in buying comforts for our local boys now on active service at the front.

Lieutenant Sent Back From France to U. S. Under Guard.

With the American Army in France, Dec. 26.— From several recent trials by court-martial it is evident that sobriety and proper conduct on the part of officers will be insisted upon at all times.

The latest case is that of a Lieutenant of the Medical Reserve, who was convicted of drinking with enlisted men and disgracing the military service by being intoxicated in uniform. The Lieutenant has been dismissed from the army and sent back to the United States under guard.

OLIVER CLIMBING UP.

EDMONTON, Dec. 21.—With 34 polls to hear from in the West Edmonton constituency, the majority for Brigadier-General Griesbach, Unionist, over Hon. Frank Oliver, Liberal, has been reduced to 45. Oliver will likely carry the riding by a substantial majority. His total does not include 70 votes cast for him at McLellan, where an insufficient supply of ballot papers was provided, and where written ballots were thrown out by the returning officer.

LABOUR TO MAKE NEW DEMANDS ON BRITISH GOVERNMENT

(By Lowell Mellett.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 26.—Labour's expected demands from the Government when the leaders meet Premier Lloyd George, Minister of National Service A. C. Geddes and others, over the question before Britain to-day. The Government has indicated its intention to ask further concessions from British Unionists permitting heavy new drafts from its members to supply man-power for the army. The Labourites have intimated they will accede to such a request, but it was not anticipated to-day that they would abandon their safeguards against drafting without a counter bargain. Strong sentiment was noted that opportunity would be utilized to obtain Government adherence to principle points in Labour's announced war aims—including not only the idea of a league of nations and no economic war after war, but frank and complete renunciation of any support of Britain of imperialistic aims. Labour suspects certain of the Allies entertain these imperialistic aims. There was growing belief to-day that labour might urg also H. G. Well's suggestion that Unionists demand Sir Edward Carson's expulsion from the Ministry as one who had gone out under the pressure of British Torylsm.

Home Rule leaders, however, were disposed to insist only on domestic concessions from the Government—particularly as to food supplying. Many Unionists are urging that now is the time to extend the co-operative socie-ties system over the whole country equalizing distribution, ending profiteer-ing and preventing waste. The recent unprecedented growth of queues of people waiting in line for supplies was guaranteed as ensuring the success of this demand.

PETROGRAD, December 26.—The Bolsheviki government has decided to send special representatives to all countries, belligerent as well as neu-tral, to further the propaganda of internationalism. Two million rubles have been appropriated for this purpose.

PARIS, December 26.—On the right bank of the Meuse, on the Verdun front, the energetic reply of our batteries put an end to a vigorous bombard-ment of our lines in the region of Bezonvaux, says to-day's official com-munication. In the region of St. Quentin and in Upper Alsace, French pa-trols penetrated German trenches and brought back prisoners.

A Letter From Pte. R. E. Wegg

Mrs. Ernest Wegg, 229 Antrim street, has received the following letter from her husband, Pte. R. E. Wegg, form-erly of the 93rd Battalion, who, after being wounded in France, is now on duty in England:

1st C.C.D., Sandling, Dec. 9, /17.

Dear Annie,—I have been sitting all alone and thinking, so I thought I would transfer by thoughts to paper and maybe cheer you a bit.

I was just going over the last sev-enteen months in my mind and won-dering if I had it all to do over again would I do the same, and I think I would. I know that although it has been a hard time for both of us, we both feel that it was the only thing for a man to do. It is a man's job and I feel more of a man for having done my duty by my country.

Then again, think what a lot we have to be thankful for; I had nearly ten months in France and have never had the unpleasant duty of taking an-other man's life, and at the end of ten months got out of it with only the loss of a finger, when so many men have laid down their lives. Then again my health has been much better in the least year.

I must write to Bob one of these days. I am afraid I have been ne-glecting him lately. He looks to be such a man now that I scarce know what to say him. Jeanne has grown so much that I don't think I would know her if she were with a stranger.

Remember me to any of the friends that you happen to see. And tell them I am always glad of a letter and that they can depend on my answering it.

I think I had better close now as I hear the boys falling in for their cocoa, and although there is no sug-ar in it, I never like to miss it, as it warms a fellow up. I remain, representatives must confine them-selves to acting in advisory capaci-ties, and that in any communications they may have with individuals affected by the Act, they should clearly explain their status.

Your loving husband,

All that these representatives can do in regard to appeals that have been dealt with by local tribunals is to make a recommendation to the military representative whether or not application should be made to the Honourable Mr. Justice Duff as Cen-tral Appeal Judge for leave to appeal.

I might further add that these re-presentatives have not the right to alter a decision as given by any local exemption tribunal or appeal tri-bunal, nor have they the right to grant exemption.

Trusting that this explanation will clear the situation.

"JERRY'S SACRIFICE."

Yesterday afternoon and evening the Ernie Mark Stock Company op-ened a five days' engagement in the Grand Opera House with "Jerry's Sacrifice." This sterling production was well received, while the special-ties alone between each of the four acts were worth the price of admis-sion. The Company has an able and well balanced cast of characters and those who witness one or more of the remaining productions can be assur-ed of a good evening's entertainment. To-night the Company will present "The Minister's Son."

To The Electors

141 Hunter Street, E.
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 20th, '17.

To the Electors of the City of Pe-terborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the City of Peterbor-ough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to with-ingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued devel-opment of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the City of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "general" education and "technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impun-ity.

As a graduate in Engineering Sci-ence of the University of London, Eng-land, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our effort of to-day.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous boards of education, and will endeav-our, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the stud-ents, the teachers, the City of Peter-borough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,

Mr. Wm. Hartley Is Presented With Club Bag

Shortly before the noon hour on Monday, Dec. 24th, Mr. Wm. Hart-ly, foreman of the Warping Depart-ment of the Auburn Mills, was waited on by the employees of his depart-ment and presented with a handsome club bag and the following address:

Mr. Wm. Hartley, Foreman Warp Room.

Dear Sir,—We, your fellow-work-ers of the Warp Room of the Auburn Woollen Mills, desire at this festive season to show our appreciation of the sterling integrity, and also of the good will which exists between your-self as foreman and those under your charge.

The pleasant good-fellowship which characterize our association but marks out your own superiority, and we trust this same feeling will still pre-dominate; and, as the web of time continues to revolve, we pray that the filling in of the years to you may be that of prosperity.

We ask your acceptance of this club bag as an evidence of our esteem and wish both you and your family a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Signed on behalf of the Warp Room—Reta Quibell, Albert Wecse.

Club Rooms For The Veterans

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association wish to again call the attention of the public that within the next few days the canvass for $2,000 to furnish the club rooms of the War Veterans will be launched. The names of the Captains will be announced to-morrow. It is hoped that there will be a ready re-sponse to the appeal. The cause is a splendid one and the total amount required is small in comparison with the comfort it will give the men who have fought Canada's battle overseas. The Ladies Auxiliary all have given loved ones to the cause and their in-terest in the welfare of the returned men is a commendable one and should make a most favourable im-pression upon the public.

Presentation To Mrs. T. Brown

The Gleaners' Bible Class of St. James' Methodist Church met on Christmas eve at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Thomas Brown, 176 Lock street and presented her with a teacher's bible, a bouquet of flow-ers and an address.

The Address.

The address reads as follows:

Dear Teacher,—The members of the Gleaners' Bible Class take this opportunity of thanking you for the interest shown us during the past year and feel it our duty to present to you this small token of appreci-ation. Hoping you will continue the good work and wishing you the com-pliments of the season. Signed on be-half of the class by Miss A. Orre, Miss M. Cronk, and Miss M. Saun-ders.

Refreshments were served before the party broke up after spending a pleasant evening. There are sixteen girls in the Gleaners' Bible Class.

PRESENTATION TO FIRE CHIEF

The members of the Fire Depart-ment met in Chief Grange's office on Christmas Eve, and presented him with an excellent pipe, a token of the esteem and genuine respect in which the Chief is held at the station.

Chief Grange, although taken en-tirely by surprise, acknowledged the gift with a few words of appreciation, wishing his men the compliments of the season.

The Address.

The following address was read:

Mr. George Grange,
Chief of Fire Department,
Peterborough.

Dear Chief,

We, the members of the Peter-borough Fire Department, wish to show our appreciation of the many ways in which you have demonstrated your kindness of heart and nobility of character in your dealings with us during the past three or four months.

We assure you, sir, that your many acts of kindness have not been wasted on unappreciative hearts, and in order that you may have some tang-ible proof of the sincerity of our statement, and as a small token of goodwill and fidelity, we ask you to accept this pipe, with the best Christ-mas wishes for yourself and your family, from

The Members of the Peterborough Fire Department.

PRESENTATION TO ASST. CHIEF

The Department also took advan-tage of the occasion to present Assis-tant Chief Johnson, who also holds a warm place in the men's hearts, with a box of cigars.

Mr. Johnson expressed his appre-ciation of the kindness of the De-partment.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y.M.C.A. building was open Christmas Day, the rooms being largely used throughout the day. In the evening an illustrated lecture on Ben Hur was presented to the boys, and a few adults who also attended. Stereoptican views were thrown on the screen by Harold Copp, and the lecture was nicely read by Hubert Martin of the Gymnasium Leaders' Corps. The beautiful story of Ben Hur greatly impressed the boys who were present, showing, as it does, Christ in personal touch with men and women on the earth. The hero, Ben Hur, touches the imagination of a boy who is interested in physical prowness.

On Thursday afternoon at 1 p. m. sharp all boys of the Y.M.C.A. Boys' Department and their friends are invited to meet at the Y.M.C.A. for a hike up the canal. The boys should bring skates, skis, snowshoes, or toboggans, and a good time is pro-mised. Harold Copp will be in charge of the party.

Saturday afternoon all boys of School Boys' "B" Class are invited to meet at the Y.M.C.A. at 5 o'clock, sharp for a sleigh-ride to be followed by a supper at the Association build-ing and the presentation of a pennant and a photograph. School Boys' "B" are the winners in the Boys' Mem-bership Contest and also in the con-test for department and attendance at class that closed Christmas Day.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on indivi-duals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Will you please insert the fol-lowing in your paper. It appears that there has been some grave mis-understandings regarding the so-called Farmers' Tribunal held re-cently at the Court House, with Warden Brown officiating. Permit me to explain:

"There is no authority whatever for the constitution of a 'Farmers' Tribunal'" nor of any other tribunal to sit in competition with or substi-tution for the statutory local exemp-tion tribunals and appellate tri-bunal."

An Order-in-Council was passed on the 3rd of December, 1917, on the re-commendation of the Acting Minis-ter of Agriculture, a copy of which I give below. This Order-in-Council was passed without consultation with the Military Service Council, but is intended, as you will see, simply to provide, as it were, a counsel or ad-vocate for the farmer in so far as the national interests are wrapped up, and his remaining engaged at his work of production. The Order-in-Council is as follows:

P.C. 3246, Privy Council, Canada, at the Government House at Ot-tawa, Monday, the 3rd day of December, 1917. Present, His Ex-cellency the Governor-General in Council.

His Excellency the Governor-Gen-eral in Council on the recommenda-tion of the Acting Minister of Agri-culture and under and in virtue of the provisions of the War Measures Act, 1914, and the Military Service Act, 1917, is pleased to authorise and doth hereby authorise the Minister of Agriculture to appoint a repres-entative of the Department of Agricul-ture in such counties or districts in any province of Canada as he may determine;

(1) To attend the sittings of the Tribunals appointed under the Mili-tary Service Act, to guard the na-tional interests in connection with the production of foodstuffs;

(2) To appeal from the decision of the Tribunals in any case where, in his opinion, the Tribunal has not given due weight to the urgency of maintaining our food supplies;

(3) To investigate and report upon appeals or applications for exemption where the ground of appeal or appli-cation is that the party seeking ex-emption should in the national in-terest be retained in food production rather than enrolled in the expedi-tionary force.

Rodolphe Boudreau,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

The Honourable the Minister of Justice.

Therefore, according to the terms of the Order-in-Council those farmers' representatives must confine them-selves to acting in advisory capaci-ties, and that in any communications they may have with individuals affected by the Act, they should clearly explain their status.

All that these representatives can do in regard to appeals that have been dealt with by local tribunals is to make a recommendation to the military representative whether or not application should be made to the Honourable Mr. Justice Duff as Cen-tral Appeal Judge for leave to appeal.

I might further add that these re-presentatives have not the right to alter a decision as given by any local exemption tribunal or appeal tri-bunal, nor have they the right to grant exemption.

Trusting that this explanation will clear the situation.

I am, sir, yours truly,
J. A. McNabb, Lieut.
694 George Street,
Peterborough, 26th Dec., 1917.

The Mayoralty

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes, sympathy, and support in favour of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for nine years, during which time I have served on all standing Committees and many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as Chairman of most of the Committee, which you will admit should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the workings of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present Election in summing up the situation, I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that, with nine years' experience, the people would expect nothing else but that I would be a contestant, and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for nine years to fail to offer my services at this time.

In these days, when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions are so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city affairs. Much attention will have to be directed to sewage disposal with a view to disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of allowing the waters of the Otonabee to be polluted. The successful completion of the Outfall sewer and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance. If elected these will have my close and most careful attention.

There is also the building of the new bridges over the Otonabee at Hunter Street, which is supposed to be built by the end of 1919. This is one of the matters this year's Council will have to deal with and a great deal will depend upon labour conditions.

I will strongly oppose any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions.

I am in favour of extending our present street car lines to the north and west and to East City so as to give a beter service to the public generally.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of those measures which tended to promote good citizenship.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and Private Parties to endeavour to settle these matters without recourse to litigation, and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

The securing of new industries consistent with the best interests of our city has always had and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your hands. During the past 23 years I have been in business for myself. Faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be the assurance that all will be equally and fairly treated. I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election may increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence, by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past and the hope that the year 1918 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours Faithfully,

G. H. DUNCAN

LUXEMBURG'S FOOD TAKEN BY GERMANS

DIRE WANT AND STERN MILITARY REPRESSION UPON THE PEOPLE.

Corroboration of occasional cable dispatches telling of the sufferings endured by the inhabitants of the little Grand Duchy of Luxemburg which has been under German rule since the beginning of the war, is found in an article entitled "The Throttling of Luxemburg," written for Die Freie Zeitung of Berne by a citizen of the Grand Duchy who has kept in close touch with conditions in his native land. This article, which was printed on Oct. 31, opens with a bitter arraignment of the German Government for its violation of Luxemburg's neutrality, guaranteed by Germany itself, and continues:

"A dreadful shortage of foodstuffs and of everything necessary to sustain life prevails in Luxemburg. The 8th, 11th, 13th, 23rd and other Army Corps have lived upon the little country while crossing and staying in the Grand Duchy, and instead of replacing the foodstuffs consumed have paid for them with Loan Bank notes. With the progress of time the situation thus created has become fearful. The card system for all foodstuffs has been in effect for a long time and the rations are ridiculously small.

Luxemburg is obliged to get along upon its own resources. Tuberculosis is making alarming progress, hunger typhus has made its appearance, and the death rate, especially among children and poor persons, is fearfully high.

"Everything is either lacking or is exorbitantly dear. A cake of soap costs from $1.20 to $1.60, a pair of shoes $30, and a suit of men's clothing $120. The little that remains is being feverishly smuggled over the Belgian frontier. Even the cattle are sold by members of the German Landstrum, as the German authorities have forbidden the Luxemburg customs guards to examine the always well-filled packs of the German soldiers. I have just got word that in some parts of the country there has been no bread for three weeks.

"In spite of the promise by General Tuiff von Tschesa that 'the personal liberty of all Luxemburgers remains fully secured and respected, arrests and deportations continue without end. Deputies, Mayors, highly respectable citizens have been dragged away and sent home without a hearing or an apology after having languished for weeks in Prussian jails.

"Others have been condemned—three to death—for what? None will ever know! Some months ago, during a general strike, workers were deported from Luxemburg factories and replaced by their Belgian comrades in misery and public meetings were suppressed with machine guns.

"But all this misery is not able to make the Luxemburgs bend their proud necks. Fully conscious of having done their duty, their full duty, as honourable citizens of the world, they are holding out and awaiting the day of liberation and settlement."

QUITS CONGRESS TO ENLIST.

R. C. Johnson of South Dakota to be "Tamest Private in Camp."

WASHINGTON.—Representative Royal C. Johnson of South Dakota gave up his seat in Congress to enlist as a private in the regular army. He left for Camp Meade, Annapolis Junction, recently. To several of his friends he said that he would be "the tamest private in camp."

Mr. Johnson is 32 years old and has a wife and two children. From 1911 to 1914 he was Attorney General of South Dakota. He was elected as a Republican to the Sixty-fourth Congress.

THE CALL TO PRAYER

The text of the King's Proclamation setting apart the first Sunday in January as a day of national prayer throughout the Empire is as follows:

"The world-wide struggle for the triumph of right and liberty is entering upon its last and most difficult phase. The enemy is striving by desperate assault and subtle intrigue to perpetuate the wrongs already committed and stem the tide of free civilisation. We have yet to complete the great task to which, more than three years ago, we dedicated ourselves.

"At such a time I would call upon my people to devote a special day to prayer that we may have the clear-sightedness and strength necessary to the victory of the cause.

"This victory will be gained only if we steadfastly remember the responsibility which rests upon us, and in a spirit of reverent obedience ask the blessing of Almighty God upon our endeavours. With hearts grateful for the Divine guidance which has led us so far towards our goal, let us seek to be enlightened in our understanding and fortified in our courage in facing the sacrifices we may yet have to make before our work is done.

"I therefore hereby appoint 6th January, the first Sunday of the year, to be set aside as a special day of prayer and thanksgiving in all the churches throughout my Dominions, and require that this Proclamation be read at the services held on that day."

NEGROES SING THEIR WAY TO FRENCH FAVOUR

Though they bewail the lack of chickens in the backyards of the French—and on their menu—the members of a regiment of American negro stevedores in France have danced and sung their way into the hearts of the French population in the port where they are stationed. Warm-heartedly they are already planning a show for the benefit of a fund for the French wounded.

Telling of their work and play and thoughts, Howard Kahn, in an article sent to the National War Work Council of the Y.M.C.A., speaks of them as the "war's minstrel show." In spite of their strange surroundings they carry on their work as usual—they shuffle the same dances and sing the same plantation melodies as at home.

They have no use for the Senegalese—"French niggers' they call them—because they wear monkey caps, have rings in their ears and "don't talk sense." The native wit and constant good humour of these stevedores have made them a joy and delight to the officers and men who come in contact with them. Moreover, they are living up to the best traditions of the American negro.

Writing from a port in France, Mr. Kahn says:

"It's against the rules to mention names when you write about enlisted men of the American expeditionary forces, but even the hardest-hearted censor will admit that no military secret is divulged in this interview with Sylvester Bogus Johnson, of Nashville, Tenn., a member of a regiment of negro stevedores.

"Columbus Had Some Nerve."

"Mr. Johnson was standing on the dock looking over an expanse of salt water such as he had never seen at Nashville. He started the conversation without any preamble from me.

"'Man, man,' he said, 'Christopher Columbus shuah must of had some nerve!'

"'You don't like the ocean, then?'

"'Not me, boss. I'se pale from mah trip yet. I'se been an American all mah life. But unless this yere Atlantic Ocean freezes ovah and somebody builds a railroad track to Tennessee, I'se a European fo'sh life.'

"'Parlez-vous francais?' I inquired.

"'No, sah; stevedore,' he replied.

"'What's your particular objection to the ocean?'

"'The scenery is rotten,' Sylvester explained. 'And I couldn't keep nothin' on mah stomach except a life-preserver.'

"'Get plenty to eat here?'

"'Yes, sah. Uncle Sam feeds us all right. But chicken is mighty scarce. I ain't had no chicken since I landed. I ain't even seen no chicken walkin' around nobody's back yet.'

"'Have you made many friends over here?'

"'Boss, these French niggahs ain't no good. I saw one to-day with rings in his eahs. I asks him fo'sh a cigarette and he jes' walks away. I done beah him say somethin', but it didn't have no meanin'. They weah little red monkey hats and they is jes' plum ignorant.

"'Maybe he was a Senegalese?'

"'I don't ca'e what he was. He's jes' a plum no 'count niggah. I'se even seen 'em ovah heah with whiskahs. But they couldn't speak the English language, so you could understand them. I'se stand it a-tall. Plum ignorant. That's what I says.'

"'If you had to do it over again, would you enlist?'

"'Boss, when I made mah mark on dat enlistment papah, no one tol' me about all that watah in this Atlantic Ocean. If they had, I'd still be in Nashville, Tenn., U.S.A.'

"Sylvester Bogus Johnson was somewhat more pessimistic than most of his dusky colleagues. It isn't at all hard to imagine that one is visiting a lower Mississippi River landing in the southern part of the United States as one sees these negroes in long single file carry box after box of provisions for Uncle Sam's men from the big steamers. They sing the same plantation melodies, shoot the same 'bones,' and shuffle the same darkey dances.

Picturesque Attire of Stevedores.

"Their attire is almost as picturesque as that of the Senegalese, to whom Mr. Johnson objected so strongly. They wear the uniforms formerly issued to the army before the khaki was adopted. Those who were fortunate enough to draw the old style light blue artillery overcoat with long cape and scarlet lining were particularly well satisfied. The negroes are comfortably housed in barracks near the docks. Their rations are the same as those issued to the fighting men and while their discipline is not so strict, the hours of duty and routine are much the same.

"The American Y.M.C.A. plans to look after their social welfare in just the same manner that it cares for the white soldiers. A hut for the use of the stevedores is being constructed. It is to have electric lights, a moving picture machine, a piano, and facilities for writing. A negro secretary, a colored man, will co-operate with the white secretaries in providing amusement and recreation for the men. He has announced that he will write letters for all who are unable to write themselves.

"The negroes already are planning a show for the benefit of a fund for French wounded. It will be staged as soon as the hut is completed. American officers and men at this port are speaking for tickets, for it is known that there is much real darkey talent in the stevedore regiment."

HEALTH CONDITIONS IN U.S. CAMPS BAD

WASHINGTON — Shocked by Surgeon-General Gorgas' recent disclosures of health conditions at American camps, Congress proposes to widen its inquiries to find why such conditions have been permitted to continue. Partly they are the natural outgrowth of tradition from an unprepared peace to a state of war.

All the facts for Congressional probing will be promptly available for Gorgas' department, sourred by the committee on public information, long since adopted the policy of absolute frankness. His first revelations covered conditions at pneumonia stricken camp Wheeler, Macon, Ga.

Now after a personal inspection, he has revealed that serious disease epidemics — mainly pneumonia and meningitis—in camps Funston, Kansas, Doniphan, Oklahoma, Bowie, Texas and Sevier, South Carolina, are traceable mainly to lack of warm clothing, insufficient hospital accommodation, overcrowding and improper camp selection.

"THE LILAC DOMINO"

"The Lilac Domino," a comic opera in three acts by Major Charles Cuvillier, which delighted the most critical audiences of New York and Boston for an entire year, will be presented for the first time in this city at the Grand Theatre on New Year's Day, Matinee and evening, as the beginning of a short tour of Canada, which will embrace only a very few of the principal cities, as the organization is too expensive to appear in the smaller towns. The same great cast of high-salaried artists, including J. Humbird Duffey, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, Marjorie Dunbar Pringle, Canada's greatest light opera Prima Donna; Cesar Gonsales, previously connected with Henry W. Savage's English Grand Opera Co.; Doris Paine, last season with the Andreas Dippel Opera Comique Co.; Herbert Standing, who has been identified with the George Edwards' productions in London; Clara Thropp, a comedienne with an international reputation; Teddy Wilde, for the past six seasons with Henry W. Savage's productions Sydney De Grey, the well-known singing and dancing comedian who has appeared in the principal comedy roles with the leading London and New York musical productions for years, and is generally conceded to be one of the best and most legitimate comedians in light opera, and many other noted artists constitute a cast of excellence seldom seen in one organization.

The entire original 44th Street Theatre, New York, scenic production which represents an investment of a good-sized fortune, is carried on tour and the many exquisite costumes are the very last word of the modiste art. A large, pretty and vivacious Broadway Girl Chorus sing and dance their way through the twenty-one beautifully staged musical numbers of the entertainment.

This attraction is positively guaranteed by the management to be one of the best as to cast, chorus and scenic investiture that has ever visited this city. It has been drawing crowded houses in all of the principal American cities and the attendance here should and probably will be limited only by the capacity of the theatre.

NEW WYORK, Dec. 26.—The International Mercantile Marine Company announced recently that it had sold one-half of its interest in the Holland-America Line to a syndicate of Dutch bankers and shipping men for $3,500,000. It has been understood that the International Mercantile Marine controlled a 25 per cent. interest in the Dutch company.

"IT KEPT ME ON THE PAYROLL" HE SAYS

Cochrane Was on Verge of Quitting Job When He Began Taking Tanlac

"Tanlac has kept me on the payroll, and that's one of my reasons for thinking it the best medicine in the world." William Cochrane, who made this statement, was born and reared in Toronto, and has a wide acquaintance. He resides at 429 Erie Terrace, and holds a good position with the Dominion Express Company.

"I have never been much on medicines," Mr. Cochrane continued, "but Tanlac is one I can certainly back up. I have never spent money to better advantage in my life than I did when I bought it. A year ago or more I began to notice a tired feeling that I couldn't shake off. Even after coming home at night and lying down it clung to me. Finally I got to where my work would completely exhaust me, and I would come home so tired and worn out I could hardly move. All day at m ywork I felt all in, had no strength and energy, and never felt like doing anything. I was advised to stop off and rest up for three or four weeks, but I kept pegging along, thinking I would get better. Nothing helped me, however, and I kept getting weaker all the time.

"I kept reading testimonials of so many who had been helped by Tanlac that I became convinced it was good; so I decided to try it, and I honestly believe it has saved me from a general breakdown. I have no doubt if it hadn't been for Tanlab I would have become compelled in a short while longer to give up my job, at least for a while, for I tell you I was just about past going when I first began taking it. Well, six bottles have relieved me entirely of that exhausted, half-dead feeling, and my general health is better than it has been in over two years. The medicine built me up and put me on my feet, with strength and energy to do my work with all ease. I am now on the job regular every day, feeling fine, and when I hear a man complaining of feeling bad, the first thing I think of is to tell him to try Tanlac.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

GERMANY'S FOOD PLAN COLLAPSES

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 20.—Striking evidence of the collapse of the German Imperial food department system is furnished by Vorwaerts, the leading Socialist organ of Germany, which publishes a confidential memorandum showing that the rations appointed by Count von Waldow's department are entirely insufficient for war industrial workers. The paper devotes six columns of the elevation, the publication of which Count von Waldow forbade.

The municipality of Neukoeln, a suburb of Berlin, examined the food difficulties and set forth the results in the forbidden memorandum. From this it appears that the rations being insufficient for workers, the managers of war industrial concerns, where there are about 1,800 in Neukoeln following one example of the Krupps and other large employers, bought their own provisions, generally far above the maximum prices. These provisions they retailed to the workers, sometimes at prescribed prices, sometimes more.

This course, at first adopted by large concentrations, excited the jealousy of the smaller employers with less means who for the purpose of preventing trouble received military support in acquiring goods in this legitimate way.

Ultimately the Neukoeln municipal council, to prevent discontent among these workers, was obliged itself to purchase provisions and distribute them among the small industries, necessitating the contravention of the maximum prices.

THE WAY TO BEAT MAIL ORDER COMPETITION

There is just one reason why the mail order houses have been able to go into the small towns and take business away from so many local dealers.

That reason is advertising.

Advertising is the greatest force in the business world to-day.

A mail order house might have the best merchandise and the lowest prices in the country, but if it did not advertise it would not do enough business to pay expenses.

A house like Sears, Roebuck & Co. spends millions of dollars a year on its catalogues and other advertising. The pictures are made by experts. The descriptions are written by trained advertising men who know how to make them sound attractive. This carefully prepared advertising matter is persistently circulated. Possible customers have no chance to forget what the big mail order houses handles. Mailing lists—prospect lists, in other words—are compiled with the utmost care and followed up continuously. The mail order houses have reduced this advertising work to a science, so that they can tell in advance almost exactly what percentage of prospects they will be able to sell.

How is the local dealer to meet such highly organized competition as this? He is seldom a trained advertising man, nor can he afford to hire high-priced advertising experts.

As a matter of fact, the solution is very simple. He has at his command, free for the asking, some of the best advertising talent in the country.

The manufacturers of nearly every article he sells are only too glad to supply him with advertising matter if he will distribute it. He can beat mail order competition to death if he will only follow the intensive sales methods worked out and practised by the big catalogue houses.

Unearth Your Sales Possibilities.

Let the implement or hardware dealer keep an eye on conditions in his territory. A few drives along the country roads will be sure to unearth a surprising number of prospects for various things.

Is Bill Jones going to build a barn? If so, he ought to be in the market for door-hangers, stanchions, window glass, nails and a dozen other things. See what advertising matter you have that might interest him. Send it to him, and then follow it up a few days later by a letter or a personal call.

Has Joe Billfugt bought more cows? If he has, he may be a good prospect for a new or larger size separator. Send in his name to the De Laval Sales Service Department, and advertising matter bearing your imprint will be sent to him at frequent intervals.

Every farmer who owns seven or more cows needs a silo the worst kind of way. It will pay you to see that car owners in your part of the country get some advertising matter that will open their eyes to this need.

The number of prospects you will run across for these things and others like gas engines, harness, barn equipment, milking machines, etc., will surprise you. If you will see that they get advertising matter, you will get a lot of business that otherwise would not come to you.

And don't forget the lady of the house. She may be interested in a new stove, a washing machine, or some other piece of kitchen equipment.

Meet Mail Order Advertising With Your Own—Keep Your Store in the Limelight.

Keep live lists of prospects. Hammer on them with the advertising matter supplied by the various manufacturers. The fact that you are in personal touch with the buyers for your locality gives you a big advantage over the mail order houses, and if you will take a little time to inform these buyers regarding the things you have to sell you will find the business coming your way.

It is usually the dealer who says, "Everybody knows what I sell! If they want it they will come to my store and buy it," who complains about mail order competition.

You don't find the dealer who uses modern selling methods and takes advantage of the advertising matter supplied by manufacturers whose goods he handles complaining. He's the man who has competition worried. He doesn't worry him.—De Laval Monthly.

GENERAL LEMAN ARRESTED.

Defender of Liege Was on His Way to Switzerland.

GENEVA, Switzerland.—General Leman, known as the hero of Liege for his defense of that city at the time the Germans were going through Belgium in the first month of the war, was expected to arrive in Switzerland last week, the German Government finally having agreed to his internment in this country. New difficulties arose, however, and the general was arrested on the frontier at Constance. It may be recalled that General Leman, although seriously ill, declined last year to accept a German offer of permission to come to Switzerland because it was made on the ground of his ill health and age. The General said he did not wish to admit he was unfit to fight for his country.

Few Austro-Hungarians For the West Front

(By W. J. T. Mason.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Germany's efforts to secure Austro-Hungarian reinforcements for the new operations along the western front have not been successful. Increasing troubles in Hungary make it improbable that a large force of troops from the Dual Monarchy will be available in the future for a joint offensive by the Central Powers in the west. A month has now passed since the German government after the defeat before Cambrai began to bring pressure on Austria-Hungary to contribute troops to strengthen the German's weakened western lines.

The authorities at Vienna have not agreed to the German proposal for it would be impossible to move any considerable body of Austro-Hungarians to the west without that fact becoming quickly known. Even the German transfers from the Russian to the French fronts are not kept secret. Indications strongly point to Austro-Hungary's disobedience to German instructions in the matter being associated with the rapid development of anti-Austrian feeling in Hungary.

Appeals Heard This Morning

From the standpoint of the British Empire, Mr. M. Walsh, of Warsaw, expressed the opinion that his employee, Lawrence Cranley, would be of greater national service if he were allowed to remain on the farm. The appeal was heard this morning before the local appeal tribunal.

"Did you take it before the farmers' tribunal?" enquired Judge Huycke.

"I did," replied Walsh.

"Well, why don't they appear here and press the case, which they are permitted to do?" said Judge Huycke.

"From what I can see, they have no authority at all," observed Walsh.

"They havn't," declared Judge Huycke. "I think some of you farmers have been badly fooled."

The appeal was disallowed.

A Statement.

A statement signed by the Ennismore Township Council, testifying to the necessity of keeping John Francis Scollard at home, was presented to Judge Huycke by W. J. Scollard, father of John Francis. Two sons in the family were exempted, and the military representative entered an appeal. The Scollard family work between five and six hundred acres of land. The family consists of six boys and two girls. The ages of the three youngest boys range from eight to fourteen years, and the three older boys from nineteen and up.

"Doesn't one of the boys want to go to the war," enquired Judge Huycke.

"No they do not. They are very much in love with their home," replied the father. "Last September the two eligible sons rented one hundred and fifty-five acres of land."

"That doesn't help their case," said Judge Huycke.

The case will not be decided until the second day's case is dealt with.

Stefansson Arrives At Fort Yukon

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 26.—Stefansson, the Canadian explorer and his party of twenty-four men are safe. A message received by G. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs, today announces that Stefansson and party have arrived safely at Fort Yukon, Alaska, from the Far North. This means that the explorers about whose safety there has been considerable doubt for several months past, is coming back to civilization after his long sojourn in the Arctic regions. It is presumed that the party will now make their way to Nome and wait for the first steamer that will bring them back to Canada. It is possible, however, that Stefansson may decide to go overland to Dawson.

INCREASE IN FREIGHT RATES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—The Dominion Railway Commission will shortly bring down a judgment in the application of railway companies for an increase of 15 per cent. in freight rates. While it is stated that an increase has been granted in view of the increase in material, it is not thought that the increase is on the basis of a flat raise as requested. The application was a blank one to apply to all lines and all commodities. The increase is believed will take various local conditions into consideration, and will also consider various commodities.

OVER-HEATED STOVE CAUSED SMALL BLAZE

What threatened to be a serious fire broke out yesterday morning at 8.45 in Mr. A. Comstock's workshop, 300 George Street. A hot stove, which had been left banked up for the holiday, became overheated, and set fire to the building, which was filled with furniture, doing damage to the extent of about $50.

Chief Grange extinguished the blaze with 9 gallons of chemical.

Gives Unjust and Injurious Reports of Exemption Cases.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26—At the opening of the Appeal Court Justice Marechal scored Le Devoir, the organ of Henri Bourassa, for "unjust and injurious" reports on the cases of men appealing from the decisions of the military tribunals.

"Your article would give the impression," said his Lordship to a Devoir reporter, "that the appeal judges are but valets and slaves of the military. There is no power on earth that could persuade us to allow any favours. Were it my own son I could not act otherwise."

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS GET $100,000 FOR CAMP WORK

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—A contribution of $100,000 for its war work by the Rockefeller Foundation, for 1918, was announced by the supreme office of the Knights of Columbus. The response to the appeal for a three million dollar fund also has been generous, and campaigns just closed indicate that Pittsburg has raised $400,000; Omaha, Neb., $75,000; Hartford, Conn., $50,000, and the State of California, $300,000.

In a review of its preliminary war work, the supreme secretary of the order says that in various military and naval camps seventy-five buildings, at a cost of approximately $600,000, have bene put up, and $200,000 worth of equipment furnished. Volunteer chaplains appointed by the government also were supported.

America's Power To Cut Off Supplies For Germany Steadily Gains In Might Relentlessly the Agents of the Government Have Stopped Trading With the Enemy By Alleged Neutrals of Northern Europe and South America

EXPORTS BOARD FORMED

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 27.—Relentless and increasing curtailment of importations into Germany of foodstuffs and of every commodity essential to a nation at war is the unalterable policy of the War Trade Board. Working behind a wall of impenetrable secrecy, none of the details of the Board's activities and few of its accomplishments have become known, but those that have been disclosed justify the belief that the War Trade Board will be reckoned among the most potent factors in accomplishing the disintegration of Prussian autocracy.

Reports from the United States to countries contiguous to Germany have been curtailed to the point of privation. Hundreds of ships belonging to neutrals who have refused to comply with the requirements of this Board have failed to obtain bunker coal and provisions and are now lying at anchor in American ports.

Latin-American countries maintaining too friendly an attitude toward Germany have been made to feel the power of this Board through curtailment of their coal supply. Thousands of South American business houses have been branded by this board as enemies of the United States and all commercial interests with them has been forbidden.

WAR BOARD ORGANIZED.

The War Trade Board was created by President Wilson October 12 last, and effected its organization on the following day. Its membership consists of representatives of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, the Food Administrator and the Shipping Board.

At the same time President Wilson established a War Trade Council, the membership of which is composed of the heads of the several departments just enumerated.

Both of these organizations have their headquarters in Washington. Branches of the War Trade Board have been established in New York, Galveston, Los Angeles, Mobile, New Orleans, Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Savannah and Seattle.

In the Hamburg-American Building, where emissaries of the Kaiser plotted against the integrity of the United States, the New York branch carries out the policies formulated in Washington and conducts investigations into the activities of those whose commercial dealings with foreign merchants are not above suspicion.

EXPORTS OF SINISTER SIGNIFICANCE.

When the United States became a belligerent in the war its citizens were engaged in unrestricted commerce with the citizens of every foreign nation whose vessels plied the seas. Raw materials, foods and other commodities essential to effective participation in the war, as well as those necessary to sustain the industrial and domestic life of the nation, were being exported in such enormous quantities as to create apprehension of a general shortage. Exports to neutrals of Northern Europe, the increasing magnitude of which had instilled the belief that Germany was their ultimate destination, assumed a new and sinister significance. Investigation and reports by agents of the United States government confirmed that belief, and immediate control and curtailment of all exports were recognized as imperative.

Special legislation being necessary to accomplish that object, President Wilson obtained the passage by Congress of what is known as the "Espionage act," and approved it June 15, 1917. For the administration and enforcement of that act the President authorized the Secretary of Commerce to take such measures as might be necessary to administer and execute the act. At the same time he created the Exports Council, which was composed of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce and the Food Administrator.

Enforcement of the Espionage act enabled the United States to exert great pressure upon such so-called neutrals as Holland by immediately curtailing the amount of exports to them. This power was utilized to such an extent that special missions were sent to this country by virtually every nation in Northern Europe that was not openly engaged in the war, for the purpose of attempting to induce the United States to relax the severity of its embargoes.

EXPORTS BOARD FORMED.

Realising the intimate relation between the functions of the Exports Council and the Shipping Board and the advantages that would result from close co-operation between those organizations, President Wilson by an executive order dated August 21 created the Exports Administration Board and designated as its members those officials who had constituted the Exports Council, adding to the membership of the new body the chairman of the Shipping Board.

Increased efficiency resulted from that action, but the United States had not yet achieved its full purpose in controlling the commerce between the neutrals of Northern Europe and Germany. Increased trade between those nations and the republics of South America compensated, to a great extent for the loss of trade with this country, and Germany continued to obtain the fats and other commodities upon which it has become increasingly dependent.

Alive to the necessity of cutting off supplies from the enemy and recognizing the inadequacy of the Espionage act, President Wilson again went to Congress and obtained the passage of the Trading with the Enemy Act, which he approved October 6th.

That act conferred upon the President greater powers than had ever been intrusted to any Executive of the United States. It added to the power to embargo all exports the authority to prohibit the importation from every nation in the world of every basic commodity known to commerce. It was under this act that the War Trade Board and the War Trade Council were established.

Depending upon the United States for many commodities essential to national prosperity, and utterly at the mercy of this government for the coal with which to conduct their industries and maintain their public utilities, those countries of Latin-America which, while professing neutrality, were at heart, and in action ardent supporters of Pan-Germanism found themselves forced to choose between continued allegiance to Prussian autocracy and adherence to strict neutrality.

Complete acquiescence with the diplomatic suggestions of the United States in regard to future trade relations with those neutrals of Northern Europe who are equally culpable has not been given by the Latin-American republics, but they have to feel yet the full force of the embargo. Unfamiliar with the true spirit of America, those countries continue to court that disaster which will inevitably overtake them if they fail to read the determination of the United States underneath the courteous phrases of its diplomatic communications.

INSECTS SPOIL A BRIDGE.

Bored So Thoroughly Into the Supports as to Render It Unsafe.

In a little over three years the teredoes, the pile borers, and limnoria, a little sand flea bug, have entirely covered some of the piling of the South Bay bridge at Aberdeen, Washington. Probably all of the piling except those treated with a coat of cement have been seriously damaged. Heavy traffic over the bridge has had to be suspended for a time. The teredo, which enters a pile through a hole hardly larger than that made by a pin, proceeds to bore his way through the centre of a stick in holes frequently nearly half an inch in diameter. How he ever got into the piling through the little hole on the outside is something of a mystery, for the teredo is a water worm that looks much like an ordinary slug. Perhaps he enters the wood when a baby.

While the teredo works inside the piling the limnoria works entirely on the outside, eating away the softer wood. In appearance it resembles the sand flea very much.

Neither one of these destructive insects works in fresh water and are not found as far up the Chehalis River as either Aberdeen or Hoquiam.

AIRMEN INCINERATED.

Lieut. Rainboth and Cadet Manson Killed in Accident.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 26.—Lieut. Rainboth, of Ottawa, and Cadet Manson, Canadian aviators, who had been here about two months in training, were incinerated in an aeroplane accident yesterday. Their identity was made known by Royal Flying Corps officers last night. Both of the men were members of the Royal Flying Corps for several months previous to coming to Fort Worth.

Investigation proved the men were burned to death after they struck the ground. It was said that the machine was flying at a height of two hundred feet when it struck a "side slip." When the machine struck the ground the gasoline tank was torn open and ignited by a spark. The men were strapped in, and with their machine and clothing afire were unable to remove the straps.

CATTLE MARKET

There was practically no market at the Union Stock Yards yesterday, only about seven cars of stock arriving. Business was therefore almost entirely suspended, the few buyers present cleaning up most of the small offerings at Monday's prices. There were some enquiries for hogs. The full receipts were seven cars, with 161 cattle, three calves, and 77 hogs.

Tells How Huns Cast Net Over Roumania During Neutrality Period

Bucharest Editor Reveals Corruption in Which Germans Paid 36,000 Francs—Sought the Aid of the Masses

CAUSED A FURORE

How Germany vainly spent millions of francs to corrupt Roumania during the period of neutrality of war, is disclosed in articles by Constantin Mille, editor of L'Adeverul, and Deputy for Bucharest, in the Roumanian National Parliament, which appeared in the Paris Journal and caused a furore in the French capital. Every public function, the army, the government, the press and institutions of learning were the objects of Prussian intrigue and lavish distribution of gold by the plotters.

An official inquiry ordered by the Roumanian Government after the declaration of war established the fact that during this period German propagandists widely scattered bribes to gain political favour with influential Roumanians, and as the trend of the country turned toward the Entente Allies, the audacity of Prussian intriguing grew.

Spent 36,000,000 Francs.

These activities are attributed to German agents by Mr. Mille for the six months: Spent 36,000,000f. ($7,200,000), purchased outright two leading newspapers, attempted to buy others, established pro-German journals, dictated the names of the War Ministry, organised an opposition political party; gains control of landowners' syndicate, founded pro-German "educational" centres, sought to prostitute the labour movement, established "benevolent societies," sent leading German Socialists on propaganda visits, corrupted the nation's railroad administration. It remained for Germany to organise a party which would assume power in the event of the fall of the Bratiano Cabinet, naturally a party concealing its suspicious activity under the cloak of a democratic liberalism. Their agents were swooping down on every part of the country, showering handfuls of gold. The syndicate of landowners was by this means won over to the Teutonic Powers. The president of the syndicate was obliged to acknowledge the receipt of one million francs as commission on a contract of cereals."

Mr. Mille describes how university and labour centres were objects of the pernicious propaganda.

"Of a sudden Henry Izvorano, a poor wretch, was discovered founding banks, lending money, establishing so-called benevolent societies, the members of which, instead of pouring out subscriptions were receiving relief. The syndicalists, on the other hand, adopted the humanitarian banner. They received frequent visits from famous propagandists of German social democrats, such as Suedekum and Parvus, who have done the same tricks in Bucharest as in Rome.

Corrupted Railway Employees.

"To complete the work of corruption it was necessary to organise contraband. Under the pretext of facilitating the transportation of petrol, linen and cattle the co-operation of government agents and particularly railroad employees was invaluable.

"Unlimited sums were devoted to this dirty work. Employees of frontier posts have come rapidly into fortunes; plain gendarmes received sums varying between 10,000 and 20,000 francs. The scandal became so great that the government, though anxious to drop the veil over it, was forced to begin an inquiry, which, although as yet incomplete, has resulted in the abolition of the whole frontier service.

"It is unnecessary to quote a few sorry results of these misdeeds: Of Colonel Jonescu, caught in a flagrant act of espionage and brought to the grave of a suicide; of Colonel Stourdza, ancient head of the military school, condemned to death for treason; of Colonel Grainciano, shot; of General Socek, accused of having purloined the plans of the Cernovoda Bridge from Count Czernin.

"Such work of corruption could not but leave most grievous results. It was, among many other things, the cause of the first Roumanian reverses on the battlefield."

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

Ring, chiming bells, a joyous strain;
The glad Evangel tell again,
Which once angelic minstrels told
To humble shepherds in the wold.

Soft chanting in their earthward flight,
"To God be glory in the height,"
Those silvery notes benison flow,
Peace and goodwill to men below.

Ah, ne'er since first that blest refrain
Floated o'er wild Judea's plain
Has sorer need, or greater, been
For that sweet solace song, I ween.

For earth is rent with bitter strife;
Discord, Dissension, wrong is rife;
Hatred and crime, wreck, ruin, pain,
Close follow in war's grim train.

Then ring, ye bells, sing loud and clear
Message of comfort, hope, and cheer;
Bid lonely hearts, distressed, forlorn
Rejoice, for Christ to-day is born.

The Prince of Peace, whose mighty sway
The powers of earth and heaven obey;
All gloom let gladness now dispel;
He reigns supreme, and all is well.

MORE BOX CARS.

C. P. R. Built Over Ten Thousand During the Year.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—During this year the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has built over ten thousand box cars, in addition to many ordered from outside. The business of the railroads has increased so enormously since the Government undertook to supply Great Britain with foodstuffs and munitions, that there is a considerable scarcity of cars, though the situation is being ameliorated through the efforts of the Canadian Railway War Board.

VICTORY LOAN

Payments due on January the 2nd may be made at any time to and including January the 11th. Scrip Certificates will be delivered in exchange for payments then due. Payments due January the 2nd must be made at the Bank branch mentioned in the application.

The extension of time to January the 11th is given for the convenience of subscribers and Banks so that subscribers will not be unduly detained waiting their turn at a Receiving Teller's wicket, as would most likely be the case if all payments had to be made on one day only. Subscribers should not wait until January the 11th, or a day or so before, and thus create the situation sought to be avoided. In every case, interest at the rate of five and one half per cent per annum from January the 2nd must be paid if payment is not made on or before the 11th.

For the convenience of subscribers, by arrangement of the Canadian Bankers' Association, Banks will remain open on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, January 3rd and 4th, and on the afternoon of Saturday, January the 5th. Evening hours 7.30 to 9.30. Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

It has been brought to the attention of the Finance Department that a considerable number of subscribers, who have deposits with Banks, are under the impression that their Banks will take care of their January payments by automatically debiting their accounts with the necessary payments. This is incorrect. Each and every subscriber must personally arrange for these payments.

Preparing Him For Matrimony.

In South Africa some of the savage tribes have a peculiar ceremony which they put the matrimonial candidate through previous to his entering the marriage state. His hands are tied up in a bag containing five ants for two hours. If he bears unmoved the tortures of their stings he is considered qualified to cope with the nagging and daily jar and fret of married life.

"THE FILM OF FEAR"

The Ford girl and her sister had evidently just come in and rushing to the room found evidence of some one having been there. The monkey had been shut in a closet and by opening the door I had of course released it. Fearing discovery they arranged to flee at once. Jane Ford went uptown. Her sister remained to pack up her belongings.

"The visit to your hotel, the attack on you, was a crazy inspiration of the moment. Not knowing that my wife was following her, and having seen me on the sidewalk on Fifty-seventh street, as she drove away Miss Norman naturally felt that if she could get you, Mrs. Morton, out of the way, she would be perfectly safe in going up to your rooms.

"Even when alone with your daughter she did not attempt to do her any serious bodily injury but contented herself with hurling the ammonia in her face, counting, no doubt upon the shock that would result. As I have said, the woman is mentally a little unbalanced. The things she does are not normal."

"Nevertheless, they came very near being fatal," Mrs. Morton remarked grimly. "The doctor informed me that the fright, the shock of her experience, might readily have caused Ruth's death, or upset her reason."

"I do not doubt it," replied Duvall. "The woman has all the cunning of an insane person. She showed it, when overcome by the sight of the death's head seal upon the screen at the theatre, she so quickly recovered herself that she was able to deceive me completely regarding her escape.

"Both she and her sister realized that it had become necessary for them to leave the city. Marcia Ford, taking the monkey with her in a cab, hastened uptown to join her sister at the latter's apartment. She knew that I was not following her for she had seen me drive off to join you, Mrs. Morton, at my hotel. They both thought themselves quite safe, and able to leave the city without interference.

"The arrival of my wife at their apartment caused them to hasten their plans. They realized that we were close upon their heels. Jane Ford knew that the ring containing the death's-head seal was about the only evidence that existed against her, yet she hesitated to throw it away, as it belonged to her father, and she prized it highly. With the cunning that she had exhibited throughout, she conceived the idea of hiding it in one of the tassels upon the handle of her umbrella.

"These tassels, as you perhaps know are usually made of round bits of wood enclosed in a covering of knitted silk. The girl removed one of the wooden balls and having embedded the ring in a ball of black sealing wax, put it in place of the wooden one. It was a most ingenious hiding place and one extremely unlikely to be discovered."

"How did you happen to discover it, Mr. Duvall?" Mrs. Morton asked.

"In this way. When my wife called my attention to the spots of black wax on the tray of the candlestick, I saw at once that a far larger amount of the wax had been melted than would have been required in making an ordinary seal. The impressions on the warnings the woman sent were very small and flat, so as to readily be inserted in the envelopes containing the letters without being bulky, or becoming broken while passing through the mails. But here were spots of the wax that had dripped down as large as a silver quarter and larger. What I wondered, had caused the woman to melt so large a quantity of wax?

"I attempted to put myself in her place and to think what she would do to hide the seal ring. The idea of embedding it in a ball of the wax occurred to me. But having done this what would she do with the ball? It was not an easy thing to hide; in her purse, her satchel, it would have attracted attention at once. Then I noticed the round black ornaments hanging from the umbrella, with their silken cords and tassels. What better place to hide the ball of wax.

"In order to test my theory I twice attempted to take the umbrella from her on her way here, as though to relieve her of the trouble of carrying it. In both instances she drew back at once and refused to allow the umbrella to leave her possession. This action on her part convinced me that my guess had been a correct one. The subsequent finding of the ring broke down her assurance. As you know, she has made a complete confession."

"Poor woman," Ruth Morton remarked. "What are you going to do with her?"

"That rests with you, Miss Morton. If you decide to prosecute you can readily do so. The penalty for sending threatening letters through the mails is not a light one. And her attacks upon you, under the circumstances, is a very serious matter indeed."

Ruth turned to her mother.

"I think we ought to let them go," she said.

"And have the same trouble over again," Mrs. Morton replied. "I could never feel safe with that woman at large."

"I do not think she will trouble you again, Mrs. Morton," Duvall replied. "She is thoroughly frightened. All her assurance has disappeared. She begs that she and her sister be allowed to return home at once. It seems that some relative in Rochester has offered them a home there, and they were going to join her when we intercepted them."

"Then let them go," Ruth Morton exclaimed. "I certainly do not wish to cause them any harm, especially as you tell me the woman who originated the whole thing is mentally not quite right."

"She is certainly unbalanced so far as her grievance against you is concerned. But I feel sure that if you were to explain matters to her and let her understand that your action in losing her the position at the studio was quite impersonal on your part, she will realize the folly of what she has done, and come to her senses."

"I will do it," said Ruth. "I do not want to injure her any more. Let them go home in peace."

"Very well." Duvall rose to go. Permit me to say, Mrs. Morton, that I admire your daughter's generosity very much. Good morning." He and Grace bade their hosts good-bye and took their leave.

"She's a lovely girl," Grace remarked, as they drove to their hotel. "I like her immensely."

"Then you aren't jealous of me any more, because I so suddenly became a motion picture 'fan'?"

"Richard!" she laughed. "Don't be silly. I suppose I shall always be jealous of you when a girl as beautiful as Ruth Morton is concerned. After all to be jealous is only a woman's way of paying tribute to another woman's charms."

Duvall laughed.

"It was Miss Ford's way, too," he said "but as a means of showing one's appreciation it had its faults."

But She Liked It!

Very strong peppermints are grandfather's favorite confection. One day, says the Christian Herald, he gave one to four-year-old Marjorie and waited slyly to see what she would do when she should discover the pungent flavor of the candy. A few minutes later he saw her take the partly eaten peppermint from her mouth and place it on a table beside an open window.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Don't you like the candy?"

"Oh, yes," replied Marjorie. "I like it, but I thought I'd let it cool for a little while."

Sarcastic.

A young author, evidently desirous of benefiting by the experience of an older brother craftsman, once asked Richard Henry Stoddard how he had acquired such a mastery of Anglo-Saxon.

"I don't know how I ever did it," replied the poet, who, after a moment's reflection, added, "I think, however, I must attribute it to the fact that I never had any education."

A Medical Epitaph.

"He survived all his patients."

FAMILIAR WITH GREATNESS.

Mere Generals Didn't Impress the American Camera Man.

A story told by Francis A. Collins in the Camera Man shows that the direct methods of the American news photographer are not affected by surroundings that might cause others to grow self conscious.

A newspaper assigned an American to make a portrait of General von Bissing in the palace in Brussels. The photographer applied for permission to the authorities at Berlin, who received him courteously and, after considerable formality, detailed an officer to accompany him to Brussels. An appointment was made, and the two were admitted to the general's room. Previously, however, it had been explained to the American that under no circumstances was he to address the general. The officer began his explanation, but became confused at finding himself face to face with so distinguished a personage.

"Your excellency," he began, "we have come from Berlin—that is, if you will be so kind"— in his confusion he came to a full stop.

General von Bissing was seated at a desk and seemed to be very busy. The American photographer stepped forward.

"General, I am an American," he began without embarrassment.

"I see that," said the general, with a smile.

"I have come to take your picture," the photographer added without waste of time.

The situation was unprecedented. The officer stood aghast.

"Very well," replied General von Bissing. "Go ahead. What do you want me to do?"

"If you will step to the window," the photographer explained. "Now step this way, a little farther, please. No; this way." And to the horror of the attending officer the photographer laid his hand on the general's arm and arranged the pose. The picture was taken in a few seconds.

"Thank you, general," said the unabashed American easily.

"I hope your picture turns out well," replied General von Bissing, and the interview was over. Once they were outside the door, the officer expostulated:

"How did you come to address his excellency? It is most unprecedented. And you laid your hand on him. How could you do so?"

"Mein lieber freund," said the American, "I have photographed three American presidents, and a general more or less is nothing to me."

CONQUERING THE CRAMP.

Rules a Swimmer Should Follow When an Attack Comes On.

A cramp is merely a contraction of the muscles caused by the penetration of the cold. Obviously it could not of itself cause drowning. Its worst effect, according to the Popular Science Monthly, is to cause a panic which throws the swimmer off his guard, causing him to let the air out of his lungs and thus allow the air passages to become filled with water. The safeguards against such panic are absolute confidence in the floating power of the body and a demonstrable knowledge of the proper way to fill the lungs quickly to utmost capacity with air.

The moment a cramp is felt the swimmer should turn on his back and begin to gulp the air, making no effort to keep himself from sinking. As he sinks he slowly exhales under water, through the mouth, with the lips puckered as for whistling. If it is a stomach cramp the knees will be drawn up against the abdomen, but the swimmer should force them out, pushing on them with both hands and using all his strength until they are fully extended. This will no doubt cause great pain for a few seconds, but as soon as the legs are straightened out the cramp will vanish, and the body, buoyed up by the air in the lungs, will shoot up to the surface. There, still inhaling in great gulps and exhaling through puckered lips, the swimmer may float until he regains his strength or is picked up.

In case of cramp in the leg or arm the same system of breathing is followed, and the affected part is straightened out by sheer strength.

Sleeves In Workshops.

Although time and again workmen have been warned regarding the danger of loose clothing when working around machinery, it appears that many of them persist in ignoring the danger. As a result 986 workmen were killed in the United States last year by being drawn into the wheels of machinery or thrown to death when parts of their clothing became caught in rotating members. Loose sleeves and neckties are prolific sources of danger and should not be tolerated for a single moment by the careful worker.

A Pint of Bees.

The phrase "A pint of bees" was used in an English court, and the judge asked what it meant, but did not receive a definite answer. An expert in apiculture says there are 2,160 bees in a pint. Three hundred and thirty-six bees weigh one ounce. A swarm may consist of any number of bees from 2,000 to 40,000. Did anybody ever measure a pint of bees alive?

STORY OF A FORCED LOAN.

The Way Zapata Gave the Bankers of Mexico Two Surprises.

One morning Zapata, the Mexican leader, issued two proclamations. One was a prohibition edict closing the saloons, the other a command for the bankers of the city to assemble for a conference.

The bankers attended the meeting. They went in fear, dreading confiscation of their deposits. Only a few days before the armies of General Carranza had collected a "forced loan" of 10,000,000 pesos from the banks. What mercy could be expected of the bandit leader? Zapata's speech was short and to the point.

"Caballeros," he said, "my men are hungry. I want 50,000 pesos to feed them for a few days. You will pay this. I promise you protection. You may carry on your business without molestation as long as you do not aid the enemy. You may go when you sign the order for the money."

Thankful to escape with such a modest demand, the bankers did as they were ordered. Zapata kept his part of the bargain, and for months the city was better policed than it has ever been since Porfirio Diaz was driven from Mexico. But this is the strange part of the story—strange to one who knows the system of confiscation which has bled the business men of the country:

Ten days later Zapata paid back the 50,000 pesos.

ARMOR PIERCING SHELLS.

They Proved Their Superiority Over the Gathmann Explosives.

The late Louis Gathmann, the inventor, who died at the age of seventy-four years, labored long and hard and with zeal and enthusiasm to bring about the development of the high explosive shell which bore his name.

It was Mr. Gathmann's belief that it was not necessary to carry the high explosive shell through armor plate and into the interior of a ship, but that if a sufficient quantity were detonated against the outside of a ship it would be equally if not more destructive.

He secured from congress an appropriation for an eighteen inch gun capable of throwing a shell containing 500 pounds of guncotton. Our army and navy officers held that the only effective shell would be one of the armor piercing type provided with a delayed action fuse, which would burst the shell back of the armor.

Both types were tested at Sandy Hook about a score of years ago. The armor piercing shell penetrated an eleven inch plate and tore the backing to pieces. The Gathmann shell burst against the face of the plate, but failed to do more than dent it in the earlier rounds, finally cracking it in two in the last round. The superiority of the armor piercing shell was thus established.

She Was Fired.

In Hudson Maxim's "Dynamite Stories" is the following sad narrative:

"We once had a servant girl whom we nicknamed Jeopardy because she could not be prevented from pouring kerosene directly from the can upon a lighted fire. One day Jeopardy left us very suddenly, and she never came back. We were sorry she left, as Jeopardy was a good girl. It developed that she had chanced to find a fifty pound case of dynamite sticks in the woodshed, which she had been using to start the fire in the kitchen stove. Sometimes dynamite will work all right for such a purpose, but it is notional stuff and cannot be depended upon merely to burn. It was during one of those intervals that Jeopardy went."

The Ruling Passion.

"Jibway is such a confirmed fan that he applies baseball slang to every conceivable situation."

"I've met men like that."

"For instance, the other day Jibway attended what was expected to be a wedding ceremony. The bridegroom failed to show up. There was much excitement and confusion. The bride was so angry she vowed she would marry any man who would take the missing bridegroom's place."

"Well, well!"

"That was when Jibway sang out, 'Is there a pinch hitter present?'"

A Famous Beauty.

Mme. de Remusat had features so perfect that her contemporaries said she was worthy to sit as a model for a Greek goddess. The flesh of her face closely resembled alabaster, and yet she was not pale and did not give the impression of being in delicate health. Her beauty attracted universal attention to her, no matter where she went, and even in old age she retained most of her good looks.

Passes Him By.

Askett—Well, George, are you meeting with success now that you are a lawyer?

George—Yes, I seem to meet with it every place I go, but it is the other fellow who is on friendly terms with it.

A Word to the Boys.

A boy should not get the idea that he can score in the game of life through the errors of his opponents. To win he must be able to make hits.

Worse Than Before.

Mrs. Rite—Well, what do you think of Clara's voice now that she is through with her singing lessons?

Rite—It's no better and there's a lot more of it.

Caustic.

He—I shall not marry a woman unless she is my exact opposite. She—You will never find so perfect a being as that.

Make the Most of Your Spare Time

GIRLS and women anxious to fit themselves for positions in the business world should take advantage of the free evening schools which are conducted in most cities.

The really ambitious young person doesn't waste good time in wishing that he or she were capable of taking up such and such a line of work, but on the other hand, bravely begins to fit himself or herself for the position in view.

Many of the brightest and most successful people are self-made. They weren't ashamed to admit their limitations as far as "book learning" was concerned, but wisely started all over again, and instead of wasting their time on useless running around began a course in self-improvement.

THE MEANS TO AN END.

Now that the long autumn evenings are with us the really ambitious girl should, if she is at all alive to her best interests, turn these spare hours to good account. She should enroll in some evening class and apply herself seriously to the subject that appeals to her.

Little favoritism is shown in the business world to-day. The average person must "measure up" if he or she hopes to get any kind of an opening. It is what a man or woman can do (not what he or she is, or what his or her family connections are) that counts. Young people should remember this fact, and try their utmost to become as efficient as possible in whatever line they follow.

The girl with a practical turn of mind will find that her ambition to make her own clothes, or to know something about domestic science can be realized by taking advantage of the free evening classes. Many a young woman has become a creditable dressmaker, and has learned how to prepare wholesome, nourishing meals by attending the sessions given over to these subjects.

Every one admits that the average working girl should enjoy a reasonable amount of legitimate pleasure, for we all know that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," but the young man or young woman who looks upon life as a maze of crimson lights—who knows no serious moods, will find out before he or she has lived many years that this is a positively wrong view to take.

Level headed young people do not think this way. They know that youth is a period of wonderful promise, and they wisely resolve to make the most of their spare time. Thus when a worth while opportunity comes their way they are qualified to accept it.

Good reading will broaden and develop the person whose education was limited, and the girl who lives in a small town (where evening schools are unknown) should, by all means, if she feels the need of improving herself mentally, devote these long autumn evenings to a reading course, and she needn't select all "heavy" or "dry" matter. Light, humorous fiction, sparkling with clean wit, will refresh the most jaded nerves, and help the girl not sure of her English to express herself correctly.

We all need recreation, but we would indeed by acting most unwisely were we to give up all our spare time to the pursuit of pleasure. An evening now and then devoted to worthwhile study, or again utilising a spare hour to the reading of a humorous story when we feel out of sorts, will without a question, prove a gilt-edge investment.

Therefore the girl who wishes to get ahead must work for the goal she has in view. (Most of us know what work, and hard work, at that, is.) It is very fine and commendable to be ambitious—to "want to amount to something," but ambition without faithful and persevering effort counts for nothing.

COURSE IN SELF-IMPROVEMENT.

Enroll in some evening class if you live in the city and feel the need of improving yourself in any subject. In so doing you will indeed turn your spare time to good account.

Remember, constant running around leads to but one place:—"The land of bitter regrets." We all should study, for the reason that we need to know all we can, and if the opportunity to learn presents itself we should not hesitate, but on the other hand should quickly and gratefully take advantage of it.

Low Cost Dishes

WE American housewives are just beginning to feel the pinch of war prices and are wondering how to manage our table in the most nourishing and least expensive way. It may interest us to see one of the menus that our English sisters evolved after three years of war conditions.

Brittany Broth.

Wash and scrape one pound of carrots. With a round vegetable cutter scoop out the red part into balls the size of large peas—or cut it into dice. Grate the remainder on a bread grater. Melt two ounces of margarine in a saucepan. Add the grated carrot and one finely chopped shallot. Stir these over a low fire for five minutes, but without browning them. Add one pint of boiling meat or vegetable stock. By the latter is meant water in which has been boiled any vegetable, rice, macaroni, pulse, &c.

Add the carrot balls, four allspice, one bayleaf, and a little seasoning. Cover the pan to prevent evaporation and loss of flavor, and boil gently till the carrots are soft. Remove the spice and bayleaf, pour into the pan one ounce of flour mixed thinly and smoothly with half a pint of milk, and stir over the fire " boiling. The consistency of the soup must be that of good cream, so if too thick add more liquid, or if the reverse more thickening.

Pay attention to the seasoning. Many fail on this important point. Serve this broth with croutons.

Norfolk Hot Pot.

Take two pounds of middle or best end neck of mutton. Ask the butcher to cut it up for you, and see the bone is sent with the joint. Quickly wash and wipe the meat; merely dabbing it with a cloth is quite insufficient to cleanse it. Cut it into neat joints, removing any superfluous fat to save for use as suet or to render down as dripping.

Skin, core and quarter three sheeps' kidneys, the frozen ones will do nicely; peel and slice four ounces of onion into rings; wash, peel thinly and slice two pounds of potatoes and stalk and peel four ounces of mushrooms. Put layers of these ingredients into a casserole with a seasoning of salt and pepper and chopped parsley; the last layer must be of potato. Pour in one pint of meat or vegetable seasoned stock and cover the casserole for the first hour of baking in a moderate oven. During the last half hour's cooking take off the lid in order to brown the top potatoes.

Time will be one and a half to two hours' cooking, or till the meat is tender. Send it to table in the casserole, pinning a clean, folded table napkin around it outside. When in season, one dozen large sauce oysters and their strained liquor may be added. If mutton is expensive substitute beef, veal, rabbit or an old fowl, too tough for roasting.

Cheese Biscuits.

Mix two ounces of flour with three ounces of grated cheese. Add a few grains of cayenne and a little salt. Rub in lightly one and a half ounces of margarine and mix to a stiff paste with the yolk of an egg (the one left over from the apple mould) and a little water, if needed. Knead till smooth on a floured board, then roll it out lightly to about an eighth of an inch in thickness. With a round cutter stamp out the paste into biscuits about the size of the top of a sherry glass.

Lay a piece of greased paper on a baking sheet, lift the biscuits on to it, and bake in a moderately hot oven about five to ten minutes, or till a delicate biscuit tint. They burn easily. When cooked lift carefully, as they are very brittle. Half flour and half fine oatmeal could be used.

HAT HOLDER.

This is a way to keep a hat or cap that is rather pleasing to the eye when automobiling. Buy some elastic one-half inch wide or narrower and some ribbon three-quarters of an inch in width; cover the elastic and fasten it to your hat with snap fasteners. It is very easily put on and taken off and does away with holding the hat with your hands.

The ribbon, of course, is shirred on enough to allow the rubber to stretch.

AN ORRIS ROOT "TIP."

Tie a small piece of orris root (about one-fourth of an ounce if pulverised) in a small muslin bag and boil with the handkerchiefs for a few moments before taking out. After ironing they will have a delightful odor that will not be easily dissipated.

HOW TO PRESERVE EGGS.

To each pailful of water add two pints of fresh slaked lime, one pint of common salt, mix well. Fill your bowl half full with this fluid. Put your eggs down in it as one after June and they keep two being treated with the white of egg, if that flavoring is liked.

PICKS FEATHERS EASILY.

One need never dread duck or goose picking if this method is used. First kill, then place fowl in cold water and rub well through the feathers and especially the down. Squeeze out and dip in boiling water. Pick as you would chicken.

This also makes the fathers clean and white if one wishes to save them.

WORTH KNOWING.

Half a lemon placed in the water in which dish towels and kitchen cloths are soaked is said to sweeten them wonderfully.

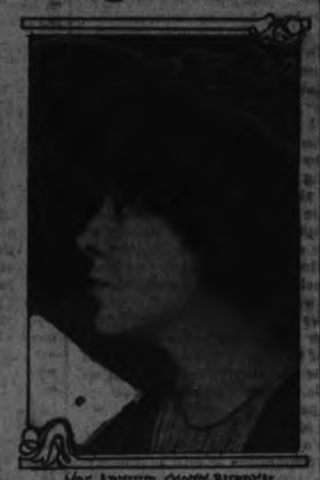
To keep nuts fresh throughout the year they should be packed in casks between layers of fine sand.

Frosted grapes make a dainty first course for a ceremonious luncheon, and are not difficult to prepare. It is only necessary to dip them after washing and drying, in lightly beaten white of egg, and then to dust thickly with powdered sugar and set in a bowl, surrounded with crushed ice for a couple of hours. The grapes may be dipped in Maraschino after being treated with the white of egg, if that flavoring is liked.

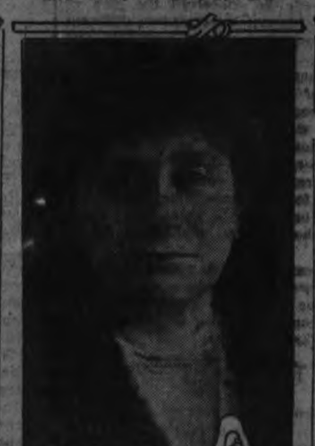
Camouflage Ballroom Features "Hero Land," Big War Spectacle

MRS. HENRY PAYNE WHITNEY

MRS. NEWBOLD LE ROY EDGAR



MRS. ARTHUR SCOTT BURDEN



MISS MARGARET CAMERON

Curiously Decorated Chamber of Louis XVI. Period To Be Reproduced at Great Allied Fete.

TO BE SCENE OF DANCE, SKATING AND THEATRICALS.

NEW YORK, Saturday.

"Temporary ballrooms" on the Louis XVI. scheme, "surprise" animals and a Balkan section are being prepared as a few of the more unusual and striking features of "Hero Land," the Allied War Relief spectacle, which is to open in Grand Central Palace on November 24. Robert W. Chanler is designing the surprises, strange fish from Cuban waters and animals. Mrs. Henry Payne Whitney is painting the designs from the Balkan section, which will occupy the entire third floor of the Palace and will include, beside the Balkans, the Orient and Russia.

The "temporary ballroom"—a camouflage of the time of Louis XVI.—is being revived. It will present a great ballroom of old French gray and gilding with what appear to be blue marble pillars, such as were designed in the eighteenth century for the fetes of Louis at Paris or Versailles. Paul Chalfin revives this old time camouflage of interior architecture. The ballroom will be used for dancing, ice skating and theatrical entertainments in the nineteen days of the relief spectacle and admission will vary from ten cents to ten dollars.

In this big spectacle the National Fruit, Flower and Fruit Guild, with Mrs. George D. Pratt presiding, and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler and Mrs. James Speyer actively associated with her, will have a garden with a well in the centre, attended by young girls in Persian costume. Among the things to be sold there are homemade jellies put in packages to be sent to the soldiers, and unusual drinks.

Cheshire Cheese in Replica.

The Red Cross tea garden will divide honors with the best of the exhibits to be shown. Miss Margaret Cameron is to be its chairman, Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar its vice chairman, and Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden chairman of its Committee on Decorations. In addition there is to be as a part of the spectacle a real Paris restaurant of the highest type, conducted by the leading chef of Paris, London and Monte Carlo, Abrazard, who is coming over here for the nineteen days. He will install another Café de Paris in the Palace, with real Gallic service and all this chef's recipes. Another unusual "eating place" will be a reproduction of the famous London Chop House the Cheshire Cheese, to be run by the British government, with, it is said, the very sign that has made the London establishment familiar to generations of touring Americans.

Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim is to head the streets of Jerusalem, a spectacle to be one of the most remarkable of all, presented by the Jewish committees. Mrs. J. Elliot Langstaff is to conduct the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the British Empire Exhibit, and Miss Dorothy Donnelly, the Stage Women's War Relief. The Armenian and Syrian Relief reservation will be a street filled with Armenians and Syrians, with Arab coffee houses a feature.

Through the streets of Mrs. Whitney's Balkans pageants of people will walk every night—Persians, Arabians and other Eastern nations. Well known young girls and men are to take part in these pageants. Ben Al Haggin may design and decorate a miniature theatre on the top floor. Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, of Chicago, who directed the Russian episode at the Rosemary Fête, is to design the exhibit of the American Ambulance in Russia, which will have among its participants Mrs. Lawrence Keene, Mrs. Edward N. Breitung, Mrs. Stanhope Nixon, Mrs. Charles de Loosey Oelrichs, Mrs. William Jay, Mrs.

Many Noted Men and Women Volunteer Services to Raise Funds for Relief Work.

MRS. WHITNEY PAINTS DESIGN FOR BALKAN EXHIBIT.

Charles K. Van Rensselaer, Mrs. William Disston, Mrs. Herbert Shipman, Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, Mrs. Walter Filer, Mrs. Miller Graham, Mrs. John Wanamaker, Jr.; Mrs. Cyril Radcliffe Dugmore, Mrs. M. Sergey Friede, Mrs. J. Legende and Miss Grace La Rue. The ambulance announces a Russian sable coat, worth $20,000, to be sold in shares. It has been donated to the Russian Ambulance, and Ina Claire is to wear it the first night.

Other Novel Exhibits.

Miss Gretchen Damrosch and Miss Julie Lentilhon are among the girls who will be at the "New Food" booth of the Junior Patriots of America. Mrs. Benjamin Guinness' Millicent Sutherland Ambulance booth is going to sell waffles and oysters, an odd combination. The Union des Arts, with Mrs. James B. Eustis at its head, is to have a shooting gallery and Mrs. Wharton's War Charities in France (with Mrs. Gordon Knox Bell in charge) will conduct an antique shop. The American Godmothers' League (for American soldiers in France), Red Cross Auxiliary 176, with Mrs. William Leonard Davis, Mrs. F. Franklin Bell and Mrs. Charles Van Rensselaer at its head, and Mrs. John J. Bowers, Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mrs. Francis H. Pendleton, Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mrs. Edward Van Ingen, Mrs. George Henry Warren and Mrs. W. Fitz Hugh Whitehouse assisting, will have for its exhibit donations from all the leading dressmakers of New York, and will also sell knitted sets for soldiers and knitting wool.

There is to be an official French war exhibit and the French may have a playhouse of their own. The Russian Ambassador, Mr. Bakhmetieff, and Mme. Bakhmetieff have accepted posts as patrons, as has Lord Northcliffe. Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, Mrs. J. Francis Clarke, Mrs. Robert D. Peyn, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Mrs. Charles H. Ditson, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Dulany Howland, Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Miss May Hare, Miss Mary Pyne and Mrs. Arthur Butler are among those who are to serve on the committee on donations, and William Adams Delano, Paul Chalfin, Otto Eidlitz, Johnston Livingston, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Joseph H. Appell, Jr., on the Committee on Decorations.

Timely Hints

TO keep baby happy and comfortable he should be bathed frequently.

Baby-bathing is a science and an art combined. It is one of the most important items in the daily regimen of a modern infant. To become expert in your practise of the art you must do the same thing in the same way many times.

It is a good plan to learn one correct way, and only one. If you will accustom yourself to routine and regularity, you will not forget the many little things necessary. Here is a list of the necessary articles:—

1. Two soft wash-cloths, one for the face and head, and one for the rest of the body. These should be placed on the little rack attached to your rubber bath tub.
2. Two small pitchers, one containing hot water, the other cold. These are necessary in case there is a change of temperature in the water.
3. A bath-apron for protection of your dress and for drying the baby. This apron is of two materials, rubber on one side and towelling on the other, and is made with buttons so that the towelling can be readily unbuttoned and washed.
4. Bath thermometer.
5. Castile soap.
6. Talcum powder.
7. Absorbent cotton.
8. Scissors.
9. Cold cream.
10. Liquid albolene for nose. Medicine dropper.
11. Soft lint, or gauze in small squares.
12. Toothpicks for cotton swabs to clean nose and ears.
13. Pincushion with safety pins and threaded needles.
14. Freshly prepared glass of warm boric-acid solution for eyes.
15. Clothes rack for baby's clothes. Clothes should all be hung in readiness, aired and warmed. They should be placed so that the first article required will be the nearest to reach. On weighing days, scales should be on a firm table near by.

Ninety-five degrees is the suitable temperature for a two months old baby. As the baby grows older this temperature can be lowered so that when he reaches his first birthday he will be able to stand a bath of eighty-five degrees with comfort. Always remember to use the bath thermometer; guessing the temperature of the bath with the arm or hand is uncertain.

First look at your wall thermometer to see that the room is not too cold. An even heat of seventy-two degrees Fahrenheit is the proper warmth.

KITCHEN EFFICIENCY.

Wear easy shoes, one of the pretty-overalls so much worn nowadays and have sleeves that turn well back from the wrists. Collect all ingredients and utensils before starting work, and find recipes likely to be needed.

Arrange which dish to tackle first, and if any ingredient has to be cooked, e. g. the apples for the mould, see it is put on in good time. A few notes on paper regarding times for cooking, dishes that can be cooked at the same time, will save much thinking and waste of fuel, and be sure to heat the oven in good time, but not hours before it is needed.

Have at hand plenty of dry, clean tea and kitchen cloths and all washing-up tools. Put dirty cutlery and plates into a jug of hot soda water; fill used pans with hot water to render them more easily cleaned, and pack plates into a plate basket, or even a box, in order to leave the table and dresser free.

Make a rule that food is always put into the larder on clean plates and there will be less sour food. These little details may sound trivial, but attention to them means just all the difference between a well and a badly managed kitchen.

Cottage Cheese

COTTAGE cheese, a delicious and nourishing food, can be made from skim milk which might otherwise go to waste, say the dairy specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

After removing the cream for coffee, the skim milk that is not needed for puddings, gravies, &c., can easily be made into cottage cheese. If the milk is sweet it should be placed in a pan and allowed to remain in a clean, warm place at a temperature of about 75 degrees until it clabbers.

The clabbered milk should have a clean, sour flavor. Ordinarily this will take about forty-eight hours, but when it is desirable to hasten the process a small quantity of clean flavored sour milk may be mixed with the sweet milk.

As soon as the milk has thickened to the consistency of thin jelly it should be cut into pieces the size of a walnut, after which the curd should be stirred thoroughly with a spoon.

Place the pan of broken curd in a kettle of hot water so as to raise the temperature for about twenty minutes, during which time stir vigorously with a spoon for one minute at five minute intervals.

At the conclusion of the heating, pour the curd and whey into a small cheese-cloth bag (a clean salt bag will do nicely) and hang the bag on a fruit strainer rack to drain.

After five or ten minutes, work the curd toward the centre with a spoon. Raising and lowering the ends of the bag helps to make the whey drain faster. To complete the draining, tie the ends of the bag together and hang it up. Since there is some danger that the curd will become too dry, draining should stop when the whey ceases to flow in a steady stream.

The curd is then emptied from the bag and worked with spoon or butter paddle until it becomes fine in grain, smooth and of the consistency of mashed potatoes.

Don't Complain About Trifles

HAVE you gotten into the habit of constantly complaining about trifles? If you have, you are in a fair way to ruin many of your chances of success. It is a fact, that is being constantly demonstrated, that we get very much what we look for, and if you are constantly complaining, you will be more than apt to always find something to complain about.

Perhaps there is no habit in the world which so easily grows upon one as the habit of complaint. If one chooses to look for trouble, from the time one rises in the morning until one goes to bed at night one may find innumerable things over which to fuss.

IMAGINARY TROUBLES.

Sometimes the coffee is not strong enough, or breakfast is late and one misses the car, or there are interruptions to business, or the office is too warm, or too cold, or someone breaks an engagement and the day's work is disorganized. There are many things to complain about, if we choose to look for them.

Often our troubles are entirely imaginary, and sometimes they are very real, but in either event it does not help matters in the least to be constantly talking about them and finding fault because we cannot have things run always in a perfectly smooth groove.

If the coffee at home really is too weak, it is an easy thing to get a good cup at a restaurant, if a good cup is an essential to our well being. If breakfast is really served too late for you to catch your train, in all probability this is because you get up at the very last minute and never leave yourself a margin of time.

If there are constant interruptions to business, it may be that this is partly your own fault. When people come in to see you, do you detain them yourself, or do you let them state their case and then give them courteously to understand that your time is fully occupied with your work? If some one breaks an engagement, is it not a fact that you are not always as prompt yourself as you might be in keeping an appointment.

But, no matter what the reason may be for your complaining, the fact remains that it does not help you one particle to be continually finding fault. Fault finding is usually a habit of mind, and person does not seem to affect another person at all.

If you keep your mind constantly engaged in worrying over trifles you take your mentality from some task where it is required, and you do not bring to your business that efficiency which you owe to it if you hope to make a success of life.

That is one reason that men do not seem to pay as much attention to details as women do. Sometimes they make a mistake in the large proportions which they are prone, but frequently they do not give attention to these small matters, because if they did, it would take their minds from the larger affairs in which they are concerned.

Women have a sort of stair sense, where detail is concerned, and this is one reason they are apt to worry about small things more than men do. But, while this attention to detail is a fine thing if it is well directed, if it is allowed to degenerate in futile scolding about things that cannot be bettered, then it becomes not only a detriment to the happiness and success of the one who is indulging in this petty characteristic but it becomes a real menace to society.

For, just as the constant dropping of water will wear away a stone, so the constant irritation of the mind over small, inconsequent things, will serve to undermine character, and the strength of the nation is established on the characters of the women as well as the men who compose it.

Even when the troubles are very real, it does not help at all to be in a constant state of rebellion. If the trouble can be mended, then one should give every effort to that mending. If nothing can be done to overcome it, and if it is a real trouble which must be borne, then it will not aid matters one bit to talk or fret about it, but will only add to the burden, because it will take one's thought away from the very channels where it is needed.

CHEERFUL WORKERS.

It is an old story, that of the man who would not hire a workman unless he knew that he whistled over his work. But it is true that the man or the woman who goes cheerfully about a task accomplishes twice as much as those who go grudgingly about the work laid out for them to do.

We all have our tasks. If we have not, we are slackers of the worst sort. But, perhaps, it may not occur to us that if we have our work, and then fail to do it, we are even worse than slackers—we are counterfeiters, for we are pretending to be doing our part when we are really doing nothing of the kind.

We have been given a chance in the work of the world, but, instead of taking that chance, we are wasting our energies in trifles, refusing to give to our task the best that is in us. And unless we do give our best, we may be very sure that our work will not reach the high standard which is so necessary at this time.

In the Home and in the Office

THE business girl who thinks that she has become indispensable to the firm that employs her will, if she is a sensible young woman, quickly change her views.

The shrewd or cleverest of us do not by any means know it all. Indeed, the longer one lives the more one needs to learn.

"KNOW IT ALL" EMPLOYES.

So the young woman who loses her head thinking that the business could not be run without her is indulging in a day dream from which she will, when she least expects it, be rudely awakened.

The average employer meets his or her help half way, and in a great many cases more than half way. He or she is willing and glad to recognise true worth, but has only contempt for the "know it all" type of employe.

The young woman who has perhaps developed a noticeable degree of efficiency is not so much of a wonder after all. Continued effort in the same direction generally results in one's becoming more or less capable, but there is always a lot more to learn.

Girls who have made good should keep quiet about it. After all, every one is expected to do satisfactory work. Of course, some make a fine showing, meanwhile receiving many plaudits for their accomplishments, but no one, no matter who he or she is, or what his or her work may be, is indispensable. Any one's place could be filled without an effort, and always with the possibility that the newcomer would do far better work.

The young woman who holds a position of trust, is in honor as well as in duty bound to respect the confidence placed in her. Such girls know the "inner workings" of the business with which they are connected, but these facts must not and are not, by the right thinking young woman, mentioned outside the office.

If money is "tight," the market "shaky" and other disagreeable truths are staring her employer in the face, these matters should not be discussed with male friends, or in fact with any one.

The good man or woman who signs the pay roll check—to whom we are indebted for our week's salary, is deserving of our highest and most considerate regard, and if we can make our services truly valuable to him or her, or in a measure become indispensable, we are in conscience bound to do so; but right here we must rest on our laurels. We should not lose our heads, or become imbued with the idea that the business would immediately begin to lose life or die a sudden death if we were to withdraw from it.

Good work is always stamped with the operator's individual distinguishing mark; and none can wrest that distinction from him or her.

RELIABLE OR UNDEPENDABLE?

It's balm to the nerves of a busy man or woman to have help that can be relied upon. These employers know to the letter what such and such an operator can and cannot do, so if we are giving satisfaction, the business is running smoothly and we receive our salaries promptly on time, our lines are, indeed, cast in pleasant places; but we must not think our services are so wonderful that they could not be duplicated.

On the other hand we should humbly admit our limitations, wisely resolve to become more competent and demonstrate this sensible resolution by disposing of each task as well as we possibly can.

TOUGH MEATS MADE PALATABLE.

Braising is an excellent way of cooking rather tough meats, as the long, slow cooking softens the meat and yet all the nourishment is preserved in the gravy.

A fowl that is tough should always be cooked in this way. Take a casserole just large enough to hold the fowl. Cover the bottom with slices of fat bacon, add thick slices of onion, carrots and turnips and put in the fowl. Cover the dish and let it cook on the top of the stove for fifteen minutes. Then add a pint of hot water. Place in the oven. Let it simmer an hour or longer, according to the age and size of the fowl. Two hours will be needed for an old bird. Dish the bird. Put the vegetables around the dish and pour over it a gravy made from the stock.

Kidneys make a comparatively cheap and delicious supper, luncheon or breakfast dish either grilled or stewed. To stew the kidneys scald, skin and cut them in halves, take out the small hard piece and rub in seasoned flour.

Heat a little dripping in small casserole, put in the kidneys and fry them brown. Take them out and keep warm on a plate. Chop a small onion, fry in the casserole until brown, add a little flour, and brown. Add a teaspoonful of sharp sauce and one of tomato sauce or ketchup. Pour in slowly as much water as required, stirring to keep smooth. Return the kidneys to the pan and simmer for about an hour. Skin off any scum and flavor with sherry.

APPLE GAME.

Guess the answers to the following questions, which may be placed upon a blackboard or large sheet of white paper in sight of all:—

1. What apple reminds you of the European war?
2. What apple reminds you of home?
3. What apple reminds you of a fowl's disease and a fastening?
4. What apple reminds you of a vacant top and success.
5. What apple reminds you of a useful animal?
6. What apple suggests abundant means?
7. What apple is not weak?
8. What apple is most attractive for lovers?
9. What apple pleases the farmer?
10. What apple is valued by the traveler?

The answers to the above questions are:—1. Northern Spy; 2. Mother; 3. Pippin; 4. Baldwin; 5. Horse; 6. Wealthy; 7. Stark; 8. Lady Sweet; 9. Early Harvest; 10. Porter.

MILK IN STOVE POLISH.

If stove polish is moistened with milk it will give a higher polish and the stove remain black much longer than if water or vinegar is used.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Messages In Plants

A Man and a Girl Converse Through Flowers.

By ETHEL HOLMES

Ethan Atwater was a well educated young man, with a fortune, good looks, good health and a good mind. His occupation was both occupation and amusement. He studied and did some scribbling, occasionally sending very pretty verses to magazines.

Atwater lived in a small place, but a very old one. Many of the dwellings stood alone and often in the center of large grounds. His house was quaint, and the grounds were a marvel of good taste. On entering his study one would immediately be impressed with the fact that it had been furnished and decorated by an artist with an exquisite sense for harmony in color. Through the window appeared grounds that had evidently been arranged by a landscape gardener. Both the artist and the gardener were Ethan Atwater.

Atwater had been drawn to one or two different women at different times, but had sooner or later discovered something in one or the other to offend his sensitive taste, something that either smacked of coarseness or an absence of ideality. Not that he was a sentimental man. He may rather be called a man of sentiment. The sentimental was as repulsive to him as coarseness.

On Atwater's return from a journey he found that the place next adjoining his on the east had changed hands. The same day he saw a young lady go into the house whose appearance struck him favorably. Her apparel was in good taste. Her hat appeared to have been made neither for a giant nor a dwarf. The colors of which her costume were composed were subdued. Her face, too, spoke of innate refinement.

It was in the autumn that Atwater first saw this girl, and nearly every day after that he observed her either going out or coming in or at a window. His first impulse was to assume the privilege of a neighbor and go in and call on the newcomers, but it occurred to him that he would take pleasure in studying the girl from the brief distance that separated their abodes. One of his theories was that a refined person could not be unrefined; that an ideal person could not be commonplace. If she were both ideal and refined she would show her ideality and refinement to him without an acquaintance. If there was a lack of either he would be able to detect it without speaking to her or being spoken to by her.

Within a few weeks he had witnessed acts on the part of his neighbor indicating traits that he considered usual in if not essential to a refined nature. He saw her receive a child who came to her house and knew at once that her heart warmed to children. He was standing at a window when she attended an old lady to her carriage and was sure that she sympathized with the aged. These were but individual instances of Atwater's observations, no one of which was of supreme importance, but all, taken together, indicated a nature such as he could admire and revere.

Then he went away for awhile. When he returned he made a discovery. The young lady next door did not appear either in the grounds or at a window. He began to fear that he had seen her for the last time. That fear was akin to pain. He was tempted to make inquiries, but knew no one to ask. After a week of chafing one afternoon he saw her drive up to the house in a carriage and received with demonstrations of affection by the other members of the family. Atwater longed to jump out of the window and take her in his arms himself. But this was an impulse that didn't count for or against his natural idiosyncrasies.

Later he made another discovery similar to the first. He saw a very handsome young man leave the house next door and the young lady follow him out to the gate, apparently loath to have him depart. This time it was revealed to him not only that the young lady was a person of interest to him, but that he objected to her being of interest to any other man. From this point she ceased to be a matter of study by observation. She was to be appropriated.

My story up to this point has been very one sided, and it must continue for the present to be one sided. It is not to be supposed that a girl may be under constant observation by a young man next door without some observation on the part of the girl. Atwater had never seen her looking at him, though he had never failed to look at her whenever she appeared. Had he caught her doing so he would have considered her as overstepping the bounds set for a modest young woman. That she did not do so convinced him that she did not consider him worth looking at.

One morning in March Atwater saw a man digging up the soil in the yard in the adjoining grounds. It was plain that the ground was not intended for vegetables, but for flowers. In another week the young lady came out with a few light garden implements and a dainty little basket full of seed and began to plant.

A few days later Atwater spaded a flower bed in his own grounds and planted seeds. His garden was protected on three sides by bush plants but could be observed by the neighbor on the east. A warm wave germinated the seeds in both gardens, and tiny green lines were soon visible. Nothing unusual was to be noticed in the lady's garden, but in Atwater's a careful observer would have seen lines of tender green in which could be traced the letters "I Love You."

As soon as his letters were large enough to be read from the next house the young man kept a constant watch with a view to discovering whether they were observed. Days passed, and the delicate lines were lost in the exuberance of the growth, but never did the planter see a face at the window. If his declaration had been seen it had not met with any response.

Atwater argued in this wise: If she has seen the flower words and is a person of ideality, refinement and kindliness she will make a reply even if unfavorable. So he waited and watched. Weeks passed, and neither the heavens, the air nor the earth gave a sign. Atwater's ideality was giving way before the impatience of love, and he was about to try some more commonplace method. Then one morning when the air was clear and the sun was shining on the garden opposite he fancied he saw in a new growth just appearing above the soil that which might be letters, but since it came up unevenly he could not be sure at so great a distance. In another moment he had a pair of glasses leveled at the flower bed. The only growth that looked like letters spelled "No."

Atwater was momentarily discouraged. But it was evident that there was more coming up which might change what appeared to be a refusal. Again the impatience of love impelled him to push for an immediate response, but his ideality again triumphed. He concluded to wait. Realizing how he should suffer watching for a response to his message to grow out of the ground, he absented himself for a time. He returned late at night, and the next morning, to his satisfaction, he saw plainly letters in the adjoining garden to read, "I Know You Not."

It is high time that we should have a view of what is transpiring in this ideal affair from the other side of the garden wall.

Miss Edith MacGregor was looking out of her window one morning when she saw a young man leave the next house and saunter down the street. It was enough for her that he was nice looking and that he lived next door. Unlike Atwater, whose musings on first seeing her were what she might be, she mused on something to happen and, womanlike, at once decided to place herself on the vantage ground of invisibility—that is, she would not be seen when within doors and she would appear unconscious of the fact that a nice looking young man lived in the house next door.

While Atwater was assuming that she did not consider him worth looking at she was constantly observing him from a dark room that she had fitted up for that especial purpose. Nevertheless when at a window she took care not to look into the adjoining place and never appeared at all except when becomingly dressed.

And so it was that Miss MacGregor was perfectly aware that Mr. Atwater admired her before he supposed she was aware of his existence, and she knew he had been pierced by one of Cupid's arrows before he knew it himself. She had concluded to have a garden that they might have an excuse to meet with only a hedge between them, and when he planted seeds to spell "I Love You" she had seen the letters traced out in the soil before the seeds were put in the drills. Moreover, she had purposely planted in her response the letters "No" in thin soil in order that they might grow up before the others to give her lover a temporary disappointment.

Miss MacGregor knew very well that Mr. Atwater was a man of an ideal nature both from his face, which she had carefully studied with a glass, and from his method of making love. She did not therefore propose to destroy any illusions he might have. She knew very well that no man in love will be long satisfied with communications that must take the time necessary to grow out of the ground, and awaited her lover's next move. So when she received a note begging permission to begin a correspondence on paper she replied that it would be a pity to descend from beautiful and natural letters to artificial ones made with a combination of chemicals.

To this Mr. Atwater replied that, while the flower words were beautiful and not usual, they were very slow. And he made a request to be allowed to call.

Miss MacGregor delayed to reply to this note, but a day or two later appeared in a becoming morning costume in her garden with a small watering pot. Atwater saw her and lost no time in going into his own garden with gardening tools. The lady was watering her plants when, hearing a sound, she looked up with well feigned surprise to see her lover craning his neck over the hedge. He remarked that the plants needed rain, and she replied that there seemed to be no sign of rain.

Atwater looked for an opening in the hedge, but did not find any. In the rear there was a fence bounding both properties, and, getting up on it, he passed the hedge. He was very much rattled. The girl was perfectly cool. She talked about her flowers as though there was no other subject in existence. But presently she invited him to inspect some that were in the house, and they passed in together. Then and there they began the speech where they had left off in the language of flowers.

Mr. Atwater has long been a married man, but he found, he fondly believes, that he attracted the attention of his wife and won her love by having declared his own in flower words.

USE FOUR HOUR HANDS.

Then Your Watch Will Keep Tab on All Our Standard Times.

The average commercial traveler who journeys about the United States has to keep a close watch on his timepiece to see that it is telling the truth. There is an hour's difference in time when you enter and leave some cities, and it's an important matter that you do not forget to set your watch back or forward an hour, according to which way you are traveling. If you overlook it you may miss a train.

An express official who travels almost all the time and is so busy that he sometimes forgets to change his watch at Detroit, Mich., for instance, or at Dodge City, Ia., has frequently had an experience of this kind. Sometimes he has arrived an hour ahead of time or perhaps an hour after a train has left, giving him time enough for reflection.

Recently he conceived the idea of making his watch tell all four different times—eastern, central, mountain and Pacific. He went to a jeweler and had extra hour hands put on his timepiece, each of a different color, so that he can recognize it at a glance on the face of his watch. For instance, the ordinary hour hand, set at eastern time, is silver; a blue hand, set an hour back, represents central time; a red hand, for mountain time, is set two hours back, and a green hour hand, three hours back, represents Pacific time.

You can do this to your own watch. The jeweler will make a set of hands of these colors and alter your watch for a consideration of a few dollars.—New York World.

THE FAMILY LIFE.

Its Normal Restraints Make Man the Master of Himself.

Modern assailants of the family suppose that by destroying it they can emancipate the individuals who compose it. In their delirium they conceive that the goal of life is the throwing off of all restraints, says William Roscoe Thayer in Harper's Magazine. Nothing could be more mistaken.

Normal restraints, those which build up a man and make him master of himself, are really the means by which he gets his true freedom. A little water in a boiler will generate enough steam to run a locomotive; the same volume on the ground is a puddle and no more.

Discipline is the barrel of the gun, the rudder of the ship. The same law applies to human beings, and such an institution as the family has proved itself indispensable to the highest development of its members.

The man who thinks that by casting off its ties he gets a larger freedom deceives himself. At most he exchanges a higher plane for a lower and secures whatever privileges that descent implies. He retreats toward the plane of the beast, out of which it has been man's mission to rise and climb. He accepts the bondage of a more insistent selfishness.

AUSTRALIAN STORE TALK.

Their Term "Soft Goods" Means What We Call Dry Goods.

The United States is not the only country that takes liberties with the mother tongue. Australia speaks a language of trade that would not be understood elsewhere. For instance, "dry goods" is seldom heard, the Australian term being "soft goods." This generally applies only to piece goods, with some inclusion of ready to wear articles. The house or shop that carries articles for men's wear is known as a "mercery" and never as a haberdasher's. "Haberdashery" means what in America is covered by "notions."

The shop that handles women's wear is known as a "draper's," and the organization composed of members of the trade is called the Master Drapers' association. The "mantle" department is the one that handles women's coats and suits. The manager of the store or shop is known as director, and an "assistant" is a salesman.

"Warehouseman does not mean a man who stores goods for others, but a wholesale dealer in "soft goods" and the like. The business of what is known in America as that of warehousemen is conducted in Australia by "bulk stores."

Placing Himself.

"Let me see," said the editor to a new acquisition, a graduate of the college of journalism. "I hardly know what to put you at."

"Until you decide," replied the man, "I'll sit down and write a few leading editorials."

The Difficulty.

"A man should take the bull by the horns," advised the sage.

"Yes," agreed the fool. "The trouble is to find a bull that will stand for it."

Experience.

"Are you a weather expert?"

"I'm trying to be one kind. I can stand all sorts of weather without saying a word about it."

PRANKS BIG SHELLS PLAY.

Curious Effects of High Explosives Used in Modern War.

The explosive force of the big shells used in modern war has produced many curious effects. In some cases these effects have been to deprive men of the power of speech, in others to restore it. In the same way hearing has been lost and also regained, while sight has been suddenly banished and as suddenly brought back.

But one of the most astonishing effects of all was that narrated by a French captain. It occurred while he was occupying an observation post in a tree. An eight inch shell happened to explode immediately beneath him, with the result that the displacement of the air buried him clean out of the tree. It also knocked him senseless for a few moments, and when he came to himself he made the amazing and disconcerting discovery that it had stripped him of his breeches, vest and tunic, leaving him, as he put it, "as bare as a worm."

Another soldier described the freak of a shell of which he was the victim. It exploded several yards away from him without doing him any harm. But it blew his overcoat from his back, and when he picked the garment up it was minus all the buttons.

The eccentricity of another shell was sworn to by a trooper, who was certainly a very close observer. He was standing between two horses when the projectile burst close by, killing both animals, but not injuring the trooper in the slightest.

OUR PAPERS ARE TRUTHFUL.

Only When Deceived, as a Rule, Do They Wander Into Mendacity.

"Our papers seldom lie." Deems Taylor says so, and he should know, having been a newspaper man himself. He states "that newspapers rarely print statements that are not at least poor relations of the truth.

"In the first place, competition among newspapers is too keen. Facts themselves are explosive enough and scatter plenty of libel suits in their wake as it is without a paper's deliberately hunting for trouble by printing fiction.

"Usually when an absolute misstatement has appeared in a newspaper the paper's chief offense is in having believed an untrustworthy source, a contingency difficult to guard against since any paper is more or less at the mercy of its out of town correspondents and news agencies. Any correspondent can fool any paper once, but it is to the credit of editors that an over imaginative correspondent rarely gets a second chance to exercise his talents.

"After all, the principal reason why our press does not print lies is that newspaper men as a class are honest, conscientious beyond the average and, according to their code, strictly honorable. Certain things may be permitted by that code that strike the layman as peculiar, but deliberate mendacity is not one of them.

A Dramatic Scene.

The most dramatic scene ever witnessed in Westminster hall was that trial in Henry VIII.'s reign when 480 men and eleven women appeared before the king and some of his great nobles with ropes around their necks on a charge of being concerned in the rising of the prentices on the previous May day. Fortunately they had good friends in three queens—Katherine, Mary of France and Margaret of Scotland—who begged for their pardon on their knees, and when Henry at last yielded to such supplications the prisoners, it is said, "gave a mighty shout for joy, throwing their halters toward the top of the hall." The stage has never produced anything to rival that dramatic moment.—London Graphic.

Merely a Symptom.

A prominent academician of New York defines culture as that breadth of view where our knowledge and interests extend beyond our own particular vocations and which enables us to meet with intelligent and sympathetic interest people of widely divergent activities and attainments, but out here in this garden spot of the world we suppose most of us will continue to regard it as not using a toothpick in public.

Real Trouble.

The local pawnbroker's shop was on fire, and among the crowd of spectators was an old woman who attracted much attention by her sobs and cries of despair.

"What is the matter with you?" a fireman said. "You don't own the shop, do you?"

"No," she wailed, "but my old man's suit is pawned there, and he don't know it!"

An Arabian Titbit.

Cheese today is not common among the Bedouin Arabs, butter being preferred. There is a substance closely corresponding to cheese mentioned in Samuel. This consists of coagulated buttermilk, which is dried until it becomes quite hard. It is then ground, and the Arabs eat it mixed with butter.

He is twice a conqueror who can restrain himself in the hour of victory. —Cyrus.

Platinum Retorts.

Platinum is used directly in the making of munitions of war and indirectly in all sorts of operations that are incidental to warlike operations.

To cite but one example, in the manufacture of cordite perfectly pure sulphuric acid has to be used, and sulphuric acid can only be perfectly purified in platinum retorts, each of which, by the way, represents a value of $50,000 to $75,000.

A Lot to Know.

When Disraeli was prime minister of England a good looking young man applied to him for a government position. "I know, sir," said the applicant wistfully, "how little I know."

"Dear me," said Disraeli, "as much as that? I haven't got half that distance yet."

To the Electors of the Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

At the request of a large number of my friends, I am a candidate for alderman in the Centre Ward. I appeal to you for your vote and influence in my behalf. My past experience in the City Council and my record when there is a good reason why you should elect me as your representative in Centre Ward.

I promise if elected to look after your interests and the interests of the whole city, in an efficient manner, without fear or favour.

I remain, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Yours very truly,

JOHN EDGAR

FRANK JENNE Says:

I wonder if the Canadian statesman who abolished the surtax on German goods would confess as to how and why he did it. Some ten years ago we were protected from the flimsy German stuff by an extra customs duty. For instance German cloth is always shoddy, and very clever shoddy. British weaves in all Semi-ready clothes when you "come to me."

INDICATIONS.

United States Position Is Not Changed

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27. — Conditions surrounding Count Czerin's proposals for a basis of peace caused officials here to feel some apprehension for their sincerity. There is a great disposition to feel that the object of the German plenipotentiaries is simply to protract negotiations as long as possible without any expectation of an immediate peace agreement. It can be stated authoritatively that the position of the American government has not changed in any respect with regards to its determination to enter into no agreement with a government which does not represent the free will of a governed people.

NOT NECESSARY IN THIS COUNTRY

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—Officials of the Railway Commission here commenting on the United States' nationalization of railways, said it would not be necessary to take any such action in Canada as we were not faced with the same difficulties here. At the same time it was felt that nationalization was a good thing for the United States.

The stock of J. A. Werner, hardware, was greatly damaged by water.

The loss of the Cockshutt Company is $10,000. Lyons' loss is $13,000, partly covered by insurance, and Werner's loss is about $5,000 on stock, caused by water, which is covered by insurance.

Germany's Peace Offer

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 27. —The Central Powers are willing to make an immediate peace on the basis of "no annexations and no indemnities," according to an official statement received from Vienna, via Berlin, to-day. All that is asked is that other belligerents pledge the same policies. The proffer of such a general peace was made in the formal reply to the Russian separate peace overtures.

YOUNGER MEN IN THE NAVY TO HAVE THEIR CHANCE

That is the Way in Which the British Press Regard the Retirement of Sir John Jellico and His Replacement by Sir Roslyn Weymss

SELECTION IS WELCOMED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A decision to let the younger men try their hands was responsible for the retirement of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe and his replacement as First Sea Lord by Vice-Admiral Sir Roslyn Weymss, according to authoritative information today.

The British press generally welcomed Weymss' selection although all accorded a warm eulogy to Jellicoe's work.

"His retirement," the Times said, "is more than personal. It implies consequential changes in policy, giving the younger men a chance."

"Admiral Jellicoe's retirement was desirable," the Mail asserted. "His qualities as a routine administrator unfitted him for the post of chief advisor in high problems of strategy and policy."

The Telegraph alone expressed open regret over the change and hoped for an explanation, fearing the switch at this time "make shake the public's faith in the navy."

The News and Express both urged that Weymss create a naval general staff. It was freely predicted to-day there would be a general shake-up of the Admiralty.

WAS A SURPRISE.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 27. — Prominence given to the retirement of Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe as First Sea Lord in favour of Vice Admiral Sir Roslyn Wemyss in morning newspapers, is commensurate with his great reputation and the place he long has held in public estimation. Notwithstanding the recent severe animadversion concerning the Admiralty from some quarters, several newspapers treat the announcement as a sensational surprise and two or three accompany their remarks with warm expressions of regret. The Daily Telegraph, one of these, calls for a further official statement and the reasons for Admiral Jellicoe's retirement.

On the other hand the Daily Mail, which long has complained against Admiral Jellicoe, says openly, that it cannot pretend regret. It adds that Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, deserves the thanks of the country for not shrinking from a painful duty. The Times, though less frankly outspoken, does not conceal its satisfaction and sees in the change a determination of the Government to give younger men a chance. It says: "We heartily congratulate the Government having once taken decision on accepting its full consequences at once."

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 27.— A joint military funeral service was held here to-day for the two aviators and mechanics killed on Monday. The body of second Lieut. Lawrence Rainbooth was sent to Ottawa. Cadet Manson will be buried here. Rainbooth and Manson were burned beyond recognition when their machine caught fire in mid air.

Railways Are Not Yet Satisfied

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Recognising the enormous increases in operating expenses of railway companies there is, generally speaking, little dissatisfaction amongst merchants and manufacturers because of the increase of fifteen per cent. on freight and passenger rates authorized by the Dominion Railway Board. The railway companies, however, are not yet content. They asked for a fifteen per cent. general increase, with the exception of coal, and according to Mr. D. B. Hanna, vice-president of the C.N.R., the aggregate increase granted when various modifications are taken into consideration, does not amount to more than ten per cent.

"That is entirely insufficient to meet the requirements of the situation," said Mr. Hanna, "and there is no doubt that in the immediate future the companies will be compelled to make application for a further increase."

"It will be a hard task to apportion the increase on the article for sale," said Mr. T. Marshal, traffic manager of the Board of Trade, "and the possibility is that manufacturers will have to absorb the increase in the trade in some way without putting it on the article."

In the case of coal where a flat rate increase of fifteen cents a ton is imposed, the consumer will have to pay the additional cost, but in the case of hundreds of other commodities the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers will have to make up the difference in some other way.

The increase in the passenger rates, however, will severely effect the travelling public.

GERMANY'S PEACE MOVE A CLEVER PIECE OF STRATEGY

Huns Trying to Persuade the Russian People That Allies Stand in the Way of Peace—Plan is Calculated to Embarrass the Allies as Much as Possible.

MORE CAMOUFLAGE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Germany is trying to persuade the Russian people that only the allies now stand in the way of peace. Peace terms announced to-day by Count Czernin, Austro-Hungarian Prime Minister to the Brest Litovski conference pledged the Central Powers' apparent adherence to the principle of "no annexations and no indemnities"— but only on condition that England herself agree to this same policy.

Continuing the terms seemingly concede to Russian demands on other peace aims. But the stipulation that Russia must secure the allies' adoption of all of Germany's principles, to say was for the oblivious purpose of attempting to convince the Russians that only her allies are holding up the restrictions of peace. The move was seen here as one of Germany's cleverest pieces of diplomatic strategy, calculated to embarrass the allies as much as possible. Czernin's bid for peace for the Central Powers makes these points:

Germany is agreeable to a policy of "no annexations and no indemnities."

Germany is disclaiming any desire to deprive any independent nation of political rights now possessed by it.

Germany is repudiating the idea of a Peace Council settlement of the future of certain independent states.

No mention was made in outlines of the Czernin's proposal as received here of any payment by Germany of damage for the ravishing of Belgium, of France and of Poland. No mention was made also of any future guarantee of world peace. Both points are absolutely essential in the view of the allies.

It was pointed out here to-day that under the German statemen of principles, Germany would insist on the return of all her colonies and would hold fast to Alsace Lorraine.

The Teutonic "concessions" found no echo here. Britain and her allies have already pledged complete acceptance of the true meaning of the phrase, "no annexations and no indemnities," which is included in the wider interpretation, "no forcible annexations and no punitive payments."

CZERNIN'S STATEMENT.

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Virtual acceptance of the peace terms offered by Russia was made by the Central Powers in a statement issued to the peace conference Tuesday by Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister. The Teutonic allies, however, cannot bind themselves to the Russian terms unless Russia's allies also recognize them and carry them out honestly toward the Central Powers. Peace without forcible annexations and indemnities is agreeable to the Central Powers and they will conclude general peace immediately on conditions equally just to all belligerents. The Central Powers share Russian condemnation of prolongation of war for purpose of conquest. Count Czernin agrees that the people have the right of self definition, but says that subject nationalities must solve their problems under laws of the countries under whose sway they live. The Entente Allies up to this time have not recognized the lawful right of Bolsheviki government to rule Russia and they have not agreed to the terms Russia preferred at the beginning of the Brest-Litovsk conference.

Mayor Duncan's Thanks

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I desire to take this opportunity of tendering you my sincere thanks for the renewal of confidence which you have expressed in my election by acclamation as Mayor of the City for 1918.

I desire to repeat my promise to put forth every legitimate effort to faithfully safeguard the best interests of our City—as your Mayor.

Being in touch with all the unfinished business that goes forward to the new Council of 1918, as perhaps no other member of the new Council will be, I strongly appeal to you to accord me all the assistance possible by a careful selection of the best men available for your Board of Aldermen.

There are many matters of great importance to the City's interests which are to be presented for the consideration of the Council of 1918, which will require the very best judgment of your civic representatives.

With assurances of your goodwill and gratitude for your many expressions of confidence during the past nine years, I extend my sincere good wishes for a bright and happy New Year.

Yours Faithfully,

GEO. H. DUNCAN.

NON-ESSENTIAL INDUSTRIES WILL BE MUCH CURTAILED

Government Operation of Railways in the United States Will Give Preference to the Factories Engaged in War Work

PRIVATE CARS GONE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.— Travelling de luxe will become a thing of the past under the government operation of railroads. Under Director McAdoo's regime the last ounce of efficiency will be demanded out of the present equipment. The private cars and extra fare specials already have been curtailed. Dining coaches and club cars will be next among the travel luxuries to go. Millionaires' magnificent palaces on wheels are now abolished. Needs for added track space and motive power sounded their demise. Of 1,200 private cars in the nation, only those are being used to-day in which railroad officials are forced to make quick inspection trips. McAdoo will give immediate attention to further war time economies. Cars are being taken off many railroads.

Theatrical troupes and circus performers are being forced more and more to use regular passenger equipment. A movement has been started by the Patriotic Education Society to curtail, if not stop, the transportation of race horses. Saving of fuel, track space, equipment and motive power from economies already effective is enormous, and McAdoo will go further to impress upon the people non-essential luxuries must be abandoned for war.

President Wilson's proclamation automatically places all the great industries of the nation upon an immediate war basis. Just as the great transportation lines reach out into every industrial centre, practically determining the success or failure of all commercial enterprise, so will the government determine what industries may survive or perish through ability or inability to move their products. Non-war products will be placed last in the list of commodities to be moved, particularly in the congested territories of the east and south. The Railelling public.

NOT LIKELY TO EMULATE ACTION OF UNITED STATES

However the Whole Railway Problems Will Undoubtedly Be Considered at the Next Session of the Dominion Parliament

RAILWAY WAR BOARD

Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—It is not considered likely here that the Canadian Government will emulate the United States in its most recent action regarding the possession and operation of railroads, though the whole railway problem will undoubtedly be one of the matters to be considered at the next session of Parliament. In the United States the railways were legally unable to combine for coordination of effort; in Canada, a virtual combine has already been effected for that very purpose.

Some months ago a railway war board was formed in Canada, on which is represented the directorates of all railways, the employees of the various branches of the service and the government. The head of this Board is Sir George Bury of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is thus practically Director General. The purpose of this Board is to coordinate effort, to do away with useless duplication of routing and to distribute rolling stock and motive power wherever necessary. By this means it is expected that the greatest efficiency possible and the greatest economy shall be secured. Already a great many cars which had "strayed" throughout the United States have been recovered as a result of the efforts of the new Board.

Under the new United States system pre-war earnings are guaranteed by the Government. In Canada the increase in freight rates announced yesterday by the Board of Railway Commissioners, will, it is estimated, insure such pre-war earnings on Canadian roads at least.

Neither the Drayton—Asworth report, nor the Smith report advocated complete control and operation of Canadian railways by the Government. The first advised that the C. P. R. be left as a private enterprise, but that the Government take over the others. The Smith report was strong for private ownership.

Already the Government has secured the ownership of the Canadian Northern, but does not operate it. It has also secured the ownership of the National Transcontinental railway, and is operating this in connection with the Intercolonial Railway. Canada is, therefore, already operating about six thousand miles of government owned road.

The United States in the past has not embarked upon Government ownership or operation at all.

The Railway War Board of the Dominion includes Sir Geo. Bury, chairman, Sir William Mackenzie, Howard Kelly, Carl Hayes, A. H. Smith, and Major Graham Bell.

BE KIND TO THE VETERANS.

A substantially warm welcome should be given the ladies of the Auxiliary of the War Veterans' Association, in their approach to the public in request of funds to help furnish the new club rooms of the Veterans. In the first place we should be liberal because it is a duty we owe to the men who have sacrificed themselves in hard, hard service, discomfort and sickness for our sakes and who, when they come back, more or less incapacitated, deserve not only decent, but generous treatment. Returned soldiers, do not get any too much recognition and reward from governments, even in their most generous moods.

Many may not be able to understand the need for club rooms for veteran soldiers. But they would do so if they could know of the warm spirit of comradeship developed in active service—fighting in a common cause, facing danger and death shoulder to shoulder, thrown entirely upon each other for companionship and social intercourse—it would be strange if the spirit of service should not persist, as well as the cameraderie which none but those who have had experience can understand. We owe the Veterans gratitude, and we are faced with the duty of showing it in more substantial form than wordy thanks. We were, have been and are, mighty proud of the glory, renown and credit our soldiers have brought to Canada by their magnificent fighting; and we can show the reality of our pride and of our appreciation by helping make comfortable and at home those who have helped to make Canada a golden word on the lips of mankind and a red letter name upon the pages of history.

We have given so much in good causes that it has become a habit. It's a good habit, and let us see that the Veterans get the good of it.

GET TOGETHER.

There is general recognition of the fact that the relations of Quebec to the other provinces of the Dominion, especially Ontario, are strained; and the problem is to allay the feelings and remove the prejudices that constitute the causes of schism. Among the chief causes—not all confined to one side—is that Quebec has been politically exploited since confederation. The idea of a solid Quebec politically has been developed and encouraged and, in recent years, Quebec has been subjected to the most astutely and wickedly conducted campaign of treason ever permitted to exercise continuous influence upon a simple-minded and credulous people, unaccustomed to think clearly upon political issues. The evil doctrine of Nationalism has been permitted, even by federal government encouragement, to unsettle the political faiths and views of duty of the people.

The separating evil has largely been promoted through the publicity given to Quebec's eccentricities, as represented by the actions of a coterie of designing demagogues. They have been exaggerated and even distorted to serve the designs of a sensational press to achieve political or, rather, partisan profit. Thus the wedge of division has been driven deeper home. For instance, much has been made of the introduction by an obscure private member, into the Quebec legislature of a resolution bearing academically upon the willingness of Quebec to retire from the Confederation, "if it is the wish of the other provinces." This is magnified by the sensational press into an assumption that Quebec is willing, and wants, to secede.

The isolation of Quebec is not all of Quebec's fault. There have been irritating newspaper propaganda stirring up strife and keeping it warm, which Quebec regarded as the voice of Ontario, as mistakedly as Ontario regarded the vapourings of Bourassa and his brood as the sentiment of the people at large.

Now currency and publicity is given to the absurd suggestion of a desire of Quebec to commercially boycott Ontario. The solid commercial element of Quebec has no such idea or desire. Nor does the commercial element of Ontario think such a thing possible. The gallant attempt last summer of the merchants and business men of Ontario and Quebec to reach a "bonne entente" showed that the substantial interests of both provinces recognized and measurably reached the condition of harmony that is necessary to the commercial as well as citizen interests of the country. We shall sooner reach a condition of common harmony if we can get the firebrands and factionists of both Ontario and Quebec to turn a deaf ear to each other.

Quebec and Ontario can get together by mutually refraining from pulling apart.

WHY NOT ORGANIZE?

We hear a good deal of the duty and necessity of increased farm and soil production. But seed cannot be wished into the soil, nor crops reaped by wishing. There must, to secure the best results, be organization, and provincial and national organization at that. Farmers are at a halt and their capacity for production stayed by lack of available labour.

They must have help to break the soil and till the land. Some few farmers have considerable fall ploughing done; but, as a rule, there is a scarcity of land ploughed ready for a spring crop. Government organization is needed to give the help required. Public money is spent by millions to provide munitions of destruction; why should not thousands, and millions, if need be, be used to organize and equip forces of production? The government has the authority, it has the money; and, if to these be added the spirit and the will of help, a tremendous impulse could be given to greater production.

The government might with good advantage provide abundance of tractor ploughs; and an early beginning and devoting the winter months to their manufacture would have them ready for the peep of spring—to use as soon as the soil is in possible readiness.

The mechanical aids are not the most needful. The greater need is labour help. In this regard The Examiner finds that its demand, frequently made, for the organization of something in the form of farm battalions, under military discipline and guidance, on the same principle that forestry battalions, construction battalions, and other non-combatant units are provided for assisting war-waging purposes, is being endorsed. The Globe, in justification of its recent attitude towards military conscription, advocates what The Examiner has frequently suggested.

In dealing with the difficulties of finding help for the farmers to plant and gather their crop, the Globe says:

> If men to grow food are as necessary to the success of the Allied cause as men to bear arms, why should not the principle of selective conscription be as applicable to the growing of food as to the raising of armies? Britain penalizes the farmer who turns good wheat and-nat ground into grasing land. Britain insists on the breaking up of pasture suitable for cropping. But in doing so the men charged with the task of increasing the British supply of home grown food, see to it that farm labour is provided where required. Men in thousands were released temporarily from the army last spring to get in the crops. A very complete organization exists to direct women's labour to the farms, although compulsion is not yet applied in the case of women workers.
>
> Ought not similar measures to be taken in Canada? Among the hundred thousand unmarried men to be called up for service from time to time under the Military Service Act there must be many thousands who are accustomed to farm work, and who could be used to advantage early in the season in preparing the ground and sowing the crops. The Militia Department does not propose to call up the whole hundred thousand at once for training. It may be well into the summer before the last call comes for overseas service. Why not utilize now for farm work some of the men who will not be included in the drafts to be sent abroad immediately?

For the past two months there has been a disposition to put all our eggs in the military service basket. That is not quite right, if we have the right regard for the real meaning of military service. In the case of Canada and in view of the needs of Britain and her allies, the supplying of food is as vitally essential a form of military service as supplying men.

In its election campaign, the Union government forces failed to recognise the importance of food production putting all its demands upon the provision of men to fight, neglecting, except at the last moment, the necessity of men to win the equally important battle of subduing the soil and winning the victory of increased crops.

Now that the government is in office, placed there by overwhelming popular approval and authority, it is expected that it will measure not only up to the power given it to provide men, but to measure up to the even greater responsibility of providing food.

It is obviously the duty of the government to employ every resource of organization to bring under practical cultivation every possible acre of Canadian soil. If this cannot be effected by civil organization, it must be dealt with by compulsory measures of organization to increase soil production. The government has got a direct mandate to get men for fighting reinforcements by compulsory methods. Logically its mandate extends to the provision of means and men to bring about increased produce.

It is evident that to this end there must be prompt measures taken to secure effective organization. The battalions to fight the battles of the soil, will not organize, mobilize and equip themselves, without authoritative action, any more than battalions to strengthen the fighting lines will march ready into the field, withiut the proper government and military measures being taken to secure such result.

Thousands of Canadian women were deprived of their votes, but they never ceased the war work of knitting socks for the soldiers.

LEGALIZED NICKNAMES.

They Appeared In Official Records In Colonial Times.

Nicknames are not likely to go out of fashion so long as human nature remains what it is. In these days, however, it is not customary to spread such titles upon official records, as was formerly the habit, according to the archives of several of our states.

In the Dutch records in 1644 we have John Pietersen, alias Friend John. In the Newtown purchase from the Indians, dated in 1656, one of the boundaries is "by a Dutchman's land called Hans the Boore," and in the Bushwick patent, dated Oct. 12, 1667, one of the boundaries is "John the Swede's meadow." In 1695, in the Kings county records, a man is named living at Gowanus as "Tunis the Fisher."

The common council of New York in 1691 ordered fish to be brought into the dock "over against the city hall or the house that Long Mary formerly lived in," and in the same year an order was passed "that Tonknot Betty and her children be provided for as objects of charity."

The explanation of this custom in many cases was that the persons in question either had no family names or had forgotten them, so that the use of their generally accepted nicknames became a necessity.

RELIGIONS IN CHINA.

One For Everyday Life, One For Sickness and One For Death.

Nominally the state religion is Confucianism, though founded on it. To the worship of heaven it adds the worship of nature in its chief material forms, such as the earth, sun, moon and stars, mountains and rivers. To the cults of ancestors it not only adds that of heroes, but expands so as to take in many of the divinities of Taoism and Buddhism, thus forming a compound of the three religions.

Logically the three are irreconcilable, the Taoist being materialism, the Buddhist idealism and the Confucian essentially ethical. Yet the people, like the state, make of them a unity by swallowing portions of each. In ordinary their lives are regulated by Confucian forms; in sickness they call in Taoist priests to exorcise evil spirits, and at funerals they have Buddhist priests to say masses for the repose of the soul.

Besides the women and the priesthood the two sects last named have very few professed adherents, though the whole nation is more or less tinged by them. The men (at least those who can read) almost without exception profess to be followers of Confucius.—Scientific Monthly.

Oil and Lubrication.

Oil is a peacemaker and serves its purpose by interjecting itself between the two warring elements of a bearing surface which would soon find themselves in the midst of a hot and disastrous argument were it not for the good offices of this conciliatory medium. Therefore it is an actual film of oil which is forced into the bearings or under the cylinder walls and over which adjoining bearing surfaces slide. It is because the actual film of oil must exist between the smooth surfaces of a bearing that it is found necessary for oil to be of a certain thickness or viscosity. It therefore becomes evident why oil, to be satisfactory for use in a gasoline engine, should be of a quality not easily broken down or thinned by the temperatures reached in the oil circulating system of the average automobile power plant.—H W. Slausen in Leslie's.

Zeppelins and Colors.

On a dark night a Zeppelin would be invisible whatever its color until the searchlights located it, and then it would not matter how it had been colored. Once the searchlights had picked it up it would appear a conspicuous silvery object projected against the night sky, even though it were painted as black as the blackest coal, provided it were opaque.—London Globe.

No Longer Joyous.

"What has become of the man who used to sing 'We won't go home till morning?'"

"He doesn't feel like singing any more. He vocalized on that line so long and frequently that now there isn't any home."

BEWARE THE CLOSED MIND.

Keep Always in Touch With New Ideas and New Methods.

Senator Lodge in an address delivered at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology coined a remarkable phrase in warning the students to "beware of the closed mind," a gentle reproof of the cocksureness of the newly graduated. Senator Lodge said:

"Beware of the closed mind. This sounds like a paradox when addressed to young men, yet it will, I think, bear examination. It is a truism to say that the danger of maturity, and especially of age, is the closing of the mind to new ideas. Habit, most powerful of influences, hard experience, the very passage of the years, all alike tend to stiffen the muscles and to harden the arteries of the mind as they do those of the body. It is a misfortune with which advancing age must struggle, and the effort is severe and (c) often either neglected or fruitless.

"But the same peril besets youth, although not for the same reason. The great mass of young men go forth from our universities, our institutes and schools, prepared to learn and eager for the knowledge which experience alone can bring. Yet the disease of the closed mind lurks all about them and, curiously enough, is most likely to affect the cleverest, the ablest and the most ambitious. This comes from their very talents, from the high confidence which youth ought always to have, and from the somewhat hasty conclusion that because they have thought for themselves nobody else has performed the same feat before.

"It is well to remember that the very greatest men died learning, like Bacon and Pasteur. The greatest benefactions to humanity, the greatest services to human thought, have not all been bestowed or rendered by men under twenty-five or even under forty years of age, a fact sometimes worthy of remembrance. Do not, then, fall victims to overconfidence and close your mind. The injunction is as important for youth as for age—easy of attainment for the former, difficult for the latter, possible for both. The past and the present, youth and age, new and old, all have their place in the sun; all are needed for the widest learning, for the best development of mankind."

Negro Farce, "The Dark Photographer," Mr. Collodion, Jos. Coughlin; Pat, Jos. O'Reilly; Adolphus, Matt. McCarthy.

Duet, "Mary and Marie," Beatrice Leeson and Mae Anderson.

Song, "Ten Little Niggers" ten pupils.

Duet, "The Emigrant's Return," Jos. O'Reilly and Kathleen Molony.

Closing Chorus, "Men of Harlech," The school.

God Save the King.

The accompanist was Mrs. Jos. O'Reilly. Mr. James Walsh acted as chairman. The excellence of the numbers furnished by the children showed the untiring zeal with which they practiced for the past month. The parents responded admirably to the many demands made upon them. The acting of the grown-up people proved that there is much latent talent only waiting for an opportunity for expression. As negro comedians, Jos. Coughlin and Matt. McCarthy are unsurpassed, while Joseph O'Reilly, as the Irishman, just landed from Cork, kept the audience in gales of laughter. Peter Moloney, as the irascible Father, proved his histrionic ability. W. McCarthy, as the Jew, Tom Allen, as the "Hobo," and John Coughlin, suffering under Mr. Billingsworth's displeasure, delighted the audience, while Kathleen Molony and Nell McCarthy, as "Just Ordinary Girls," were quite at their ease while teasing "papa" and planning parties.

Gift to Teacher.

At the close of the programme the pupils presented the teacher with a valuable fountain pen. The following address was read:

Dear Miss Molony,—We feel we should not allow this term to pass without showing you in some way how much we appreciate your work among us during this past year. You have heerfully given your time and patience in training us for this concert, and it is owing to your efforts that it has been a success. In view of this will you accept this small gift as a token of our appreciation

All the pupils join in wishing you a bright and happy Christmas and a successful New Year.

Signed on behalf of the School,
Beatrice Leeson,
May Anderson.

After the singing of God Save the King, the gathering dispersed, everybody delighted with the evening's entertainment.

WILL USE R. M. COLLEGE FOR THE NAVAL CADETS.

Kingston, Dec. 19. — As a result of the visit paid to the Royal Military College by Admiral Kingsmill, it has practically been decided to temporarily use it as quarters for Naval College Cadets, owing to the college building at Halifax having been destroyed by the explosion in that city. It is likely that the Cadets will arrive here next month. The water equipment will be brought here when navigation opens in the spring.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

CHOPIN'S MUSIC FOR THE MAN AT THE PLAYER PIANO.

Remember It Is The Music of Poland, Where Peasants Dance and Sing to Music in the Minor Keys.

There are certain characteristics of Chopin's musical writings which if remembered will add greatly to the pleasure of playing his music. These can be approached directly by the man with the player piano for he is not hampered by the lack of expensively trained fingers. He is not thinking terms and technicalities but his concentration is on the interpretation—getting the most out of the music. A most interesting and helpful survey in this connection was made recently by a writer in the New York Trade Review, whose data is the basis of these condensed extracts. The musical qualities of Chopin, which strike the player-pianist are, his unfailing wealth of fresh and fine tune-ideas, and secondly, the very remarkable nature of his accompaniment ideas.

Chopin was a Pole and a very patriotic one. He thoroughly worshipped his native land; yet he lived most of his life in a thoroughly non-Polish atmosphere, namely, in the ultra-refinement of the Parisian intellectuals. This music that is all beauty of workmanship, nevertheless is the music of a Pole. Poland is the land of strange dance rhythms, of peasants who dance to music of minor keys and cry when they are happy. The Polish women, flower of the tender regard of their men, inspire the ravishing mazes of the muzurka or the gorgeous processions of the polonaise. The Polish heroes, martial, stern and proud, stalk through every page of those wonderful ballads, in which Chopin has interpreted heroic poetry.

The Polish music to any native musician, in itself must provide a veritable mine of melodic wealth. Chopin in the dance rhythms peculiar to his native land, has found such a mine. But he has worked it with Parisian tools, with civilized appliances.

In attempting to play Chopin the music lover should first recognize that he is dealing with a master of melody.

Consider the simplest of his melodies, like that of the A flat Impromptu or the second nocturne. You will find that there is what can only be described as a haunting quality about the bare tunes. Chopin has a fancy for queer distances between his melody tones. He does not stick to the plain diatonic scale, but wanders off out of the key constantly; yet always with perfect taste. You will find a flowing, easy movement which gives the impression that although the melody is original and characteristic of its author, no other possible way of working it out could be imagined.

You cannot always grasp the essential idea in poetry as quickly as in prose. It is just this which makes the difference between intelligent and non-intelligent handling of Chopin's music. You are dealing with poetry and you must think of his music poetically. One must listen to a nocturne melody, for instance, playing it over several times until the exact plan of construction is clear. It will be found that Chopin is not obscure in his tonal plans; his art lies in the lovely elaboration of decorative material with which he clothes them. This decoration of the melody by grace notes, far stretched runs and similar devices is one of the characteristic Chopin methods.

The accompaniment forms which Chopin introduced and which, were largely novelties to the pianistic world, arise out of two general causes. One was his extraordinary command over the piano and his originality in the treatment of fingering. The other was his mixture of Polish blood with Western training. Chopin had a perfect hand for the piano and a very healthy contempt for old-fogy notions as to the right way to use the hands on the keyboard. He showed us moderns many a trick. In his studies he horrified the old-fashioned professors by crossing the fingers over each other, passing the thumb under the fourth finger, using the thumb on black keys, and by numerous other heresies. But the reason for all these novelties was simply that Chopin wished to obtain stretches on the left hand parts, skips from chord to chord, extensions of cords and other powers over the keyboard, in order that he might improve his command over the piano and produce musical effects which he wanted, but which the pedagogues of his day did not suppose were possible.

Now the player-pianist need not worry about the technical part, but he can revel in the new beauties opened up to him. Especially he will observe that Chopin never writes a note, without a special meaning for it. He says what he means and never a word too much or too little. It is therefore in the highest degree wrong to treat the Chopin accompaniments as if they were the mechanical chord-groups of a medorn song "arranged." Chopin's accompaniments are live and glowing, and show forth the beauties of the melody. They are the ornamental frame work in which the melody is set; and are quite as beautiful as the tunes themselves.

KNOWING THE NAME OF THE SELECTION ADDS TO ITS ENJOYMENT.

The man on the street wants to know the musical selections to which he is listening. That seems an empty, yes, needless sort of statement. But wait; listen to this:

Scene 1.—Young Mr. Officemen and Miss Stenogg are at the moving picture theatre. The orchestra is playing an intermission number, a bewitching step or a selection from one of the old-time operas. As Miss Stenogg helps herself to another chocolate she whispers, "What is the name of that piece anyway? I'm sure I've heard it before. Why don't they let us know what the orchestra is playing?"

Scene 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Citizen are at a concert in the music hall. The baritone soloist makes a decided hit with "Young Tom o' Devon" and the audience simply insists and insists on an encore. The encore number is just as good music as the first one and just as well rendered, but its effect is curtailed by Mr. Citizen and scores of others like him in the hall asking the next one to them, "What is that he is singing for the encore?"

Scene 3.—The church service is about one-half through. The organist is playing the offertory. It is Edwin Lemare's Andantino and the Vox Humana stop is putting in the fine touches. Every ear is concentrated on the voluntary, when one of the tenors in the choir is seen to lean over and ask his neighbour if he remembers what the organist is playing.

And so one might go on. After attending several recitals, concerts, moving picture performances, and private musical evenings in the home, which might as well be confessed was done with the sole object of running to ground some "copy," the writer was impressed with one thing in particular; and that was, the public takes more interest in and more enjoyment out of music when they know the names of the selections being played. The opposite is just as true. The public appears to lose interest to an appreciable extent and that their enjoyment is lessened is plainly apparent when they do not know what music is being rendered.

Were the fact realised—and it would be realised if those responsible for the musical end of every programme of any kind could but view the question from the standpoint of the public—every possible chance would be taken to advise those in attendance of the titles of each selection. In cases like the Mendelssohn Choir concerts, not only is the name given of the title and the composer, but also an interesting descriptive sketch of each selection.

Could we not take a pointer or two from our American cousins in whose country we are told it is the custom for motion picture houses to announce the titles of the music given by the orchestras. The same thought would prompt the chairman at the concert to give out the titles of encores. It would also encourage the intimation of the titles of all voluntaries, anthems, and solos in all the churches either by announcement from the pulpit or by printing them in the church's weekly calendar.

KEEP THE BOY SURROUNDED WITH MUSIC.

When you want a sponge to take up water, the best place to put it is right in the centre of the basin where it is surrounded with water. When you want to develop your boy's appreciation of music surround him with music in the home, and keep taking him to musical programmes. Encourage him in every conceivable way to devote time to musical study.

Take the case of Arthur Sullivan who became Sir Arthur Sullivan. He was one of those fortunate boys of musical talent whose parents encouraged his every moment of devotion to music, and surrounded him with every opportunity to absorb and express its very best. Music was his play. His father was a bandmaster, and encouraged the boy to try all the wind instruments he could fit his little mouth to. He never forced the boy to an unwelcome task, and so at eight years old Arthur could play every wind instrument in his father's band.

There is no question but that Sullivan's talents were far beyond the average to begin with. Yet the principle holds true—that to develop any one's musical nature the person must surround himself with music.

HOW MUSIC IS USED ON THE ITALIAN FRONT.

At various points along the Italian front not far from the firing line, there is being given concerts to the soldiers and we are told that the idea originated with the supreme military command. So much good has been accomplished by these concerts that an organization has been effected to extend the concert arrangements. It is said that already six wooden theatres have been erected, all in conquered territory, and that the tack of securing talent is being made easy by ready assistance of Italy's foremost musicians and actors. At one of the first concerts General Capello himself was present.

The first programme took place in one of these soldiers' theatres right opposite the Carso, the ruins of bombarded houses all around, in view of Austrian entrenchments in all their complicated system. A variety artist was singing a favourite song when an enemy aeroplane was sighted. She continued unperturbed while the Italian aircraft chased away the untimely intruder.

An account of these concerts has reached the English press from Italy and the following is an extract sent home by a Canadian soldier: To these concerts soldiers who are enjoying the customary rest after a trying time in the trenches come in thousands to find that relaxation and recreation from nervous tension which are a vital necessity for the preservation of the health of the combatants. Not much drama or light comedy is given. Soldiers who have just come out of the jaws of hell do not want to see the petty nothings of every-day life. They want, and get, light entertainment in the form of farcical plays: something to laugh at, and forget the misery of the past and present. Operatic arias are of course the order of the day, seeing that they form part and parcel of the Italian organism. Then certain elements in the audiences crave for, and get, the latest music-hall songs. Famous actors recite in the divers dialects so dear to the natives of the different departments of the country. In their special instance a hearty laugh, unbridled and unrestrained, refreshes their tired, racked nerves, better perhaps than a night's rest.

COMMUNITY CHORUS FOR CHILDREN

Every City and Town Should Have One.

Any one who has watched a class of school children singing their songs together or the members of a juvenile glee club raising their voices in melody know to how great an extent children enjoy expressing themselves musically. It is perhaps one of the few times, if not the only time, when they begin to get an appreciation of what concerted action means in creating strength and power both for the individual as well as the group. You seldom can get a child to stand up and sing alone, but place him among a large group of children and not the change in him—the change in his expression, his bearing and his whole attitude.

It is therefore a cause for much encouragement to hear the news that people are growing interested in community choruses for children. The community chorus movement for grown-ups has become wide-spread in the United States and is getting a hold, and it good results have been appreciated by all who have taken an active part in it. The questions naturally arise, then, why wait until a person is grown up before you let him take part in that which undeniably is beneficial to him? Why not give the child an opportunity to musically express himself before he has grown too self-conscious to do it freely.

Children love to sing. It is a natural instinct with them. They would rather sing than study the boundaries of Turkestan, and there is no doubt they would derive more benefit from so doing. The public schools, unfortunately, have little or no time to devote this art with their other studies crammed into an already too heavy curriculum. Any time that is alloted to this subject is given over to teaching of the simpler fundamentals of music. The boy who enjoys telling the number of sharps and aflts there are in a key is the exception. But the child who wants to sing a song with words is the rule. The problem is to find some means whereby this wholesome desire can be fostered. And the answer to the problem is community choruses for children.

CASTOR OIL SCARCE—KIDDIES SHOULD WORRY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—There is good news for the children of Canada. The supply of castor oil is running low, and it is almost impossible to replace it. Castor oil is made from the castor bean, which is principally imported from India, and the British authorities are shutting down on export due to the shortage of tonnage. Palm olive used in the manufacture of soap is becoming scarce and glycerine is also difficult to secure.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to see that Mr. E. G. Patterson is a candidate for the Board of Education. I understand that Mr. Eastwood, Mr. Gordon, Dr. Neal and other members of the Board of Education are putting up a fight to have a big technical school built in Peterborough with Government assistance. The object of the school is to educate young mechanics in their different trades.

As I understand the work in the school will be to teach pattern-makers the principles upon which their work is laid out, electrical workers will be taught the different technical features of their trade, men and women will be taught the underlying principles of dyeing, weaving, spinning, and similar trades, while there will be dress-making, domestic science and vocational training for soldiers, so that they will not be dependent upon pensions.

The Canadian General Electric Company has made arrangements with the Grand Trunk for a testing track for electric locomotives which they intend to build. It seems, by what I understand, that all the railways will be electrified shortly on account of the shortage of coal and the presence of great water powers. If the Canadian General Electric builds electrical locomotives it will be the thing that will put Peterborough on the map in big letters.

Mr. Patterson and the Canadian General management are great believers in technical education from the standpoint of the Company, and from my standpoint as a man with a trade. I have found that the more I knew about scientific principles, the greater my earning power has been. If the Canadian General starts building electric locomotives shortly it will do more to give this city a boom than anything we have had within the last ten years, and I believe that if Mr. Patterson is elected on the Board of Education he would do a tremendous work in the interests of assisting Peterborough in establishing a first-class technical school in this city, which will, in turn, develop thousands of young mechanics to a greater earning power and increase the efficiency of the manufacturers already in Peterborough. It is gratifying indeed to see good men like Mr. E. G. Patterson, Dr. Neal and others willing to give their time and their skill to the advancement of Peterborough's educational facilities.

Yours truly,
SOUTH WARD.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The situation in regard to the coming election of four new members to the Board of Education, is one that should be given some thought by the electors. Three splendid business men, who have for a long time given their services to the city on this board, are now retiring. To John Crane, W. H. Hill, and Colonel Miller, are due the lasting gratitude of the citizens, and the three vacancies will not be easily filled.

From the new material now offered, four new members, including one to take the place of the late lamented Dr. Burnham, are to be chosen. Only one of the eight names that will be on the Board of Education ballot, is that of a former member. Dr. Neal has given two years creditable service to the Board, and deserves the endorsement of the voters in being again returned as a member.

From the other seven aspirants, one name stands out prominently as an eminently suitable man for the position, Mr. J. M. Greene. Peterborough has seen Mr. Greene build up a business from a very small beginning to one of the largest in the city with four branches in other towns and cities. That in itself is a record that certainly merits recognition, and when marking the ballot for Dr. Neal, the next one should be for Mr. J. M. Greene.

There will be three other good men chosen in addition to the above two, because the six other names are all men who would make good Board members, but in the opinion of the writer there should be no mistake made in accepting a man of Mr. Greene's capabilities when he is willing to undertake the duties involved. Thanking you for space to express my opinion, I am,

Respectfully yours.
OBSERVER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Mr. E. G. Patterson is a candidate for the Board of Education. There is no man in this city better qualified to assist in the organization of the new Technical School, which it is expected the Government will unite with the Board of Education in erecting. This is very important too, to assist returned soldiers in learning trades, and apprentices in developing themselves into experts rather than putting in long periods of apprenticeship in the factories. The importance of Peterborough's growth depends to a very great extent upon her success in developing her factories, and improving the position of her mechanics, and strong effort should be made to elect the representative of the manufacturing concern which is the backbone of the city.

Yours truly,
FINISHER.

Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—In a local paper a correspondent signing himself "East Sider" makes the statement that if we abolish the ward system of electing aldermen, as advocated by the Trades and Labour Council, "At every civic election the rest of the city will combine against us and the west siders will hog everything in sight." This is, to say the least, a very extravagant statement and one which is not borne out by past experience.

If the west siders want to act in that manner their opportunities are certainly greater under the present system, where their eight aldermen, in whose election we have no voice whatever, could combine against our two and defeat any measure brought in to benefit Ashburnham. Now, under the general vote system no bunch of aldermen would dare to do this, as they would each one be depending in a large measure on the votes of the residents of East City for re-election.

Of course, it is possible that some of our present aldermen, who were afraid of a referendum on the question and voted against it in Council, might be left at home, but their places would be taken by better men, who have the interests of the whole city at heart—and surely that would be no calamity to Ashburnham.

Union Labour, by nominating its best men, would also have a chance of having some representation on the Council, where we have no chance at present.

The Dominion Trades Congress, which has been called the workingmen's parliament, has as one of the planks of its platform, the abolition of the ward system in municipal elections, and the local Trades and Labour Council is backing up the parent body, which has made a study of the question in every city of any size in the Dominion.

The Labour men have induced the City Council to submit the matter to a vote, and now it remains with the people to back them up, and, by voting for the by-law, say they are in favour of true democracy—government of the people by the people and for the people—when they will have a voice in the election of all the aldermen who are making laws for all the city, instead of, as at present, only two, who have practically no influence with the rest of the Council.

Thanking you for your valuable space,—I am, yours truly,
Union Labour.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—We have been favoured with the views of 'A Soldier's Wife' and 'Soldier's Mother,' regarding 'A Readers' comments of last week.

Now the opinion of 'Neutral' may not be out of place. It seems regrettable that such discord should exist at this time of "Peace on earth, good will to men." In the past we have grown accustomed to hearing political difference of opinion among men, but when we see the women throw off their coat, so to speak, and try to make themselves notorious, is it any wonder that a man should look on with disgust.

Now, to begin, any fair-minded person can see that the New Franchise Act was an injustice to the people of Canada. Since women never had a vote in Canada why should this privilege be given at this particular time, to some of them, while others, just as worthy, were denied? Women are not asked to don the khaki and go to war, therefore, in my opinion, we have no right to force men to go.

However, since women had the privilege of voting they were perfectly justified in doing so, but let us pause and consider which was the most edifying to mankind —the refined, retiring lady who went to the poll quietly, and came home again, or the feather-bedecked electioneer who went from door to door blowing her horn for reinforcements.

When one of these "stalwarts" called at my door, I answered her politely, but I couldn't help thinking, what an able hand she would be on the end of a cross-cut saw when male help is so scarce.

I read an article in the paper a few weeks ago, in regard to a prominent "lady lecturer" from Toronto, who was entertained at a luncheon here. In the course of her remarks she stated that it is absurd to say that women can't take a man's place on the farm. Before closing, it described her exquisite costume of "silk or satin, so and so." That was quite enough for me. Next summer, when the thermometer is 97 or 100 in the shade, those people who have such an over-plus of energy now, will most likely be found "summering at their cottage at the seaside" or joy-riding in a comfortable touring car, not "forking sheaves" in the peak of a barn, or milking ten or twelve cows before breakfast. It is doubtful if some of them ever saw the inside of a cow stable and, without personal experience, they are not in a position to discuss farm work. If you want to get real facts, ask the farmer's wife, who toils from daylight till dark, you will find she has had enough to do and more, too.

I lived on the farm for twenty-five years and know what I'm talking about. One would think to hear some of those extremists talk, that all those opposed to conscription are very disloyal, indeed. Well, if such is true, there is a most overwhelming majority of Australians in this class.

In closing, I would say: Don't get up too big a howl, ladies. We have seen cases where a dog bit the hand that fed it. People have been known to change their opinion in the past. You may do so in the future.

Hoping I have not taken too much of your valuable space, I remain, NEUTRAL.

J. H. DUFFY
With "The Lilac Domina"

"The Lilac Domino," a musical success of Europe and America, will be presented at "The Grand" New Years Day for two performances, for the first and only time here, with its big cast of famous principals, wonderful singing chorus of beautiful girls and dancing ensembles that has been the talk of all the principal cities where the company has played long runs at the leading high-priced theatres.

The fact that this is the only and original company is proven by the programme copy which includes the names of J. Humbird Duffy, who created and sang the leading baritone role in American and is far better known to patrons of Broadway's leading theatres than in the smaller cities. Mr. Duffy is generally conceded by the musical critics to be the best light opera baritone before the public. He is surrounded by many other artists almost as famous, among them Marjorie Pringle, perhaps the youngest and prettiest Prima Donna soprano on the lyric opera stage; Sidney De Grey, a legitimately funny comedian who has been permanently cast in many prominent Broadway productions; Herbert Standing, a London and New York favourite; Teddy Wilde, a famous English comedian and wonderful dancer. Joseph Standish; Doris Payne; Clara Thropp and other noted artists who comprise one of the highest salaried organizations ever taken on tour. The mere announcement of a musical offering of this class and magnitude should be sufficient to fill every seat in the theatre and probably will do so.

Audrey Huycke Won Ford Touring Car In Bazaar Contest

The Ford touring car valued at $500.00, the big prize of the bazaar recently held by the congregation of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, was won by Audrey Huycke, Englehurn avenue. Her estimate of the number of grains of wheat in the quart jar was 92,975, and by actual count it contained 92,943 grains, just 32 less than the winning estimate.

This was the feature contest of the bazaar which Rev. Dean McColl declared a complete success. Mr. George Mather, grain dealer, measured three quarts of hulled wheat on the government standard basis, and sealed them in the presence of Dean McColl, Ald. Weir and Mr. Wm. Perdue. Last night in the parish hall on Mark street, Ald. Weir broke the seal, and about fifty men spent two hours in counting the grain. When the contents of the jar was ascertained, Dean McColl personally examined every estimate. The numbers he called out ranged from 999 to 11,000,000 and one guess, 9,999,999, will probably exhaust all the nines in the typesetting machine to "set" it. Quite a few of them struck on either side of the correct number, but Audrey Huycke was announced as the winner when the last stub had been read. The next approximation was within 57 of the exact number of grains and there were others close by. Some of the guesses might have applied to marbles or peas, and the extravagant estimators must have been thinking of the sands of time.

Winner of Canoe.

The canoe built by Mr. Joseph Murdock especially for the bazaar, was won by Mr. L. Gordon, 99 Park street, the lucky number being 305.

The splendid oil painting of Sir John A. MacDonald, donated by Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, has not yet been disposed of.

The persons who sold the largest number of tickets in the wheat-guessing contest were Mr. John Woodhouse, Sophia street, and Mr. J. J. Devlin, Rogers street. Mrs. P. Dwyer and Mrs. Jas. Hogan. The gross receipts up to the present are $3,822.60.

Excellent Showing Of The Bank Of Commerce

One of the features of the annual statement of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, just issued, that demands attention is the increase in assets by $65,947,683 — to $344,573,232. Short loans, securities, etc., including advances by the Bank to the Dominion and British Governments, including advances for munitions purchased, show an increase of $29,354,260. This item alone indicates the important part played by the Bank of Commerce in financing the provision of munitions for the allied forces. The Bank's holdings of securities show a notable increase of ratio to its total assets—from 9.6 per cent. in 1916, to 16.2 per cent. in 1917. The total of commercial loans, $149,823,036, is an increase of $16,035,897 over the corresponding period a year ago, the total of commercial loans being the largest in its history, save 1912. The total represents 16.5 per cent. of the total current loans of the chartered bank of Canada.

A very satisfactory showing of the statement is that the liquid assets of the Bank of Commerce represent 53.3 per cent. of its liabilities, a very important feature in these times of unsettlement. The net profits of $2,657,555 represent 9.2 per cent. of combined capital and reserve. On the whole the Bank's situation, in all regards, is very satisfactory and adds another triumph to its great achievements from year to year. The pith of the phrase—"safe as the Bank of England"—might be imported into Canada, and the name of some of our Canadian banks substituted.

To The Electors

141 Hunter Street, E.,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 25th, '17.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the City of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "general" education and "technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous boards of education, and will endeavour, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the City of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY

XMAS FESTIVITIES IN WAR HOSPITALS

Patriotic Public Provided Royally For the Wounded Boys at the Military Convalescent Hospitals Throughout Canada

The cloud which fell upon many of the boys in the military convalescent hospitals when the M.O.'s told them that they were in no condition to go home for the holidays, proved one with a tinsel lining, and is still raining theatre tickets, gifts and cigarettes.

Canada's heart is big. She finished her "overseas" Christmas in November and it seems, now that Christmas is over, that she must have been working every minute that came after for the boys who had done their bit and returned wounded. Every man had every bit of Christmas festivity which he could stand and the M.O.'s stretched their judgment to make the measure full. Whether the man was a bed case or able to go about freely and only kept by need of frequent dressings to a wound, he had his gala day.

Miniature Xmas Trees.

In the Orthopaedic Hospital in Toronto where amputation cases from the whole breadth of the Dominion are treated, the boys in bed received their Christmas on a tray, even to the Christmas tree fully decked in baubles and tinsel, and were as delighted as five-year-olds.

Dinner itself was a feast starting with soup and running the whole list of Yuletide delicacies from drumsticks and cranberry sauce to English plum pudding and ice cream. The tables were gaily decorated, and the rooms were hung with greens.

Even a Cabaret.

In some districts they not only enjoyed the dinner in the home but stowed away a second, as in Kingston where "The Daily Standard" undertook to give a big dinner for the 1,127 returned soldiers under treatment in that city, and in Montreal where all returned soldiers were entertained at dinner in the Rose Room of the Windsor Hotel, followed by a cabaret.

Help in making Christmas happy came from all sorts of sources. Little children helped and big corporations, department stores, men's clubs, sewing circles, patriotic societies, and individuals vied with one another to supply the makings of festivity. The Soldiers' Comforts committees of the Commission organized them and the staffs in the hospitals did everything in their power to make the whole a success.

Everybody Helped.

In the Orthopaedic Hospital at North Toronto no less than ten organizations conspired together to play Santa Claus to the men. London societies joined in giving Christmas cheer to London men and together with Kitchener patriots cared for the men at Freeport.

At Newmarket, Gravenhurst, Whitby, and Cobourg, the boys were cared for by the Toronto Branch of the Soldiers' Comforts Committee assisted by local organizations. There were concerts, Christmas trees and dances as well as many gifts for every man. St. Catharines and Hamilton provided similar good times for the men in their hospitals.

Toronto and Montreal Generous.

All Toronto and Montreal Hospitals were generously taken care of by the numerous societies who are working for the comforts of the boys all through the year, and offers of help came from many communities in which there is no hospital.

The same interest was displayed by the people of the Maritime Provinces and Quebec in their boys, and Christmas from coast to coast proved jolly for the men. Even in Halifax where troubles have been overwhelming, and the demands the greatest in the history of the country, the day was not missed for the wounded heroes.

MILITARY HOSPITALS ARE FEEDING THOUSANDS

The cafeterias established by the Military Hospitals Commission in the convalescent hospitals at Halifax, supplemented by kitchens fitted to serve men in thousand lots, proved a godsend to the homeless victims of the great explosion. Between four and five thousand meals were served daily to the stricken people, men, women, and children carrying their trays to the big steam tables in an endless stream day after day. The last of the breakfasters were hardly out of the dining-room when the line for dinner began to form. The clatter of the electric dish washers was never stilled.

1,100 Patients Cared For.

In addition to the meals served, over 1,100 patients were cared for in the two institutions, Camp Hill and Pine Hill, which were emptied of their military patients to make room for the victims of the disaster. The lockers, which never before had held anything but khaki and war trophies, were filled with the nondescript remnants of women's wardrobes and children's toys saved from the wreckage.

The transfer of the military patients was arranged by Lt.-Col. Sharples, C.O. of the Military Hospitals Commission Command, who, directly the news of the disaster was reported in Ottawa, left for the scene to offer all available facilities of the military hospitals to the relief workers.

Two hundred wounded convalescent soldiers under treatment in the Halifax institutions were taken to Sydney, C.B., where the officers in charge of the Moxam and Ross Military Convalescent Hospitals made provision for them, and later wired that if necessary they could care for fifty more.

Repair Receiving Depot.

The convalescent hospitals would have been able to care for 2,000 more had not the great receiving depot on Pier 2 been wrecked. This building was badly damaged and will require extensive repairs before more returned men can be received at that port. The work is already under way.

A very pleasant event took place at the 6th Line School on Friday afternoon upon the closing of the school for the holidays. Miss Belle Howson, the teacher, gave a taffy pull after dinner, which was much enjoyed by all who were present, followed by an excellent programme. Rev. L. S. Wight was present, and gave a most pleasing address to the scholars, and about twenty of their friends who were present. Miss Howson, who has resigned her position as teacher, was presented with a set of cut glass salt and pepper shakers and a silver spoon.

Pte. Albert Fletcher, of Whitby, is a guest at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fletcher.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson, of Mt. Julian, spent Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lang.

During the evening a splendid programme was rendered. Rev. and Mrs. Robbins were given a great surprise when they were presented with a beautiful fur robe and a few small articles by the members of the congregation. Both replied suitably, expressing their appreciation of the gifts and the thought which prompted the donors. Miss Marjorie Choate as organist, was next remembered by an address and several pieces of French ivory. Miss Choate was much surprised, and thanked those present for the kind thoughtfulness shown in remembering her. After lunch was served, Christmas carols were sung by all, and the company dispersed after singing "God Save the King."

Teacher Remembered by Her Pupils at Christmas.

At the closing exercises of the school year, the pupils of the Warsaw Senior Room surprised their teacher, Miss E. M. Dewart, by presenting her with a dainty fruit set, a box of stationery, and a pretty hemstitched afternoon tea cloth, accompanied by the following address:

Dear Miss Dewart,

As we are separating for another Christmastime, we, your pupils, wish to show in some small way our esteem and goodwill.

As Christmas time commemorates God's great gift to the world, so it is a time for us to think of others and to give gifts to those we love. We feel that you have given us much during the years you have been with us, and know that you have always had the thought of your pupils first. We realise to some extent the great wealth of thought, true patience, and knowledge which you have poured unstintedly upon us as a perpetual gift. We know that many times we have not only failed to show our appreciation by our thoughtlessness, but also we have helped to make your work harder; yet we want you to know that we have recognised your efforts on our behalf, and how you have so unsparingly laboured for our benefit.

We wish you a very happy Christmas and a pleasant holiday, and also ask you to accept these gifts as a small token of our love and appreciation.

The address was read by Elsie Tucker and the presentation made by Stella Ellis.

Miss Dewart, who was given a complete surprise, replied in a few suitable words, thanking them for their kind remembrances and expressing her pleasure in her work amongst them.

JUGULAR VEIN WAS CUT, BUT HALIFAX MAN LIVES

UNDERTAKER THERE.

But Foley Postponed His Own Funeral—Sensational Story of the Eastern Tragedy.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 26.—Of all the wonderful escapes from death in the Halifax disaster, none is more remarkable than that of Thomas Foley, for years champion boxer of the Maritime Provinces, who has just made a remarkable recovery from injuries he received.

He was at his home using the washbasin when the explosion occurred. He looked toward the window, when the falling glass cut him on the face, arms, and throat. He bled profusely, losing consciousness, and the last thing he remembers was one of the soldiers, who placed him on a mattress, remarking quietly: "He's dying; his jugular vein is cut."

He knew nothing more until he came to in the hospital seven hours later. His forehead had a deep gash, there were fears for his right eye; three stitches were placed in his right arm, while Dr. Fergie Little, who, by the way, is a well-known hockey and football referee, put a stitch in his jugular vein, injected 32 ounces of new blood into his right arm, and gave him some brandy to stimulate the heart.

He was regarded as being so near death that he said his last farewells to his family, and when a few days later the doctor telephoned to a friendly undertaker to have Mr. Foley removed to his home, the wagon used for conveying dead bodies was sent.

Mr. Foley's brother went to the hospital with the wagon to get the supposed remains, and was greatly surprised to find him alive. In the meantime the doctor had happened to call on the undertaker, and the latter was shocked when he learned of the mistake that had been made.

CUTTING OUT SPECIAL TRAINS

At the December meeting of the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association is was reaffirmed that no special trails would be granted except for military purposes or for national defence.

Some of the grants in the past were to religious pilgrimages, Orange demonstrations on 12th July, theatrical parties, race track meetings, conventions and political demonstrations.

This new order of things will continue until after the war.

A HAPPY DOLLAR BILL.

A happy little Dollar Bill
Went laughing off to town,
And straightway bought for Mother dear
Some gingham, blue and brown.

The gingham cost just sixty cents.
And so that Dollar Bill
Went shooting up a chute-the-chute,
Like coasting up a hill.

Then all day long that happy Bill
Went sliding round the store;
It bought just every sort of thing
From every single floor.

It bought a doll, a pair of gloves,
Some clothesline, and a mop;
A box of soap, and pudding dish,
A necktie and a top.

At six o'clock it had to stop;
It couldn't buy some more,
Because you see, the folks in charge
Were closing up the store.

And so it let the cashier take
And tuck it in a stall;
And there it lay and laughed, because
It wasn't spent at all!

Pioneer Days In Cobourg

Benjamin Matthews, a native of Cobourg, but who resided for many years in Peterborough, in an interesting resume of Cobourg's early history recently gave the following interesting data:

WHEN LETTERS WERE CARRIED TO SAVE POSTAGE.

Mr. Matthews' father was an officer in the British navy. He had an excellent education and was a specialist in chemistry, which earned for him an important appointment at Archangel in Russia. A large London firm of soap manufacturers had decided to open a branch in Russia close to their supply of rape seed and commissioned Mr. Matthews' father to superintend the construction of their plant. He was the author of a treatise on soapmaking, afterwards used by Mr. Hitchins of Cobourg which netted him a comfortable fortune. Returning to London he was sent out to Canada by his uncle with a large quantity of merchandise for which he found ready sale at Montreal. He came west as far as Cobourg, and the day he arrived there was an exiting race between three families to see which could erect their log house first. So much interest was taken in the contest that for years the village was nicknamed "Hard Scrabble." He carried a letter of introduction to Captain Boswell of Cobourg, who, in turn, gave him a letter to Captain Rubidge, who was doing pioneer work inland, in what is now known as the Township of Otonabee. Mr Matthews remained with Captain Rubidge for a short time, invested in some land and returned to London, where he secured a good position. Some months later, having decided not to return to Canada, he wrote to Lawyer Bethune of Cobourg, giving him instructions to sell his property. The answer was carried back to London by Archdeacon (afterwards Bishop) Bethune of Toronto, to save postage which in those days was as high as sixty cents. Mr. Matthews has this letter in his possession and treasures it highly. In it Mr. Bethune said, in effect: "Surely you would not remain in murky England after tasting the bright, bracing air of Canada." It was not long after this till he was back, and in a short time married Jane Wade.

BIG GAME ON THE LAKEFRONT.

Mr Matthews was born in December 13th, 1829, one mile and a half east of Port Hope, at "Hamilton Gardens." His father died when he was one year old, and his mother was married four years later to Mr. Bellwood, who moved the family to Cobourg. Up to this time he had never seen Lake Ontario as the "clearing" was a considerable distance from the shore and a dense forest lay between. He was not long in Cobourg before he persuaded a boy to take him down and show him the lake. He not only saw it but had the good fortune to be there as a great bear and her two cubs passed by. They had been chased from Bolton's Point by hunters, and were proceeding along the shore in shallow water. A man by the name of Jones put out in a boat and captured one of the cubs.

WHEN QUEEN VICTORIA WAS CROWNED.

His next important recollection was the celebration in honour of the accession of Queen Victoria. Cobourg was brilliantly illuminated, particularly the houses on King street. There was neither gas nor electric light in those days, but each window in every house contained as many candles as they were panes of glass, which meant not a few, owing to the smallness of the panes. Out on the streets men and boys paraded up and down with home-made fireworks, the store kind being too expensive. These consisted of fire-balls made of candlewick about four inches in diameter, soaked in turpentine, and stuck on long wooden poles.

EARLY DAYS IN COBOURG.

In the early thirties there was only one bank in Cobourg, a branch of the Commercial, managed by Squire Henry, a retired factor of the Hudson Bay Co. Later on the Bank of Montreal opened a branch, with Mr. Morgan as manager. He introduced the practice of paying cash for wheat which proved a great drawing card for the farmers for miles around. Mr. Matthews recollects that he was not fenced round with an iron cage, nor yet did he have a revolver. In those days people must have been honest.

The first school was presided over by Captain Ward, a veteran of the War of 1812, who fought at Lundy's Lane. He expounded the mysteries of the "Three R's" in the attic of a one-and-a-quarter-storey house. He was so tall and the ceiling was so low he could stand straight only when parading up and down the centre. Needless to say the sides of the room became the rendezvous of the small boys who wished to escape the end of his "gad."

Nearly everybody was clad in grey homespun, manufactured, for the most part, at home. The wool was taken to a carding mill and transformed into fluffy rolls. This the women spun into yarn, and, on home-made looms, wove into cloth, which was again taken to the mill to be fulled, sheared, and pressed. A travelling tailor was then called in and made the clothes for the farmer and his family. Boots were produced in much the same way. Two calf skins were taken to a tannery, and one returned made into leather. An itinerant shoemaker, called "Whip the Cats," who made his own wooden pegs, manufactured the boots.

"Well, it seems that Hop was telling Sarb a story, and it took him a long time to get to the point. And Sarb interrupted him, after a while.

"You'd make a good cashier, Hop," said Serb.

"How so?" bit Hop, doubtfully.

"You are never short in your accounts."

A heart-rending groan, a stifled sob, and all was still.—Cleveland "Plain Dealer."

Preparations Complete For Home Visitation Day

Rev. Dougall Brown is Chairman of the Committee—City is Divided into Five Districts—Event Will Take Place on Friday, January 4th

The churches in Peterborough are uniting in a co-operative effort to visit every home and reach every individual on Friday, January 4th. A representative committee of ministers and laymen have the work in charge. The effort is under the direction of Rev. T. W. Halpenny, General Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association. This form of work is being specially featured in Ontario this year. A large number of places throughout the province are undertaking visitation. On the 9th of November the city of Toronto had a large and very successful visitation, the Catholics, Protestants and Jews all uniting. Niagara Falls, as well as Peterborough, is planning for a visitation, and a large number of rural sections. It is a united effort with a religious purpose only. Many splendid people move into new communities, and not desiring to sever their connection with the old home church, they allow the feeling of aloneness in new surroundings to prevent them from connecting themselves with the nearby church. Every visitation discovers scores and hundreds of such persons, and extends to them a cordial welcome for and on behalf of the church to which they should belong. The visitation of January 4th attempts only to ascertain the desire of every inmate and detached person dwelling in every home and boarding house, and in the name of all the churches combine, to urge upon them to make themselves at home and become identified with that local church to which they prefer to belong.

Five Districts.

The city has been divided into five districts; two in north and two in the south end, west of the river, and one district east of the river. Each district has a chairman. The chairmen are as follows: District No. 1, W. G. Reid; District No. 2, Wm. Magill; District No. 3, R. C. Brand; District No. 4, J. A. Johnson; District No. 5, Mr. John Speer. An estimate is being made of the number of visitors required to reach the entire city between two and five o'clock on Friday afternoon, January 4th, then each congregation is asked to furnish its proportion of the visitors. These will be assembled at some central place on Thursday evening, January 3rd, for instruction. No classified list of the strength of the various churches is published. The cards used to obtain information are classified and distributed at once to the authorities of each church according to the preference expressed on the cards.

Rev. Dougall Brown is chairman of the committee, and Rev. Robert Pogue, secretary.

Letter From Peterboro' Boy

Peterboro' Soldier Longs For the End of the War

Miss Maud Hamlin, 254 Munro Avenue, has received the following letter from her brother, Percy Hamlin, who is now overseas with the Canadian forces:

France, 8th Dec., 1917.

Dear Sister,—Here goes for a few lines to you to-night, and I sincerely hope they find you fine and enjoying the best of health, as they leave us three at present (lucky to be).

Well, Maud, it seems a long time now since I heard from you, but I have a good idea how it is. Like ourselves, you get tired writing. It's awful that we all should be so far from each other so long, isn't it? I honestly hope it won't be long till this old war is over. We are completely "fed up," and guess our dear people at home feel the same way. You know, Maud, what makes it so much harder for us over here now is that when we lose perhaps twenty-five or thirty men at a time, we have difficulty in getting reinforcements to take their places. Therefore, it throws nearly double work on us; but if this Conscription Bill passes (and I hope it does) then we will be able to have it easier. I know if everybody voted the way I did, there wouldn't be any doubt about us getting the men over here who should have been here long ago.

Well, Maud, we have got quite a number of Christmas boxes already. We got a beautiful sweater coat each from mother, and believe me, they are dandies; also socks and driving gloves. Mother sure doesn't forget us. It's a true saying, "Mother is your best friend in the world." Isn't she, Maud, old girl?

Well, Maud, I got my pictures at last, the ones I had taken when I was on leave. They are not bad, but plenty of room for improvement, isn't there? Do you think I have changed any since the morning we said bye-bye at the G.T.R. station? Do you remember that? I shall never forget it.

Give my best love and wishes to Will, and don't forget yourself. Bye-bye, Maud.

I remain, ever your sincere brother,
Percy.

Workers Cannot Be Accommodated For The Present

The local Trades and Labour Council, having signified their willingness to supply workmen to help in the building operations at Halifax, His Worship Mayor Duffus sent the following telegram:

In reply, Mayor Duffus received the following wire:

Mayor Jos. J. Duffus, Peterborough.

Telegram received. Owing to the lack of accommodation we cannot handle tradesmen for a few days. Will notify you later. Wire different occupations of these men.

R. S. LOW,
Colonel Mgr. Reconstruction,
Halifax.

Mayor Duffus would like the Secretary of the Trades and Labour Council to give a list of names and occupations of men willing to go.

The advances ranged from two to eight points in the railroad list. All standard shares were being bid up furiously.

How To Prevent Acid Stomachs And Food-Fermentation

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has given many years to the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble is that which causes all the pain and distress, is acid in the stomach, usually due to or aggravated by food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. These both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In fact such cases—and they comprise over 90 per cent of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective acid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—F. J. G.

F. J. Squire, Of Havelock, Committed To Trial On Two Charges Of Perjury

F. J. Squire, of Havelock, was committed for trial on two charges of perjury by County Magistrate Langley this morning. The preliminary hearing was held in the Police Court Room, Mr. F. D. Kerr appearing for the defence and Mr. Joseph Wearing, representing Crown Attorney Hatton who was engaged on a military tribunal.

One charge was that at the Fire Marshall's inquiry in Havelock on Tuesday, 4th December, Mr. Squire swore falsely to the quantity of coal consumed in the fire that destroyed his warehouse on Saturday, 10th November, and secondly that he swore that he had received a threatening letter previous to the fire, knowing this statement to be false.

In his evidence for the prosecution, Detective Newhall told of a conversation he had with Mr. Squire in Simpson's Hotel, Havelock, subsequent to Fire Marshall Roger's inquiry. Mr. Squire admitted having made foolish statements on that occasion, and finally came to Peterborough and wrote a long confession which was presented in Court. It was an admission reversing in effect, the statements upon which the perjury charges are based.

Detective Newhall said that Mr. Squire was greatly unnerved and could scarcely spell the words of the statement he signed.

Chief Thompson and Mr. F. Clitheroe, of Toronto, official stenographer at Fire Marshall Rogers' inquiry, were also called as witnesses. The evidence at that investigation recalled Mr. Squire's testimony that about a week before the fires on 10th November, he, as officer of the military tribunal in Havelock, had received a threatening letter, which he said he destroyed.

Tragedy In Curio Shop Link With The Crippen Case

There is a curious link between the famous Crippen case and the recent tragedy at Paddington, Eng.

The victim was a Mr. Lewis Henry Salmon, who was found dead at the ness as an antique furniture dealer. dington, where he carries on business as an antique furniture dealer.

It was from Mr. Salmon that Crippen bought the sack in which he wrapped part of his wife's body, and it is also believed that from his store was obtained the boy's suit in which Miss Le Neve was disguised when she fled with Crippen to Montreal.

There seems no doubt that robbery was the motive of the crime; but, though murder does not seem to have been intended, Mr. Salmon was left tied and gagged in such a brutal way that he died very shortly either from suffocation or syncope.

WAS WITH OFFICER.

Apparently the last seen of Mr. Salmon by anyone in the neighbourhood was by Councillor Samuel Goldhill, who keeps a tabacconist's next door. "He went out just before four on the day of the crime, to keep an appointment, and asked me to keep an eye on his shop," Councillor Goldhill told a London Daily Chronicle representative. "During his absence a captain in the army inquired for him, and when Mr. Salmon came back about ten to five I saw them enter the shop together."

DISCOVERY OF THE CRIME.

There is no evidence of Mr. Salmon having been seen by anyone after that time until the crime was discovered by two Royal Flying Corps men at 6.45, but during the weekend the police have been making inquiries about two men in civilian clothes and two Australian soldiers, who are said by various people to have been noticed about the shop.

First-class Mechanics Irvine and Hayes, who are staying at a billet in the neighbourhood while undergoing instructions in aerial bombing, told a Daily Chronicle representative that they entered the shop to make a purchase, but found it in darkness, and received no answer to their knocks and calls. Noticing a light from a small window in a partition which separates the shop from the office, they looked through, and saw Mr. Salmon's body lying face upwards on the floor.

BOUND WITH BOOTLACES.

The soldiers quickly gave the alarm, and Supt. Short, Chief Inspector McMillan, Divisional Inspector Savage, and other officers were soon on the scene. Mr. Salmon was dead, but it was apparent from the fact that the body was still warm that the crime had not been committed long before. It was found that he had been tied up with boot-laces, seemingly taken from a pair of boots lying in the shop, while a piece of linen, which may have been part of a handkerchief, had been used for the gag.

SIGNS OF A STRUGGLE.

The laces were cutting right into the flesh of the wrists and so roughly was the gagging done that the lips and mouth were badly lacerated. There had evidently been a struggle, for the only gas-jet in the shop was smashed, a chair had been overturned, and clothing from the stock was strewn over the floor. According to the statement of a cab attendant engaged outside the restaurant next door, the light in the shop disappeared soon after the two men described above entered the shop.

LEFT MANY VALUABLES.

Mr. Salmon was known by his friends habitually to carry about with him Treasury notes to the value of £20 to £50, for he was liable to be called away to sales at short notice, and as these and a gold watch and gold and platinum chain are missing there would seem no doubt that robbery was the motive. His tie-pin, sleeve-links and rings all of value, were left, and as apart from a desk in the office nothing in the premises had been touched, it is obvious the assault and robbery was an affair of minutes only.

IN A CROWDED STREET.

The assailants must have known they were liable to be disturbed any moment, for the spot was crowded with people at the time, and at least a dozen taxis were standing outside while their drivers were in the restaurant.

PRESERVE YOUR SHOES.

It Will Repay You to Give Them Proper Care and Attention.

We all wear shoes. If we manage them rightly they will last longer, we will not need so many new ones and there will be more left for others. The following suggestions from the leather and paper laboratory of the United States department of agriculture can be utilized by every one who walks:

Shoes should be oiled or greased whenever the leather begins to get hard or dry. They should be brushed thoroughly and then all the dirt and mud that remains washed off with warm water, the excess water being taken off with a dry cloth. While the shoes are still wet and warm apply the oil or grease with a swab of wool or flannel. It is best to have the oil or grease about as warm as the hand can bear, and it should be rubbed well into the leather, preferably with the palm. If necessary the oil can be applied to dry leather, but it penetrates better when the latter is wet. After treatment the shoes should be left to dry in a place that is warm, not hot.

Castor oil is satisfactory for shoes that are to be polished; for plainer footgear neatsfoot, fish oil or oleine may be substituted. If it is desired to make the shoes and boots more waterproof beef tallow may be added to any of these substances at the rate of half a pound of tallow to a pint of oil. The edge of the sole and the welt should be greased thoroughly. Too much grease cannot be applied to these parts.

A simple method of making the soles more durable, pliable and water resistant is to swab them occasionally with linseed oil, setting them aside to dry overnight.

Many of the common shoe polishes are harmful to leather. All those which contain sulphuric, hydrochloric or oxalic acids, turpentine, benzine or other volatile solvents have a tendency to harden the leather and make it more liable to crack.

It is poor economy, too, to wear a shoe with the heel badly worn on one side. This throws the shoe out of shape and may soon result in its ruin. It is also likely to cause temporary injury to the foot.

Hair and Cold Water.

To make your hair grow use cold water as it runs from the hydrant. Apply the water to your hair with your wet hands and run your fingers through what hair you have or rub your scalp with your wet cold hands. This exercise will bring the blood to the scalp, and only from the blood can you get new hair or make the hair you already have more luxuriant. You cannot get hair from grease. Nothing in the world is so good for the hair as cold water applied with the wet hands until the water has reached the scalp. But do not immerse your head in cold water. This is all too much of a shock.

Think Health.

It is not a fear of illness or of death that we should encourage, but a love of health, a sense of responsibility for the care of our bodies, a desire for bodily endurance and efficiency and full achievement.

If the mind is fixed on these ideals and the already known means of approaching them are utilized the needless miseries that embitter the lives of so many may be left to take care of themselves.

It is not so much necessary to fight disease as to cultivate health for the happiness, contentment and moral gain that it brings.

First Use of "Magazine."

"Magazine," properly a storehouse (Arabian), has been annexed by literature, but it is interesting to recall the birth of its now common literary use—in that venerable periodical, the Gentleman's Magazine. In the introduction to its number (1731) we read, "This consideration has induced several gentlemen to treasure up, as in a magazine, the most remarkable pieces on the subjects above mentioned."—London Times.

Cheap Living.

Miss Clara P. Lasadis, of Toronto, a lady interested in social welfare work, and who has been residing in Vancouver since March 15 last, declares that it is possible to live in the coast city on 27 cents a day. In fact, she avows she has made a practical demonstration in that respect and has gained weight in the process. Possibly she is right, for it is undoubtedly true that a person can eke out an existance on very little in case of necessity. Just the same, even the most provident person cannot revel in food luxury on 27 cents a day, even in a period of depression and consequent low prices.

DRAFTING AN ARMY

Conscription Had Its Origin in France in 1798.

THEN SPREAD OVER EUROPE

The Terrible Power It Placed in Napoleon's Hands Forced the Other Nations to Adopt the System—Its Introduction Into This Country.

Conscription originated in France in 1798. At that time the country had just passed through the long and bloody war of the French revolution, which the monarchs of Europe had banded together to crush. France, under Napoleon, had come forth victorious, but her army was exhausted, and it was evident that some new system of recruiting would be necessary, as volunteer enlistment no longer sufficed.

It was then that General Jourdan brought forth and passed the law establishing conscription. Since then it has been the basis of all French military legislation and, to a certain extent, of that of all other countries.

It was through the terrible power of conscription that Napoleon was enabled to carry on the gigantic wars which characterized his reign and by means of it, after losing in the snows of Russia the largest army that up till that time had ever been put into the field to reappear a few months later with another army almost as large.

Out of necessity the other nations were forced to follow France's example, and conscription became general.

Under the French regime every citizen between the ages of twenty and twenty-five was liable to service for five years. Prussia, however, still further developed the powers of conscription by reducing the period of service in the ranks and passing her soldiers as soon as they were sufficiently trained into a reserve force, thus by degrees training her whole population.

This latter system, which was considered as one of the most farreaching and important events of the last century, owed its origin to the conditions imposed on Prussia by Napoleon at the treaty of Tilsit, whereby Prussia was restricted to a standing army of 43,000 men. She kept to the letter of the law by maintaining her army at the prescribed number, but her trained citizen reserve force was limited only by the population of the country.

The military history of the United States is as remarkable as the rise and rapid growth of the nation itself. In 1790, as fixed by an act of congress, the rank and file of our army amounted to 1,216 men, and in 1814 an English expedition with only 3,500 men was able to seize and burn Washington.

Conscription first made its appearance here at the time of the war between the states. At the beginning of the war in 1861 our whole regular force was but 14,000 men. At first the northern army was increased by volunteer enlistment, but the unexpected prolongation of the war proved this method too slow to replenish the waste of the armies, and in 1863 the government resorted to a draft.

The first attempt to carry it out met with forcible resistance and led to a serious riot in the city of New York, which lasted for several days. All opposition, however, was put down and the draft executed with all possible forbearance and justice. Exemptions and substitute purchases were so freely given in the north that the draft had little effect except as a stimulus to the states in bringing to full strength their quotas of volunteers by voting bounties.

In the south, however, conscription was sweeping from the first, and toward the end of the war it became omnivorous. Every man between the ages of seventeen and fifty-five was legally liable to service, the only excuse being physical incapacity.

The total number of men called under arms by the government of the United States between April, 1861, and April, 1865, amounted to more than 2,750,000, nearly half of this number being raised by conscription. If to this we add the 1,100,000 men from the southern states the total armed force of the country at that time amounted to almost 4,000,000, drawn from a population of only 32,000,000.

Why They Have Green Backs.

Why the United States banknotes are printed with green backs is not generally known, although there is a most excellent reason for it. The great drawback to paper currency, says the Baltimore American, is the likelihood of its being counterfeited, and therefore experts are constantly at work to contrive ways of making it impossible to copy such bills.

Stacy J. Edson was the man who in 1857 invented the green ink that Uncle Sam uses on his bank bills. The ink, which was patented, is anti-photographic—that is, it cannot be photographed, nor can counterfeiters in trying to get a facsimile of the notes move it with alkalies. The secret of the ingredients of the ink of course is carefully preserved.

Exceptional Case.

"You should never laugh at another's misfortune."

"But the man who just now stumbled over a dog while chasing his hat is a notorious practical joker."

"Oh, if that's the case, I'll join in a hearty laugh. Hah, hah, hah!"

Too Enthusiastic.

"No, that salesman could not interest me in his car after the unfortunate remark that he dropped."

"What was that?"

"He said that his car was a winner, and then he added that it would win in a walk."

CLEVERNESS OF A THIEF.

He Made the Job a Thorough One While He Was About It.

The retail store is often the recipient of unreasonable demands for adjustment of one sort or another, but the following incident related by a man in the business seems to be a high light in the picture.

In this case the theft of a package of dress goods and silks was made from a delivery wagon by a crook, whose procedure indicated an experienced hand in department store methods. He immediately took the package, which had been purchased C. O. D., to the customer who had bought the goods and was paid the $12 called for by them. The dress fabrics had been bought for the purpose of making a suit, and the customer asked the pseudo delivery man to take the package around to her dressmaker, whose shop was only a few blocks away. She paid him a quarter for doing this, and he skipped around to the dressmaker.

Here was where he began to show real cleverness. The story he told the dressmaker upon turning the package over to her was that her customer had paid $10 on the goods and wanted her to make up the difference, which was $2, and put it on the bill for the suit. This account seemed perfectly plausible to the dressmaker, who promptly paid out the $2, knowing that the goods were worth a good deal more. The thief was then just $14.25 to the good—$12 as the original payment, 25 cents as a tip and $2 that the dressmaker paid.

The store in this case was out the $12, which would seem to be sufficient punishment for the driver's lack of vigilance, but the customer was by no means satisfied to let the matter drop there. She wanted the store to pay back the $2 the dressmaker had given out. This claim, of course, could not be allowed.

He Was Game.

They had been married three months and were having their first quarrel, which shows that they were a remarkable couple.

"Evidently," she said icily, "you regret that you have married me. The step is not irrevocable, however. If you care to be released from your bonds"—

"Naw," he interrupted impatiently, "I'm no ninety day recruit. I enlisted for the term of the war."

She couldn't think of any retort, so she maintained a scornful silence.

History and Legend.

Not far from the town of Charlotte Amalie, in what was once the Danish West Indies, are two old towers commonly known as Bluebeard's castle and Blackbeard's castle. Legend has it that here these daring old buccaneers had their headquarters and played their romantic roles as "the hornets of the Spanish main," but history disputes legend, for it says that they were really built by the Danish government as a measure of defense in 1689.

Screw Propellers.

Experiments made with two screw propellers for ships, one behind the other, show that but little increased speed is obtained by the arrangement, and rotating the two screws in opposite directions, either at the same or different speeds, has little effect on the results. It is, however, claimed that the double screw gives better control of the vessel.

Not a Gift.

"Did her father give the bride away?"

"No. He said that would be a silly custom when he knew very well that in a few weeks they'd both be back living at his expense."

PATHETIC CASE OF AGE.

Have Pity For the Man Who Has Outlived His Usefulness.

Whenever age has stricken from a man his power of usefulness and activity there is demand for human sympathy. He may be the inmate of a home of luxury or so placed that his bodily needs and the companionship of equals and friends may be all that is to be desired, still the old man whose life work has closed and who must sit idly by and watch the sands in the hour glass run swiftly out is an object of profound consideration and should be given the veneration that his position and past deserve.

Of all human beings who through advancing years or bodily affliction have reached the limit of usefulness man is the most pitiable. His has been the work of actual accomplishment. He has depended on his strength as a great fortress and has been lavish in its use. Unlike the woman or the child or the mentally and physically afflicted during life, he has been the world builder and the home maker. On his shoulders have rested the great tasks of life, the creation of a home, the support of a family and the achievement of great things in business and society.

To lay these things all aside at the behest of Time's beckoning finger and the approaching decay in mind and body is a tragic thing, however much we may glorify the peace and calm that is said to come in the sunset days of life. The old man is largely a stranger in a land made strange by the absence of many of those with whom he began the journey.

WILL HAVE BINDER TWINE.

An ample supply of binder twine for Canadian requirements next year at reasonable prices has been ensured, as the result of an agreement reached between the United States Food Administration and the Mexican sisal growers of Yucatan. Information to this effect was received yesterday at the office of the Food Controller. The growers were holding out for a high price, but under the arrangement just consummated the entire crop has been secured at a slight advance over last year's price. Co-operation of Canada and the United States in controlling food exports from the continent was one of the factors which made it possible to secure the sisal supply on reasonable terms.

Faces Charge Of Having Three Wives

Chief Thompson Successfully Employed Ruse to Obtain Evidence He Required

With three wives in Peterborough, Belleville and Toronto, a man who claimed to be a private detective, was placed under arrest yesterday afternoon by Chief Thompson, and a charge of bigamy laid against him on evidence which he himself had gathered for the Chief. The long arm of coincidence reached out and played right into the Chief's hand in one of the most singular cases he has handled in his administration.

A stranger applied to the Chief some months ago for a position on the detective staff. He claimed to have qualifications and experience as a private detective. Failing in this venture he went to work at the Matthew-Blackwell Company and the Chief had all but forgotten the man and the incident when he recently received a letter from a Belleville woman asking for information about her husband, who had suddenly left her. His disappearance and certain vague rumours had aroused the suspicion among her friends that he might have been previously married, and the woman was as anxious to clear up this doubt as to regain her spouse. He was supposed to have come to Peterborough.

Chief Thompson recalled the name of his would-be detective as that of the missing husband, and immediately sent out for him.

The Chief's questions conveyed the suggestion that the man was wanted as a defaulter under the Military Service Act, and so perturbed did he become that he assured the police he could prove that he was a married man. In short, the detective procured from Toronto documentary evidence of his marriage there in 1912. One evening he called the Chief's house to inform him that he had the "papers," but Chief Thompson dangled him at the end of the Military Act in order not to arouse any suspicion of the actual service in prospect for the marriage certificate. The man was instructed to call at the office in a day or two, and yesterday he arrived red-handed, but unconscious of the trap the Chief had encouraged the man to set securely for himself.

"What about your marriage in Belleville?" the Chief asked him when the Toronto wedding bells were janglingly re-echoed, and the three-times bridegroom looked at the floor expecting it to drop beneath him. He took the count and eventually found himself downstairs in a cell, held on a charge of bigamy.

The Toronto wedding was celebrated in 1912, according to the information in Chief Thompson's possession; in July, 1917, he married the Belleville girl, and coming to Peterborough took unto himself a third wife for whom he conveniently changed his religion. If this record is an indication of the scarcity of husbands, or the surplus of unmarried women, the situation must be more serious than even the public has feared.

First Letter From Brother in 27 Years

Mr. G. H. Giroux has received a letter from his brother, Mr. W. P. Giroux, of Hibbing, Minn., from whom he had not heard since 1890. After 27 years the long overdue correspondence brought word to Mr. Giroux that his brother, who is a State Fire Warden in Minnesota, had fared well in his forestry work. He had lost his children except one son, who had enlisted in the United States' navy and is now on the battleship "Oklahoma."

Although Alfred had arrived at the age of twenty-one years he showed no inclination either to pursue his studies or in any way adapt himself to his father's business.

"I don't know what I will ever make of that son of mine," bitterly bemoaned his father, a hustling business man.

"Maybe he hasn't found himself yet," consoled the confidential friend. "Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted?" queried the father, "Well, I should say he is! He ain't got a darned thing that wasn't given to him."—Tit-Bits

Quietly in St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at 6.15, in the presence only of the immediate family and friends, the wedding was solemnised of Sue A. Kelly, 374 Downie Street, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kelly of this city, and J. A. Orr, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Orr, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Rev. Father Kelly, parish priest of Parry Sound, and brother of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride was very charming in a French gown of taupe charmeuse and Georgette crepe, with a small hat to match.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Orr left by the C.P.R. for Montreal for a short honeymoon, after which they will reside in Pembroke.

BRUMWELL—MULLIGAN.

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon, when their daughter, Ola Muriel, was united in marriage to Alexander McKenzie Brumwell, of Loverna, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robt. Pogue. The bride was assisted by her sister, Gladys, and the groom by Sergt. W. J. Irvine, who has just returned from France. The bride looked very sweet in a coffee brown charmeuse dress with gold trimmings. The beautiful array of gifts received showed the high place the young couple occupied in the hearts of their many friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome seal coat. The happy couple left on the 4 o'clock train, C.P.R., for Toronto and other cities. On their return they will stay a few weeks before leaving for their home in Loverna, Sask.

BULMER—MITCHELL.

On Tuesday, December 25, a quiet wedding was solemnized in Beaverton, when Miss Francis V. Mitchell was united in marriage to Mr. Oscar A. Bulmer, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, after which Mr. and Mrs. Bulmer left for Peterborough, thence to Toronto. Their many friends will join in wishing them a long and happy life.

INCREASE IN COAL OUTPUT.

Record Established During November in the Bituminous Fields.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27. — While several sections of the country actually are suffering for want of coal, mines producing bituminous coal turned out more during November than in any month in history, with one exception, the Geological Survey reported to-day. These mines are practically one month ahead of the 1916 production, and if the present output is maintained production this year will be 9 per cent. in excess of last year.

The average daily production, the report says, was 1,372,000 tons, and it was attained through the increase in the output in Illinois, Indiana, and western Kentucky. Much of the increase in Illinois and Indiana is attributed to the fact that the miners had just returned from the strike in effect during October.

Mines in central Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia and eastern Kentucky fell below their monthly record, while those in western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan barely held their own.

Sword And Fist Of The Kaiser No Longer Have Disturbing Effect

Washington Undisturbed by Boastful Speech Which Ends Peace Rumours—Absence of Reference to Submarine Campaign Taken as Admission of Its Failure

MADE TO BUOY UP SOLDIERS' COURAGE

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 28. —If anything was needed to put a quietus upon speculation in Washington concerning the possibility of a German holiday peace offer it has been supplied by the Kaiser's threat of the iron fist and the shining sword.

As a matter of fact peace rumours originating in Germany no longer have a disturbing effect. The report that the Kaiser was preparing for purposes of self-justification to make another essay at peace, conceived in harmony with the pan-Germanic idea, aroused only casual interest in official quarters. The rejection of any proposal that might be forthcoming from the Teutonic Powers at present was accepted as a foregone conclusion. There has been no delusion about the iron fist and at no time has the attention of the government been diverted from the task of preparing to meet the blow the German military chieftains are making ready to deliver.

Shows View of Militarists.

The Kaiser's boast is regarded as much more typical of the state of mind of the German military leaders than any intimation that Germany is ready to lay down the sword and enter into negotiations for a peace based upon justice and right. To the extent that he has portrayed himself as ready to batter down the doors of those who will not have peace according to the German notion, the Kaiser has relieved his government of the necessity of clearing away any remnant of doubt that might have existed on that point. To that extent official Washington is well pleased with his utterances.

Army officers returning from Europe have brought with them the conviction that the German militarists are looking forward to the supreme phase of their great struggle for domination within the coming year. There is reason to believe that Germany is exerting herself to the utmost to strike the greatest blow of which she is capable before the American armies reach France to provide, as Secretary Baker expresses, the only remaining reservoir of fresh troops. The Kaiser's speech, in which he claims the Lord of Creation as an ally, is viewed in Washington rather as an attempt to buoy up the courage of the German soldiers than as a threat to the Allies and the United States. The spirit of bravado which pervades his utterances has had in Washington the opposite effect it was obviously intended to have upon the war-weary German people.

Submarine Campaign Failing.

Attention was called to-day to the failure of the German Emperor to allude to the submarine as holding out the promise of success. The assurance that England would be brought to the point of starvation within a few months and France forced to her knees by the submarine ravages is no longer held out to the Germans. The Kaiser himself virtually admits the failure of the submarine campaign by referring to the masses of ammunition and guns the Allies have been able to concentrate in France.

The submarine campaign has been a failure from the German point of view. However, serious the havoc the U-boats have created and still threaten to create, the danger is gradually, but inevitably, growing less, and the virtual vanquishing of the submarine is not improbable before many months have passed. The Kaiser's speech has given rise to some doubt that the heralded holiday peace proposal will ever be made. But of the efforts of the German militarists to put forward their maximum strength, before the strength of the allies, has been increased by the American armies now under training there is little doubt.

The threat of the "iron fist" is also regarded as a public confession bat the military party in Germany has come out into the open and is now dominating the government.

In some diplomatic quarters there is a suspicion that the Kaiser's bravado may be a stormy prelude to the peace terms which may be submitted to the Russian proposals, intended to forestall criticism of a peace policy of which the Kaiser and junkers have reason to be apprehensive. The German people have so long been fed on promises of conquest and the extension of the German commercial empire that peace terms which fall short of it might arouse popular hostility toward the government.

SINKING U-BOATS TWICE AS FAST AS HUN BUILDS THEM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—German submarines are being sunk almost twice as fast as new ones are being built. Figures based on latest available data from Paris and London give the present rate of destruction at 1.25 a day, while there is trustworthy evidence to prove that the rate of construction does not exceed .75 a day.

The fact that the Allies have succeeded in destroying U-boats faster than Germany is turning them out is believed here to have prompted the new plan announced by the German Admiralty to double the capacity of the submarine construction yards at Kiel.

Reports reaching naval circles show that the campaign against the U-boat has increased in effectiveness till now it promises more and more to destroy German hopes of making it a decisive factor in the war.

In a general way, it can be said that the work of British and American destroyers and other anti-submarine craft, with the increasing effectiveness of depth bombs, largely is responsible. The submarine is being beaten more by direct methods of attack than by increasing shipping to offset losses.

There had been a tendency earlier in the war to confine operations to protecting merchantmen. This meant a defensive programme in the sense that the lurking U-boats were not sought out with particular zeal, but were allowed to first show their presence.

The theory of anti-submarine operations at that time was largely defensive, and a feature of it was that the construction of new ships could be relied on to defeat the main purpose of the U-boats, which was to bring about the commercial starvation of Great Britain and France.

Recently, however, the plan of campaign was changed. The prevailing idea became one of aggressive action against submarines, whether they were stalking their prey or not.

New York Times: Both parties, all parties, may be sick, are sick, of the direct primary. Seeing in this state and in every other state that possesses this grand secret of political virue that it is a fraud, the easily manipulated instrument of bosses that it lowers instead of raises the standard of candidates, that at best it is an awkward huggermugger and ineffective means of nomination "common ordinary" citizens and politicians foolish enough to be frank cry out against it, cry for the restoration of the state convention.

12. Verse 11. What is the ground for certainty that those who seek Jesus will surely find him?

Lesson for Sunday, Jan. 6 1918. John Prepares the Way For Jesus. Mark 1:1-11.

Once there were two men and a lady who decided to go fishing. They took a boat and rowed quite a distance out to sea, and as the fish were not biting very well, the lady was trailing her hand in the water. Suddenly she pulled her hand into the boat and cried, "Oh, I have lost my diamond ring!"

The water was too deep for a person to dive and get the ring, so although the lady felt very badly about it, nothing could be done. Just before they started toward the shore one of the men hooked an exceedingly big fish.

That night they had some of that fish for dinner. All of a sudden the lady who had lost the diamond ring bit on something hard, and what do you think it was? It was a fish bone. —Harper's Magazine.

VICTORY LOAN

Payments due on January the 2nd may be made at any time to and including January the 11th. Scrip Certificates will be delivered in exchange for payments then due. Payments due January the 2nd must be made at the Bank branch mentioned in the application.

The extension of time to January the 11th is given for the convenience of subscribers and Banks so that subscribers will not be unduly detained waiting their turn at a Receiving Teller's wicket, as would most likely be the case if all payments had to be made on one day only. Subscribers should not wait until January the 11th, or a day or so before, and thus create the situation sought to be avoided. In every case, interest at the rate of five and one half per cent per annum from January the 2nd must be paid if payment is not made on or before the 11th.

For the convenience of subscribers, by arrangement of the Canadian Bankers' Association, Banks will remain open on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, January 3rd and 4th, and on the afternoon of Saturday, January the 5th. Evening hours 7.30 to 9.30. Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

It has been brought to the attention of the Finance Department that a considerable number of subscribers, who have deposits with Banks, are under the impression that their Banks will take care of their January payments by automatically debiting their accounts with the necessary payments. This is incorrect. Each and every subscriber must personally arrange for these payments.

Although Thomas Hardy, the famous English novelist, has lived so long in Dorsetshire, among the very scenes he has depicted graphically in his books, he is of such a retiring and modest disposition that his fame is unknown to a number of his quiet country folk who live in his vicinity.

There is an amusing story of an enthusiastic admirer who visited Dorsetshire and approached an old lady whom he found sitting outside her cottage door.

"Mr. Hardy lives near here, doesn't he?" he inquired.

"Which Mr. Hardy?" asked the old woman.

"Why Thomas Hardy, who writes books," replied the astonished pilgrim.

"Oh, I know naught about him," said the woman; "but there be a Hardy near by that rears grand pigs!"—Youth's Companion.

OUR BOYS IN EUROPE AND HOME PROTECTION

The men on the firing line represent the pick of our country's youth. Many were rejected because of physical deficiency. Many times the kidneys were to blame.

If we want to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says that you should drink plenty of water daily between meals. Then procure at a drug store, Anuric (double strength). This "An-u-ric" drives the uric acid out and cures backache and rheumatism.

If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a diet of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month.

Send Dr. Pierce 10c for trial pkg. Anuric—many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

Preston, Ont.—"I am pleased to express my experience with Anuric. I have been troubled with rheumatism in right limb and hand for several years, and lately in left shoulder. The only way I could lie was on my back. I had great difficulty to sit down and more to get up. Lately I had a very severe pain in my back. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery several times with the most satisfactory results, so I concluded to give his Anuric Tablets a trial. The pain in limb and shoulder has stopped entirely and in right hand it is very slight and getting less all the time. I can now sit or lie in any position I wish without discomfort or pain. I recommended the Anuric Tablets to two parties and they both claim decided improvement. I certainly will recommend them to any one troubled with the kidneys; there is nothing nearly so good; I tried them all."—Gronau Boos, cor. Duke and Waterloo.

PREPARING FOR THE 1918 CROP

THIS year it has been no unusual sight in the Prairie Provinces of Canada to see breaking and cultivating being done right up to the end of November. More fall plowing has been completed this year than would previously have been considered possible. In places day and night shifts have been working. While no definite estimates as to the area that will be ready for crop next spring are available, it is certain that the increase over this year's will be considerable. Authorities in close touch with conditions in Saskatchewan estimate that sixty per cent more fall plowing has been completed in that province this year than last year. In Alberta it is estimated that the amount of fall plowing done exceeds last year's by approximately fifty per cent, while in Manitoba farmers have been just as active all over the province. Whether these figures are accurate or no, it is certain that the area available for crop in Western Canada next spring will be considerably greater than it was this year.

In their efforts for greater production the farmers have no doubt been greatly aided by the favorable weather of November, and it will surprise a good many who perhaps imagine that for six months of the year the climate of Western Canada is comparable with that of the Arctic regions to learn that the average minimum temperature at Calgary during the month of November this year was above 31 degrees, while the average maximum temperature was higher than 58 degrees. There was almost continual sunshine between the hours of sunrise and sunset, and the lowest temperatures were recorded just before sunrise.

But it was not the favorable weather alone that was responsible for so much work being accomplished. The patriotic desire to produce as much food as possible in this country, where, all things considered, the staple foods of the world can be produced more economically than anywhere else, and the liberal returns that await those who are engaged in this work, have been the real incentive. The favorable weather of November has given farmers an opportunity to accomplish more work than they had expected to be able to do. In the past, however, weather in November has been equally suitable to farming operations, but, lacking the incentive of the present time, advantage has been so generally taken of it as this year.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

My Hypothetical Wife

A Story of Preparation For War

By F. A. MITCHEL

While driving through the country I came upon a house situated in a yard filled with shrubs and flowers in which a sign was hung, as follows: "School of Matrimony."

"School of Matrimony!" I repeated to myself. "Surely there is something interesting behind that sign. I will go in and see what it is."

I found a middle aged, intellectual looking man, who introduced me to his wife, a comely woman, who excused herself, leaving me alone with her husband. Before quitting the room she spoke a few words to him, and I noticed that, though what she had to say was of ordinary character, there was something in her tone and manner that denoted a deep affection for him.

"Seeing your sign, sir," I said to the gentleman—Mr. Larramore was his name—"I have called to learn what it means."

"Are you meditating matrimony?" he asked.

"Well, yes. Every man meditates matrimony except those who are married, and many of those meditate divorce."

"It is that divorce—I mean divorce between couples with no well founded reason for separation—which my wife and I undertake to prevent by educating those about to be married in the dangers which they are sure to encounter during the early days of wedded life."

"Will you state your educational plan?" I asked.

"Certainly; there is nothing secret in it. By attending divorce court proceedings my wife and I have collected a large number of reasons why couples drift into what is commonly called incompatibility. On these reasons or incidents we have constructed tables showing that the greatest number of breaks which occur between two normal, well intending married persons take place within three years after marriage. From that time they diminish rapidly. The most difficult period for them to get over is from the third to the tenth month of wedded life. We instruct our pupils in the dangers the are liable to meet during these nine months. Those which follow are but a repetition of those that have been incurred before. Those who know the perils they are to meet have a far better chance of resisting them than those who meet them without having been prepared for them."

"Do your courses consist simply of verbal instruction, or do your pupils receive practical instruction?"

You may want to change your automobile, or your piano, or even your home—but you will never want to change the COFFEE, when once you taste the delectable flavour of Chase & Sanborn's "SEAL BRAND" COFFEE.

"We deliver lectures, 1 to men, my wife to women, but we have a co-educative course wherein couples hypothetically married are carried through most quarrels. During the quarrels they use their own judgment as to wherein either one or the other is in error, the instructor correcting them from time to time, pointing out the dangers of certain acts during trying moments or suggesting methods liable to bring about immediate reconciliation."

"I think," I broke in at this part, "that I will enter myself in your academy as a student on the co-education plan."

Having been accepted as a pupil, I paid my tuition fee, and after attending the lectures for a couple of weeks Mr. Larramore showed me a number of photographs of young ladies from whom I might select a dummy wife. I pounced upon a pretty girl whose appearance denoted amiability and applied for her. It happened that she was not engaged. I was introduced to her, and our drill was commenced. I was handed a printed slip which read as follows:

"My dear, when I married you I supposed I was marrying you alone. I had no intention of marrying your family."

I was instructed by Mr. Larramore to speak these words angrily to my dummy wife. I did so, and despite the fact that I was playing a part I saw the hot blood mount to her cheek. She made no reply, for the instructor interposed.

"Those words should not have been uttered," he said, "though they may have been felt. When a man marries a woman, in a sense he marries her family—that is to say, he cannot ignore them. Whatever is near and dear to her must be treated with consideration by him. If some old maiden aunt addresses him on first meeting him by his first name he may writhe within, but outwardly he should act as if the lady and he had been brought up as near relations."

"H'm!" I remarked. "Are my wife's relatives one of the dangers of matrimony?"

"One of the principal ones," replied our teacher.

"I would have you to understand," replied my hypothetical wife, "that my family is as good as yours and, I've no doubt, better."

This was not down in the course of instruction and somewhat rattled me. But Mr. Larramore took advantage of it to get in some excellent points on the subject of marital relatives and how they should be gingerly handled, not on their own account, but on account of their connection with the parties concerned. Then he gave my dummy a printed slip, which she read as spoke to me. It was very long, indeed, it was a veritable curtain lecture. Mr. Larramore nodded to me to take my own course in shutting her off. The only course that suggested itself to me was this:

"If you keep on talking long enough perhaps you'll say something worth hearing in time."

At this our instructor called a halt.

"Where is the error in this case?" he asked me.

"The error is in a woman's endless chain of words," was my reply.

"Wrong! Your wife was simply letting off steam. The feminine nerves are different from those of men, and a husband should recognize this. You should have let your wife talk until she was talked out."

"What! Listen to that rubbish! Where do the husband's nerves come in?"

"His part is to leave the room quietly and without banging the door behind him."

—"See here, professor," I began angrily, "I'd have you understand"—

"Recess," interrupted the professor, and opened the door of a pleasant little room, in which there were flowers and birds and pictures on subjects conducive to happy emotions. "Go in there and make up."

"What a pretty room!" said my hypothetical wife, a smile breaking over her pretty lips.

"Delightful!" I assented.

We were left together for some time, longer than I thought necessary for practice in reconciliation between husband and wife, though altogether too short for a pair of lovers. Indeed, I would not have objected to a much longer period. Mr. Larramore summoned us to new marital trials, apologizing for leaving us so long.

"We have a room in which we put extremely amiable couples," he said, "for the severest test that can be applied. It is furnished throughout in red. The reason for my delay in your case is that I put a couple in the red room, and there resulted such a bitter quarrel that it required all my strength to separate them. Never furnish a room in red; it excites animosity."

"What did you do with this couple?" I asked.

"They are now in the violet room, billing and cooing."

"May I ask, professor, what proportion of divorces your tables indicated are mother-in-law cases?"

"Ninety per cent."

"Is it the mother-in-law virus alone that produces the trouble or are there other ingredients?"

"Quite often there are other ingredients, but it is safe to say that with the mother-in-law removed 75 per cent of such cases would pull through."

"What is the best anti-toxin," I asked, "for a wife on the verge of transferring her affections to another man?"

"Another woman."

"And I suppose my hypothetical wife's part in the anti-toxin for a husband infatuated with another woman than his wife is another man?"

"Only as a last resort," replied the professor. "The interference of the other man is liable to throw a stain on the wife."

Mrs. Larramore was passing, and her husband referred the question to her.

"The treatment of a husband infatuated by another woman," she said, "requires more self control than any other case. The safest plan is for the wife to ignore the infatuation and not appear jealous, for the man is pretty sure to tire of the other woman in time. A man whose home is made attractive to him is not likely to give it up for good unless he is badly handled."

Professor Larramore recommenced his drilling in the matrimonial manuals, but the practice was rather on points calculated to bring about trouble than those in which a quarrel had got under way. These matters did not interest me. I made several irritating remarks to my hypothetical wife that made her very angry for the purpose of being sent to the making up room. When we were returned there the lady said:

"I wouldn't marry you for the wealth of the Indies!"

"Do you know why I said those villainous things to you?"

"Because you are naturally vicious, I suppose."

"Because our former making up was so delightful that I wished to make up over again."

I was drilled with my hypothetical wife in avoiding matrimonial whirlpools twice a week for six weeks, at the end of which time we were each given a certificate that we were master and mistress of the art. When the diplomas were given us the professor said that we were fitted to pass the matrimonial danger period with anything short of a tarantula or a porcupine, and I am sure that we had been subjected to every conceivable test that can possibly arise between two newly married persons.

In parting with my hypothetical wife at her home at 1 o'clock the next morning I said, with a sigh:

"It seems a pity after having been so well equipped for wedlock that we should part at the very point where we should be united."

She looked at the floor and partly turned her head. She did not learn this at the matrimonial school. It is something born in woman to come out on the expectation of a proposal.

"Don't you think," I continued, "that having been hypothetically educated we may as well be actually married?"

"Perhaps our training will avail nothing after all."

"Yes it will. We'll have a room done in violet and filled with buds and flowers."

She consented. We were married, but our education failed when it came to be put in practice. We quarrel at times, like other couples.

Scriptural Place Names.

England can boast that no other country possesses so many Scriptural place names as it does. The name of Jericho occurs six times on the ordnance maps, Paradise five times and Nineveh, Mount Zion, Mount Ararat and Mount Ephraim three times each. In Bedfordshire there is a Calvary wood and in Dorsetshire a Jordan hill.

FIGHTING FOR ALLIES

FRENCH COLONIAL TROOPS ANXIOUS TO FIGHT.

Black Men From Africa Eager to Avenge Sufferings of Friends in Teutonic Colonies — Senegalese Have Especially Distinguished Themselves in Important Actions and Are Brave and Loyal.

"YOU white men are forced to fight; we are volunteers," say proudly France's colonial soldiers when they reply to questions as to the reason for their coming to Europe to fight. Whether they come from Senegal, Madasgascar, or Somaliland, all of them express gladness at the opportunity to pay off old scores for cruelties committed on their kindred in the German colonies in Africa, the news of which has been spread among them from one end of the continent to the other by their mysterious methods of communication. All of them know of the fate of the Herrero nation in German Southwest Africa, where only a few wandering groups remain alive of what once was a powerful negro tribe.

Undoubtedly the most popular of the French colonial volunteers are the coal-black Senegalese. Their courage in the field and their devotion to their white officers have become proverbial. The mentality of these tribesmen is almost infantile in its simplicity, but they are quick to learn. Their adaptability is such in warlike matters that they have become expert in very short time with all the most modern weapons and is such that even in their hours of rest in their instruction camps they may be seen in groups exercising with them and repeating the words of command in French, which they rapidly learn.

It has been asserted erroneously that negro troops are not able to support the strain of a bombardment. There certainly have been instances in which a company of Senegalese, when all its white officers have been picked off by German sharpshooters, has hesitated during an advance, but this was merely because they did not know what to do. Douaumont, the battle of the Aisne, the Somme offensive, the attack at Laffaux Mill, and the defense of Craonne and the California and Casemates plateau have all been scenes of the heroic courage of the negro troops under artillery fire of the most terrific character.

A battalion of Senegalese stationed on the spot where the village of Fleury had once stood, on the Verdun front, during the heaviest of the fighting there, made an advance, during which their flank reached almost to the fort of Douaumont. Then they walked into an enfilading fire from dozens of German machine-guns. The French commander, Captain Chauvin, ordered his men to storm the machine-gun positions. The German gunners, on seeing the black warriors coming at them, threw up their hands and surrendered to the number of sixty. The German resistance all along the line was overcome owing to this daring feat. Their brilliant work brought the distinction of the war cross to many of the negro troopers and the entire battalion was mentioned in army orders for its bravery.

When in rest camp the Senegalese amuse themselves like schoolboys. Dancing and singing and gambling occupy much of their time. Many of them, however, give up hours daily to learning French, for they regard everything appertaining to France as better than anything else. One of them came upon a Canadian munition wagon driver repairing his motor and spoke to the Canadian in his broken French. The Canadian did not understand, and the African turned and walked away, wearing a disdainful expression and remarking "What? You don't understand French? Have you never been to school?"

The Deacon's Philosophy.

No one ever gets to heaven before his time, and to most of us it's a long time coming.

The good Lord helps us to hold our ground while the old world's turning to the brighter side, but we seldom credit Providence with that good work.

Ever stop to think that there are just storms enough in life to make the rainbows we sigh for?

Just a Guess.

"What's all that pounding in the other room?" questioned a drummer while he was waiting to see the buyer.

"Dunno," replied the office boy. "I heard the boss say he'd got to frame a speech, an' I guess he's doin' it."

How It Happened.

"How did you happen to quit the stock market?"

"Well, my margin got very narrow and I sort of slipped off."

RANGE FINDING IN THE AIR.

Artillery "Spotters" Undergo an Intense Nervous Strain.

Artillery observation is one of the most important branches of air service. So indispensable is the airman in connection with modern artillery that a noted authority recently stated that if one side had airplanes while the other had none the world war would have been over in six months.

Pilots and observers work in conjunction with a battery. They arrange beforehand with the general staff just where that battery is to operate. If they are ordered to seek out an enemy battery that may be lodged at the end of a wood or in some concealed position the pilot maneuvers about under the instructions of the observer until the battery is spotted, whereupon its position is signaled back by means of a wireless set to the battery commander.

After notifying the battery to open fire the observer hangs over the position at a height of, say, 6,000 feet, to avoid the trajectory of the shells passing beneath his machine, and as the shells burst near the position under fire the observer notifies his battery how short or how far ahead or how much to either side the shells are falling. The observer then orders the pilot to proceed over the next position, and the operation is repeated. When the work is completed the airmen are ordered to return by means of signals in the form of canvas strips placed on the ground.

All the while the observer is directing artillery fire his machine is being subjected to intense bombardment by anti-aircraft guns, which are firing shrapnel shells by the hundreds. Flying fragments of shrapnel are all about the airmen—beneath them, all around them and above them. For three hours at times the airmen must endure this intense bombardment, and there is no telling at what moment the tail of the machine or some other vital part may be blown away or when the machine may become wrapped in flames. The work is most dangerous and nerve racking, and most of the pilots stutter after going through this ordeal. Some have been known to be unable to screw a nut or a bolt, due to nervous ailment.

Japan Flourishes.

Activities growing out of the war have led to the development of the heretofore neglected stretch of territory between Tokio and her seaport, Yokohama. It began with the rise of the Asano Shipbuilding Company, the yards of which have grown like magic, gathering around them hundreds of new dwellings for employes and tradesmen. Prices of land have mounted to high figures. Kawasaki has taken on new aspects and the sky is darkened by the smoke that pours from its lofty factory chimneys. Pure drinking water is a serious want which will be remedied by new works and the laying of mains for supplying the Kamata, Haneda, and Kawasaki districts. Another project is the immediate construction of a canal between Tokio and Yokohama at a cost of $2,500,000. The foreshore will be reclaimed to the extent of 7,200,000 square feet. When the canal already financed is completed the distance between the two cities will be covered by barges and canal boats in daylight trips, whereas the present sea route of twenty-four nautical miles often takes a lighter four to seven days. These improvements, with better railway facilities, will ultimately lead to what will practically be a continuous town from one city to the other. —East and West News.

Nests on the Water.

It is almost unthinkable that a bird should build a nest on the water. Yet that is exactly what the grebes always do. With reeds, grass and plant stems the grebe makes a regular floating island, somewhat hollowed out on top, usually near the open water of a marshy or reedy lake. We have several kinds of grebes, but their nests are much alike, sometimes moored to the reeds, but usually floating freely on the water.

FOE'S PEACE TERMS ARE NOT ACCEPTABLE

The United States Press Expresses Disapproval

GERMAN PEACE OFFER NOT FAVOURED BY THE ALLIES

General Feeling Shown in United States is That Terms Should Not Be Considered---"Proposition Is One Made By Fools For the Consumption of Children" Says Providence Journal"---Some London Papers Regard the Proposal as a Trap

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, December 28.—Comment of United States newspapers on the Teuton-Russian peace proposals as received from all parts of the United States indicate that the general feeling of the United States is that they should not be considered by the Allies. The Providence Journal says the proposition is one made by fools for the consumption of children.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 28.—Some London newspapers including strong journals who have urged uncompromising war to victory by the Allies are inclined editorially to-day to look upon the Teuton-Russian peace proposals as a sincere effort on the part of the Central Powers to end the war. Others are definitely condemning the proposals as a trap in which to catch the Allies. The Daily Mail says the Allies are not thinking of peace but only of victory, and victory is what they mean to have.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 28.—A statement purporting to give in broad outline the view taken in high British political circles of the German peace terms is printed by the Daily Express. It says that two things are known here. First that Germany does not want a separate peace with Russia but general peace, and second that Germany fears the Bolsheviki influence, being afraid of its effect on the German working classes. "A stiff upper lip is the attitude in this country at present," the statement declares. "The peace terms are not sufficient to lead us to lay down our arms. We must be watchful. It is up to Germany to show that she is sincere."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, December 28.—German terms for a general peace and the suggestion that the Entente join the Russo-German peace conference, have brought no immediate response. British, French and American leaders are silent, probably awaiting a direct message from the peace-makers at Brest-Litovsk.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 28.—Premier Lloyd George in a letter which he has sent to the Labour Conference said that a statement on war aims could only be made in agreement with Great Britain's Allies. The question of issuing a fresh joint declaration, he added, was being constantly kept in view by the Entente-Allied governments.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 28.—"Achievement of purposes for which the Allies are fighting is essential to the future freedom and peace of mankind," said Premier Lloyd George, in a letter which he sent to-day to the Labour Congress. The Premier's statement is regarded as the British reply to the German peace offer.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), December 28.—Northeast of Bezonvaux our guns caught the Germans preparing a big troop movement towards our lines and dispersed it with heavy losses. In the Argonne German surprise attacks were also smashed. On the Belgian front artillery fighting is intense.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Thursday—Delegates of the Central Powers to the peace conference at Brest-Litovsk have agreed to a ten-day recess in peace negotiations which will be resumed January 4 at a place not yet determined.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 28.—Thirty Norwegian sailors lost their lives when German submarines sunk five Norwegian ships, and there is much indignation in Norway.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 28.—There is nothing of special interest to report says to-day's communication from the War Office.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, December 28.—The Russian peace negotiations have accepted Count Czerin's German terms as the basis for general peace discussions and will renew the conferences at Brest-Litovsk Wednesday next, according to word from that city received here via Berlin to-day.

Count Czerin asked for an immediate negotiation of the matters affecting Russia alone.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, December 28.—France will refuse to negotiate any Germancontrived peace such as the terms announced by Count Czerin provide, Deputy Piction declared to-day in the Chamber of Deputies. His declaration was received with great applause.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, December 28.—Artillery fighting continued during the night on the Verdun front near Caurieres Wood, where the Germans made an unsuccessful attack on Wednesday, the War Office reports. There also was heavy shelling in Lorraine.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

VIENNA, Dec. 28.—Italian troops attacking west of Monte Asoleone and east of Solarolo were repulsed, it was stated by the War Office to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, December 28.—German forces beyond Verdun did not again attempt to-day their assaults against the French lins, but contented themselves with shelling Caurieres Wood to-day's official statement reported.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, December 28.—A resolution by Havelock Wilson to reject the labour war aims memorandum supporting President Wilson's outline, was lost by a vote of 343 to 12.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TOKIO, December 28.—Two hours of street fighting preceded the surrender of the Bolshevikl forces in Harbin to Chinese troops, according to a Foreign Office despatch to-day.

GERMANY HAS LOST THIRTY-FIVE ZEPPS SINCE 1914

Raids Over France, England and Belgium Have Cost the Enemy Seventeen of Her Finest Dirigibles

THIRTEEN ON SERVICE

Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 28.— Germany's Zeppelin programme, announced with boastful pride in 1914, stands a dreary failure to-day. Accurate figures available to the United States press show that of 53 Zeppelins put into commission since 1914, 35 have been totally destroyed, two have been badly damaged and put permanently out of commission, 2 possibly destroyed, now missing, 1 badly damaged, temporarily out of commission in December, 13 remaining in service, 8 of which are detailed to the North Sea, 2 to the Baltic and 3 as experimental or schoolships.

Raids over France, England and Belgium have cost the Germans seventeen Zeppelins, eight having been accounted for in England, five in France and four in Belgium. Accidents by fire, wind and lightning have destroyed at least eight in Germany.

Zeppelin numbers, according to accurate calculation, started with "L-1" and ended with "L-57." Numbers between 25 and 30 have not been employed, leaving 53 to be accounted for. "L-1" and "L-2" were destroyed before the war. The first fell in the North Sea and the second was accidentally burned at Fuhlsbuttel. In addition to her Zeppelins Germany has had in commission since the beginning of the war at least 13 airships of the "Schutte Lanz," "Gross and Parseval" types. Of these possibly seven remain in service, two, however, [illegible] as non-combatant instruction ships.

LIBERALS IN ONTARIO TO CHOSSE LEADER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—Chas. M. Bowman, M.P.P., chief Opposition whip, has called a meeting of all the Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature to be held at the rooms of the Reform Association of Ontario in this city on Thursday, January 3 for the purpose of discussing the appointment of a new Liberal leader in the Legislature to succeed Hon. N. W. Rowell, who resigned to join the Union government. It is improbable a permanent leader will be appointed at present, but a temporary leader for the approaching session of the Legislature will be selected.

TROOPS FOR THIS CITY

Probable That One Company of the Eastern Ontario Battalion Will Be Quartered at the Local Armouries This Winter

ABOUT 250 IN ALL

The Examiner learned on good authority to-day, although it has not yet been officially announced, that one company of the Eastern Ontario Battalion, comprising men called for service under the Military Service Act will be quartered in the local Armouries and receive their preliminary training in this city before going overseas.

It is not yet known whether the men who will be stationed here will be local draftees or men from other parts of No. 3 Military District. Local men who have been called up have been ordered to report to Kingston, and the authorities do not seem to know whether they will be sent back here to train or if men from other sections will occupy the local Armouries.

There is splendid accommodation for the men here. The bunks, cook stoves, heaters, lavatories and other facilities installed for, and used by, the 93rd Battalion, are still available, and the Armouries are ready at short notice to accommodate the men to be trained here.

HALF BILLION NEEDED FOR WAR IN NEXT YEAR

Canadian Press Despatch:

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 28.—In the next fiscal year half a billion must be raised by Canada for war purposes, in addition to the 150 millions necessary to carry on the ordinary business of the country, Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, announced here last night.

MANN'S PORTABLE SAW MILL

Mr. E. H. Mann is preparing to start his portable sawmill in operation for the winter on the corner of Aylmer and Sherbrooke Streets. This handy sawing outfit has become quite an industry during the winter months, and proved a valuable convenience to farmers and others drawing in their logs to be cut into lumber, shingles, and dimension stuff.

Quite a gang of men is kept busy sawing, piling, and operating round the mill, which keeps up a busy hum in this section.

Another important advantage the city derives from the operations of his mill is the slab cuttings, which have proved quite an addition to the fuel problem. Mr. Mann has also a gang of men engaged cutting logs and firewood in the country that will help to keep his mill running full time.

FRIEDRICH WESTMEYER DIES

German Anti-War Socialist Was Sent to the Front as Punishment.

Reports just recived in Socialist circles here from Germany, via Switzerland, tell of the death in the war zone of Friedrich Westmeyer, one of the most active leaders of the anti-Government faction of the German Socialists. Westmeyer, who was an editor, labour organizer, and member of the Wurtemberg Diet, was involved in the trial last summer of a number of leading Socialists for having caused the distribution of the famous anti-Government, revolutionary manifesto issued by the Independent Socialists, calling for an anti-war revolt on May Day, but was acquitted. He was called to the colours many months before his death.

The May Day manifesto was mentioned in a Berne cablegram printed on May 4 and on June 24 the complete text was printed. It was an extremely bitter denunciation of the German Government and of the so-called patriotic labour and Socialist leaders who were supporting the Kaiser's war plans.

Vote For The De Laval By-law At The Elections On New Years

Provides to Give the Company Strip of De Laval Street Which is of So Little Value That It Has Not Been Opened—Both Henry Hope and the De Laval Companies Endorse It.

$7,500 WAREHOUSE WILL BE ERECTED

The De Laval by-law, which the City Council has so strongly recommended to the ratepayers for their approval at the polls on New Year's Day is probably not generally understood by many of the citizens. It provides that a strip of De Laval street, forty-two feet wide, extending from Park street westerly to the Grand Trunk Railway shall be given to the De Laval company to enable them to erect a warehouse adjoining their north shop, in a location that is practically imperative owing to the position of the show, to which the warehouse will be a large annex.

De Laval street is shown only on the newer maps of the city. It is immediately north of and adjoining the De Laval property, and extends from Park street west to the Monaghan Road. East of the G.T.R. it lies between the De Laval and Henry Hope Co. properties. The street has never been opened for traffic for the simple reason that it has not been needed and probably never will be.

The by-law proposed to reduce the width of the street from 42 feet to 18 feet, which will be sufficient for all the prospective requirements of that factory block. On the city's map the street is 60 feet wide, but the city and factory officials are satisfied that the 18 feet width will be sufficient for sewer and water mains and any other utilities that may require a right-of-way.

The fact that both the De Laval and Henry Hope companies who own he properties on either side of this street, have expressed their approval of the by-law should evoke the confidence of the ratepayers and ensure an unanimous vote in its favour. The Council is anxious that this strip of property be turned over to the De Laval Company, who intend to erect on part of it a $7,500 building. It has already been announced that the company will require every foot of their property for extensions to their plant, and the Council wishes to give whatever assistance it can to facilitate enlargements. And this by-law involves a narrow strip of a street that is of so little public value that it has not been opened for traffic.

Every ratepayer should vote for the De Laval by-law on Tuesday next.

HAS HAD ENOUGH OF THE CONFEDERATION

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, P.Q., December 28.—Le Soleil of Quebec says: "We have practiced conciliation since confederation. We have practiced it alone, however, to our detriment. To be duped has become a trade with us, for in our sincerity we have become the play-thing of intransigeant fakers. The hour is past when we can be made dupes of any longer. And now. My Lords, we are at your disposition. We will not change a hair to give you pleasure, for this is the meaning of the vote of Monday last. If we are in the way, and if our opinions are contrary to your aspirations, it is for you to say so. We have had enough of the Canadian confederation, which is nothing but an imperial federation. If you wish the confederation to last you will have to change your manners as we are no longer disposed to endure your impertinence, your political conspiracies, and much less your persecutions. Now that you know our sentiment it is for you to decide."

LABOUR DEMANDS CLEAR STATEMENT OF OUR WAR AIMS

Britain Should Make It Clear to the World, Even More Emphatically Than Ever That She is Not Fighting a War of Conquest

HENDERSON'S STATEMENT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Dec. 28.—An urgent plea that Britain make clear to the world, even more emphatically than heretofore, that she is not fighting a war of conquest, was the message delivered to Britain's Trades and Labour Congress to-day by the Labourite leader, Arthur Henderson. The session was specifically called to discuss war aims.

"The war," Henderson declared, "becomes a struggle of old and new system of government. Secret diplomatics and compulsory military service should be rendered unnecessary.

"The Allies must renounce their intention of creating an impenetrable barrier against the German people. Germany's autocracy must give place to democracy. Militarism must be universally discredited."

Declaring his complete support of President Wilson's war aims for America, Henderson continued: "The American people are fighting for a league of nations more than anything else. And yet this moment has been selected by Sir Edward Carson to treat that proposal with scorn and contempt." Henderson outlined Carson's recent speech at Portsmouth, in which he declared that "not speaking lightly, we know Austria and Turkey did not want to continue."

"Aren't we justified," Henderson continued, "in assuming that Austria and Turkey are ready for settlement, provided the government is prepared to deal with them as Germany proposed dealing with Russia. Why wasn't a similar course pursued, especially with regard to Turkey, by us?

Did we prefer to take Jerusalem forcibly?

Is it surprising that neutrals, Russia, even America, can suspect us of annexationist designs?

"Labour must demand a clarification of Britain's position, if the workers are called for further sacrifices. This does not mean the white feather.

"Labour does not desire that Germany be admitted to a league of nations while intoxicated by her military triumphs, but the Allies should make it clear that the struggle will continue only for principles and ideals, and not for conquest.

"Labour asks an opportunity to ascertain how Germany is prepared to accept the Labourite peace proposals."

WERE HONESTLY OPPOSED TO THE CONSCRIPTION ACT

W. D. Euler, Successful Candidate in North Waterloo, Says Many of His Constituents Had Fled From Germany to Escape Militarism

THE BORDEN MEETING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—W. D. Euler, the victorious Laurierite candidate in North Waterloo, in a one-column letter published in the Toronto Star to-day, discusses the attitude of his German-born consituents, and explains the disturbances in Kitchener during the election campaign.

The people of North Waterloo were honestly opposed to conscription," frankly declares Mr. Euler. "Many of them had fled from Germany to escape militarism and looked with horror upon the prospect of compulsory service in Canada. They were intensely indignant at the provisions of the Franch Act, which struck them with peculiar force. I shared their views, and became a candidate, advocating openly and fairly the policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on conscription and condemning most strongly the Franchise Act. There was on our part no appeal to passion, race or creed. We had no campaign funds as our opponents had, and no newspapers. And the people, half muzzled as they were by the Franchise Act, pronounced against Mr. Weichel by a vote of nearly two to one.

THE DISTURBANCES.

"Incidentally the disturbances took place at the Borden meeting. It was regrettable and was seized upon with suspicion and significant eagerness as a pretext for the making of political capital throughout Canada as well as locally, although Kitchener, as is well known, was not by any means the only place where disturbances occurred. In itself it was an unfortunate campaign incident, not signifying disloyalty in the slightest degree, but emphasizing by an ill-chosen method the dissatisfaction the people had with the legislation of last session. But from that time on the campaign of patriotism was gradually abandoned locally until finally but one appeal remained, "Don't vote your job away."

Our workmen were told that a boycott would close our factories unless Mr. Weichel were elected. The people were not misled. They kept the real issue in mind and voted according to their convictions."

NOT FACED WITH RUIN.

Mr. Euler minimizes the fear that Kitchener industries are faced with ruin because of the defeat of Mr. Weichel, the Unionist candidate. "They are prosperous and will continue to be so long after many a disappointed politician is gone and forgotten," he adds. "Let Mr. Weichel accept the verdict without attemping to pose as a martyr looking for public sympathy. "Let me say to those who still have doubts as to the loyalty of our people: "Come to Kitchener and see." You will find here a city so progressive industrially as to have aroused the envy of our Brantford, Guelph and Stratford neighbours, whose efforts to entice away our manufacturers will be just as fruitless as they are unworthy, unneighbourly and unBritish. You will also find here an industrious, honest and loyal people typical of all that is truly Canadian."

HELP THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

To those who would turn their own pleasure into an instrument of pleasure and profit for others, is commended the entertainment at the Empress Hotel this evening in the interests of the work of the Peterborough Health Association. Its business is benefaction. In the howling fierceness of the winter of to-day is a reminder of those homes where the burden and pain of disease and weakness, is aggravated by the severity of the weather. Think of those homes badly built, where the piercing winds penetrate every cranny and where perhaps lack of fuel adds to the miseries of the afflicted. To such homes the ministrations of the Health Association take help and comfort that will not come from any other source.

The Christmas spirit should not fail with the midnight of December 25th.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

The war has done this much good, that it has replaced academic dreams of doing things and theories of action by hard-head practical considerations. Canada is, by virtue of its immense expanse and varied climatic conditions, especially fitted for agriculture. We have talked of our production potentialities as comforting facts; but it is not till the spur of war necessity has wakened us that we see the necessity of making practical use of our resources of production.

The war that has made us give attention to the raising of more men for war purposes has also forced upon us the necessity of growing more food as an essential war measure; and we trust we shall see the Union government "tackle" the problem in honest earnest.

But Canada is not entirely bucolic. We are so great a country in extent that industrial production becomes the natural handmaid of our agricultural activities and the associated commercial interests.

To succeed in industrial progress and achievement, we must have a well prepared population specially equipped as being factors in industrial success. World competition is so keen; equipment of artisans is so conspicuous in competing countries; that it is necessary to Canada's industrial success that greater, and still greater attention be paid to technical education; that an effort be made to provide that the population of Peterborough be specially trained in childhood and youthhood in the practical subjects and branches, and manual skill, that will equip them for taking their part in the most effective way in the industrial work of which Peterborough has become so important a theatre.

Technical training in our schools, and more than that, a special technical school, is one of the most important immediate educational needs of Peterborough, if the city is to become a greater manufacturing centre. The Board of Education last year, especially the chairman, Mr. Eastwood, gave a good deal of intelligent attention to the subject, and no little public interest was excited.

It is imperative, therefore, that the matter be not allowed to lapse, and that the new Board give the subject the attention it demands. It is therefore important that the ratepayers in selecting the five candidates to be elected should not omit to especially support one of the candidates who, from his relations to great industrial activities; by his large experience in a large way, and by virtue of the personal and informed interest he must necessarily take in the subject, would be of inestimable value to the Board of Education in considering the subject of technical education, which will demand much attention next year.

It is an important matter, and the more it is turned over the greater its merits appear, and the greater the popular appreciation. It is natural that the Trades and Labour Council are in favour of it, as must be all thoughtful and practical minded citizens.

The financial condition of the city, the various other demands upon our resources, make it impossible to consider the construction of a Technical School building next year. But the Board of Education can consider the educative and preliminary work, and lay the foundations for the increased facilities for technical education, that Peterborough as a prominent and ambitious industrial centre requires, and must have at the earliest possible time.

If the hand is the servant of the brain, the better trained mind needs the better skilled hand to secure the highest coordination.

MR. HALL VINDICATED.

During the election contest political extremists, small wits of the press, and even Sir Robert Borden himself, on the occasion of his visit to Peterborough, made merry over Mr. Hall's insistence upon the great, and, if not supreme, at least parallel importance, of increased production of food. But events proved that Mr. Hall was right, for his position and contention, so energetically scouted by the friends of his political opponents, came to be adopted and endorsed by them as implied in the necessity that was felt for even straining the Military Service Act to provide that the forces of production should not be withdrawn from the farms.

Mr. Hall's anxiety for the promotion of the public and official interest in the question was not merely for political effect, but his bona fides is shown by his adhering to his advocacy after the elections are over, and only patriotism must be admitted by his bitterest political opponents as the motive of action. Mr. Hall has since the election written to The Globe in a strain similar to that taken in an article published in The Examiner on Wednesday; and his vindication comes in The Globe's adoption of the gist of his contentions as expressed in the following article from The Globe of December 27th, under the heading of "Farming as a War Industry":

The people of Canada begin to understand how great is the need for foodstuffs in Europe, and how important might be the part of the Dominion in supplying that need if production were undertaken as an emergency war measure. Mr. R. R. Hall of Peterborough, in a letter to The Globe, urges that not a moment is to be lost in organizing to produce a great crop of oats in the Northwest during the coming season. The coarse grains which could be produced there from land not now under cultivation, would permit the doubling of our live stock, particularly hogs, and would provide millions of tons of food for the people and the live stock of Great Britain.

Cheap oatmeal, Mr. Hall says, will also enable Canada to export more flour. The plan of campaign he outlines includes the placing of orders at once by the government for tractors, plows, disc plows, and, in their turn, for implements and machinery for reaping and threshing, as well as for additional storehouses for the crops; the organization of the labor resources of the Dominion, and the securing of additional help by the utilization of prisoners of war and the cooperation of the people of the United States in the harvesting of the crop.

There is nothing fantastic or impractical about this programme. Oats can be sown in the West for some time after the wheat is put in, and were the available farm tractors of the Dominion and the Northwestern States mobilized in the early spring on the unbroken lands within reasonable distance of the lines that cross the prairies, millions of acres that will otherwise produce nothing but weeds and grass could be used to grow oats and flax. It is a job for a big man—or perhaps a group of big men. How would the leaders of the farmers' cooperstive movement in the Prairie Provinces like to tackle it, with Mr. Crerar as their Ottawa director?

The subject of increased food production is justifiably given the greater attention; for it comes to this, that it is the most vitally important element in Canada's contribution to the most earnest and most effective share in winning this great war.

It not only demands popular attention, but it deserves the attention of the government, the instrument of expressing and executing the popular ambition and accomplishment.

The Union government strongly endorsed, strongly supported, with the sole idea of promoting the national interest is called upon to meet—and must meet—the situation.

The action of the United States in taking possession of the railways of the country, indicates that Uncle Sam has a through ticket for this war excursion.

TRIBUTE TO SIR WILFRID FROM A UNIONIST PAPER

The overwhelming vote for Union Government and the military service act should not be taken as an indication that the plain people of Canada have lost regard for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The splendid tribute paid to the veteran statesman throughout the Canadian West last week is the answer to those who do not appreciate with what depth of personal affection Sir Wilfrid is regarded by the great mass of the Canadian people.

The people differed with Sir Wilfrid with regard to policy. Probably thousands of voters in this city of Ottawa last Monday passed over Sir Wilfrid Laurier's name with profound regret. No one who knows anything of Sir Wilfrid Laurier personally, even while they differed with him on the political issue, could forget Sir Wilfrid's sterling character as a citizen, as a Canadian, and as a lifelong believer in British traditions and ideals of liberty.

It is not the British spirit of fair-play to snarl at an opponent after having settled the issue with him. But rather to shake hands manfully, and with due appreciation of the straight fight put up by the other side. This is a time in Canada when the spirit of mutual forbearance is greatly needed, and when old animosity should be put aside, especially by well-wishers of the Union Government, and of Canada's cause in the war. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is still the one leading Canadian who can accomplish a great work of reconciliation in Canada. He, first, above all the national leaders, can bring the French-speaking citizens of Canada to accept the military service act, now that he is satisfied the rest of the country is in favour of it.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's influence in Quebec is worth as much to the Allies as Premier Botha's great service to the cause in South Africa. Students of British politics know something of the service rendered to Great Britain at the beginning of the war by Premier Botha. He saved a key position in the league of British nations from becoming an enemy stronghold. It is not so well known that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, ten years before, played perhaps the most successful part in making South Africa one of the free, autonomous nations in the British league.

There are Liberals in Great Britain who could tell of negotiations and cabinet councils after the Boer war, with regard to the restoring of self-government to the South African states. When the story of that wise act of statesmanship on the part of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's government is told, when Liberal Imperialists were inclined to side with the Conservative opposition, with regard to autonomy in South Africa, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's influence with the British Government, a cablegram containing words of wisdom from Canada, won the day for self-government for the South African union.

* * *

Who can estimate the value of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's timely intervention to build up South Africa on right lines in the British league of nations? South African statesmen know something of it, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's name is held in high esteem in South Africa to-day. It is also honoured in the United Kingdom, where every British public schoolboy has heard of the veteran Canadian statesman as one of the champions of British traditions in the new world overseas.

There is still a pre-eminent place for Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the building up of Canada as a nation. There is one crowning act whereby Sir Wlifrid can cement the people of Canada in the remaining years of this war of national defence. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's influence, and Sir Wilfrid's alone, can lead the French-speaking citizens of Canada to accept the heavy burdens of war as they are being borne by old France, and by every nation where men are giving their lives for the principles of liberty and justice. It is perhaps the last call to be made upon Sir Wilfrid, in the Canadian veteran's long life of public service. It should be made, because Canada's cause is dear to Sir Wilfrid. It should be the supreme service of a patriot and nation-builder, in the closing days of Sir Wilfrid's life mission.—Ottawa Citizen.

Russia's Railways In Fair Condition

LINES WELL ABLE TO SUPPLY ARMY AND PEOPLE WITH FOOD—TRANS-SIBERIAN DOUBLE TRACKED.

The physical condition of the railroads of Russia is much better than is generally supposed in this country, according to Henry Miller, former operative Vice-President of the Wabash Railroad, who has just returned to this country, from his duties in Russia as a member of the American Railroad Commission, headed by John F. Stevens. Mr. Miller said that with the addition of equipment for the Russian roads being built in this country, they would be in very fair physical shape. The great problem in Russia, he said, was that of using in an efficient manner, the transportation facilities the country had.

Mr. Miller left Russia before the accession of the Bolsheviki and the consequent further dem lization of the industrial life of Russia, and before the Cossacks had seized the coal fields, and probably further hampered the operation of the roads, but what he has to report as to the physical condition of the roads is independent of their actual efficiency of operation at this time. While in Washington the other day making a report to government officials Mr. Miller gave a description of railroad conditions in Russia as he found them:

"We found the great railroad problem in Russia to be one of operation," he said. "The physical properties are all right. As one of the first steps we arranged to divide the railroads into divisions of approximately 300 miles, each in charge of a superintendent and a staff of thirteen assistants, including trainmasters, train dispatchers, master mechanics, travelling engineers, and so forth, in order to provide the close supervision necessary to efficiency. We found that their practice was to operate their engines and crews on short turn-round trips.

"The men were assigned to their engines, which practice resulted in a very small mileage for each locomotive, because when the men needed rest or were laid off on account of sickness or other causes, the engine was also taken out of service. By a plan of pooling the men and the engines the locomotive mileage was immediately doubled and the capacity for handling traffic was largely increased, so that it became possible with the existing power and facilities to clear up most of the congestion by the end of August. The railways are now clear and effective operations have been established over the whole system.

"Russia has approximately 50,000 miles of railroad, of which about 60 per cent. is owned by the government, and about 40 per cent privately owned. The railroads have about 20,000 locomotives, whose average age is 24 years, most of them being compounds. About 10 per cent. are wood burning, 5 per cent. oil-burning, and the rest coal-burning. They have an average tractive force of 18,000 pounds. We found about 15 per cent. of the locomotives in bad order. They have 580,000 freight cars, of an average capacity of about sixteen tons, of which we found about 8 per cent. in bad order. The freight cars, both on the government and private-owned lines, are pooled and handled by a central car-distributing office in Petrograd. The practice is to apportion a certain number of cars monthly, to each of the lines, based upon their traffic requirements as determined by previous experience.

"About 20 per cent. of their freight cars have brakes, and only the 13,000 American built cars are equipped with air brakes. Braking is done by hand, the practice being to use a van brake for every fifth car in a train, and to station a brakeman at each brake."

In discussing the economic situation in Russia as considered with the railroad situation, Mr. Miller said:

"Russia is blessed with abundant crops and ample live stock and other foods, and has resources beyond conception. The fear that the railways will fail to keep the army and civil population supplied is unfounded, and has been dispelled by the American Railway Commission, which after full investigation, during which the tracks, locomotives, cars and other facilities of the main line were examined, became convinced that by supplementing and reinforcing the operating department, together with the additional locomotives, cars and spare parts now arriving from America, the transportation system of Russia would fulfill all reasonable requirements. The condition of the railways has been grossly exaggerated. Like our own, they are at present overtaxed with unusual traffic, but in many respects they are quite all right, and their physical property and terminals are excellent.

"For instance, Moscow, the 'Hub' of the nation, has a well constructed belt line that has no superior anywhere, encircling the city connecting the nine railways radiating from there like spokes in a wheel, with commodious interchange yards at all intersections and no congestion of traffic of any consequence to interfere with the free movements of trains.

"The Trans-Siberian line, including a detour line just constructed on the Amur River, is practically all double tracked from Vladivostok to Omsk, a distance of about 4,000 miles. At Omsk the line divides in the form of a Y, with branches extending to Petrograd and Moscow, and the traffic is correspondingly divided, so the Trans-Siberian line is practically equivalent to a complete double track line.

"The Russian railroads are operated after the German system, which differs from the American system in that train movements are not governed by time tables or train schedules, but trains are classified and their rights on the road are governed by the conductors and engineemen. Time-tables are only for the information of the public. There are no train rules or other operating rules corresponding to the American code of train rules and no train orders are issued, except for slow orders. Trains are operated by the staff system on single track, and by telegraph manual block system on double track. The absolute block system is used in spacing the trains.

"There is almost an entire absence of what in America is termed the operating department, and it is this void that the American Commission has attempted to fill in order to increase the efficiency of the railways. It is for this purpose that the corps of 350 experienced railroad men from the United States has been sent to Russia to carry out the recommendations made by the Commission and to act as instructors to the Russian railway men in American railway operating methods. It is hoped that by this means it will be possible to build up an efficient organization among the Russian railway men themselves."

RAILWAYS AND COAL FAMINE.

Inability to Transport Rapidly Forces Miners to Stop Work.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Commissioner Colver, of the Federal Trade Commission, at to-day's hearing on the coal situation, before the Senate investigating committee, said when the President fixed coal prices, production was at its lowest and prices the highest. Eighty per cent. of this year's estimated production had been contracted for at high prices, but the other 20 per cent. caused much of the trouble.

Failure of railroads to furnish cars at the mines resulted in the miners in bituminous fields being idle on an average of two to three days a week, Colver said, but mines in which railroads are interested were better served.

To picture transportation difficulties Colver gave the result of a newspaper investigation in Ohio, showing 23 days consumed in taking a car of coal 126 miles and returning it to the mine. It was handled entirely by one railroad.

BATTLE STORIES FROM THE WEST FRONT

Team Work--By "Z"

Remembering, as I did, that the military correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung claimed that the German troops have greater "mass discipline" than the British troops, and that this "mass discipline" is capable of overcoming the great individual bravery of the British soldier, I found it specially interesting to hear from a wounded British soldier in hospital enthusiastic praise for the staff work and the combination displayed in the recent advance toward Cambrai.

"It was like a well-played match at football, with our lads on the winning side," said this wounded soldier, who belonged to the Midlands. "You've seen a good run forward with the ball, passing from man to man on the front line? A good speedy centre-forward, quick lads on the wings, an' a dandy half-back line to back them up—that's the jim, an' it's how we bursted the Hindenburg line. Each lad played up to the other, the platoons and companies did the like, an'. Ah'm sure the battalions must 'a' played up or we wouldn't 'a' got as far as we did.

"Now, Ah'll tell ye where it comes in, this team work. My company got held up by a nest o' machine guns, an' it was too wide for us to get round in the usual way, so our officer sent a message to the company on the left—belongin' to another regiment—askin' them to bear a hand. They were in advance of us, but they swung round an' took the pill-boxes in the rear. We lay down an' helped a bit with rifle grenades, while the other company did the same on the left. We joined up with them, an' after about five minutes' fightin' the Germans caved in—them that weren't bombed.

Where the Tank Was.

"Our tank could ha' done the trick for us if we'd waited a bit. Them things the machine gun bullets patter off like rain; they've terrible thick skins. But our tank was doin' another bit of team work. It was sittin' on a bit of trench for D Company, killin' Germans. A lad in D told me the trench was full of 'em when they got up, an' what wasn't killed did the 'Kamerad' business pretty quick.

"The Germans are all right when they're fightin' underground or when they're comin' up in a lump to attack. They take a lot o' gruellin' as long as they can herd together—an' Ah've seen a few counter-attacks in the two years, off an' on, Ah've been in France. But the lads want nothing better than them mass attacks; the Germans are askin' for it then—an' hey get it. Then don't put the wind up with the lads.

'Ah did laugh in the attack one time. We had a little man join the company. He was the littlest man you ever saw, and his rifle and bayonet looked too big for him. Ah don't think there was a cleaner rifle and bayonet in the battalion than little Jim's. An' a little terror, too. He'd sauce anybody twice his size as soon as look at him, but we all liked him because he was a born comic—give an imitation of anybody on the Halls, he could. The officers liked him, too; he was good for the lads, you see—kept them laughin'. Well, little Jim, before the attack, he kept on tellin' us what he was goin' to do to the Germans. It was his first attack since he came out with a draft—no windup about him. He used to say what he would do to 'em with his bayonet.

A Bantam's Exploit.

"He was first over the top when the time came; no stoppin' him. The tanks did a lot of good work for us, an' we had a fairly soft time, except for that nest o' machine guns Ah told you about. But in the German second line we got a chance o' close fightin'. Ah never saw a wider trench than that second line. You could 'a' put a cart through it except for the traverses, but it gave us room to fight. Little Jim jumped down into the trench beside me an' a German fired at him. Jim dropped on his knee an' pointed up, got the German clean in the chest, he did. Then he went mad like. Ah was busy myself, Ah saw him get three in the same way—droppin' on his knee and pointin' up. They tell me he got two in the next bay of the trench. An' such a little lad, oo.

"We broke clean through the Hindenburg line that day into open country, and we took the Germans by surprise. Past the third line we captured a German dug-out all done up with electric light. We found some coffee there all hot, and we were going to drink it when the sergeant stopped us; said it might be poisoned. Ah don't think it could 'a' been, because the table was all laid out ready for breakfast; but you never know with the Germans. Ah found a bundle of hand-bills with figures and diagrams on them in German. The officer knew German, and he said they were for showing the German soldiers how badly off Germany would be if it didn't win the war. If it's as bad as that with the Germans that they've to put hand-bills among their troops, well, they're in a bad way.

The German Resistance.

"The more Ah see of the German, the more uneven his fightin' gets. In some places they fought well this time, but in others it was a complete walk-over for us. The funny thing about the prisoners was that they were dazed like, all muzzy, though we didn't 'ave much artillery fire to start off with. It must 'a' been the quickness of the attack that done it.

"Ah see by the papers that they are attackin' on the ground we took. Let 'em, that's what Ah say. An' Ah see that they're back at the old game, shovin' in masses o' troops. Let 'em. There you are! Let 'em. Ah know that the Midland chaps don't ask anything better than a good target like that. Little Jim'll be pleased he's such a holy terror for killin'. Of course, the German attack seems to 'a' come pretty quick, an' Ah'm not sure that the line'll be consolidated proper. We maybe pushed back a bit, but they'll never move the lads out o' a good bit o' line like the Hindenburg line. It's a masterpiece. There you are—a masterpiece, that's what it is; an' you'd 'a' thought to see it that a parcel o' boy scouts could 'a' held it.

"Ah'm none afraid the lads won't stick it, though they maybe will 'ave to come back a bit—they're in that open country an' a German attack 'as a tidy weight in it; it's that solid. Ah've seen a few German counter-attacks, an' Ah've seen them smash up with our fire—they're such a good target. It only comes to this that the Devil will be speaking a lot more German for a bit.

'One side can't score all the goals in a match. If we could score all the goals, the match between us and the Germans would be finished. But the Germans 'ave a good team—or pretty middlin'—there's bound to be a come-back now an' then. What Ah say is this, though, we've got a better team; man to man, than them; we've a better way o' playin', better combination, better captainin', and someone with a head behind us to direct the affair. Ah've a quiet head about the whole thing—but then Ah've been at the game for two years."

DRAFT THE FIDDLER AND SPOIL THE BALL

Young Farmer Tried to Clinch Argument For Exemption

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—Ten farmers who had been drafted were permitted to go back to their farms by Judge MacTavish at the Central Appeal Board sittings in the Court House. B. W. MacDonald, who had been examined on two different occasions by medical boards, and both times was placed in category A. The Appeal Board threw out the medical history sheets and placed the applicant in class "E."

The sittings were not without humor. One strapping young farmer from Bell's Corners, in pressing his claim for exemption, confided with His Honour that as a "side line" he played a violin at dances. He wanted to impress upon the Judge that it was most urgent that he should be in attendance at the Christmas ball at Bell's Corners. "That is truly in the national interest," was His Honour's smiling comment.

GREEKS ARE URGED TO JOIN U.S. ARMY

Washington, Dec. 28. — Greece wants her citizens in the United States to enlist in the American army. Not only will she suspend punishments which ordinarily follow enlistments of Greeks with a foreign power, but she will reward them for supporting the American arms. This is the substance of a note from the Greek government delivered here to the State Department.

Snow Scrapers Are Conscripted Now In Berlin

The approach of winter has been announced to the people of Berlin in a drastic order by the military authorities, which runs as follows:

"Every householder is required to remove snow and ice from the front of his property up to the middle of the road; this has to be done before the cleaning of the pavements begins.

"All tenants between the ages of 14 years and 60 years are required, in so far as they are physically capable, to support the householder or his deputy in this work.

"All householders must immediately prepare a list of all their tenants who come within the terms of this order, and must determine by inquiry which of these tenants are ready to help voluntarily. If, after a fall of snow, the help of the volunteers is not sufficient, the householder will summon the other tenants who are in the house, and as far as possible will distribute the work equally amongst them. It is permissible for the tenants to supply substitutes.

"Any tenant, liable within terms of this order, who without sufficient reason refuses his help, is liable to be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than £75."

It appears that the police will deal summarily with the idle and refactory, without bringing them to trial. The Berlin 'Lokalanzeiger' expects the order to work badly. The journal has visions of surly porters commandeering the labour of tenants whom they do not like, and of endless troubles with domestic servants who are already rare.

THEFTS OF U. S. ARMY CLOTH.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Thefts of army cloth valued at $50,000 from the Quartermaster's Department of the U. S. army, in which at least two soldiers now in the service are implicated, have been uncovered by city detectives and officers of the Army Intelligence Bureau.

To The Electors

141 Hunter Street, E.,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 25th, /17.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the City of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "general" education and "technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous boards of education, and will endeavour, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the City of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,

Bread Cards Won't Be Issued Now Because People Realize Need for Saving.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The issuance of bread cards, which was to have been made on January 1, will not be carried out. The Minister of Provision, Victor Boret, made this announcement to-day. He said the inhabitants of Paris and the other chief cities seemed to have grasped the seriousness of the appeal for food conservation which had been addressed to them, and that he was satisfied with the bread consumption of the last few weeks.

SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT AT HASTINGS

Hastings, December 26. — A large and appreciative audience greeted the friends of the Methodist Sunday School in their annual Christmas entertainment on Christmas night, held in the town hall.

The programme was lengthy and well rendered and consisted of drills, solos, a mixed quartette, recitations by home talent, and a beautifully rendered pantomime, "Rock of Ages," by seven girls. The artists from outside were Miss Alice Storry, elocutionist, of Toronto, Miss Helen B. Hunt, violinist, of Albert College, Belleville, and Mr. S. Weir of Norwood, who each rendered excellent service. Miss Storry as an elocutionist ranks as a star, as was evidenced by the numbers she gave, being repeatedly encored. Miss Hunt's selections were well given and well received, and these will always appeal to Hastings' audiences. Altogether the concert was a great success, and the committee in charge have every reason to feel pleased with the success of their efforts.

MATERIAL DECREASE SHOWN IN BRITISH SHIPPING LOSSES

London, December 28. — The losses to British shipping show a material decrease for the past week.

According to the Admiralty report, 11 British merchantmen of 1,600 tons or over were sunk during this period by mine or submarine, as well as one merchantman under that tonnage and one fishing vessel.

Twelve merchantmen were unsuccessfully attacked by submarines during the same period. Seventeen vessels were sunk the week previous.

THIS MAN GETS USED TO BEING TORPEDOED

Sailor on Five Different Boats That Were Sunk By Hun Submarines

A letter from Madrid says: A most extraordinary story of adventure with German submarines and of successive and marvellous escapes is told by the survivors of the Brazilian steamship Macau which was sunk off Finisterre, and the crew of which have been landed at Ferrol. Incidentally, it furnishes some new, interesting and important facts, bearing upon the proceedings of the submarine U-293, which recently escaped from Cadiz.

Among those saved from the Macau and landed at Ferrol, is the first officer, Antonio Javier Mercante, who makes the following statement: "On the 18th of September, the Macau weighed anchor at Rio Janiero with a cargo of wheat consigned to France. On October 18, when 250 miles north of Finisterre we made out signals to us from some shipwrecked persons, whom we took on board. They were the captain and a sailor of the North American steamer St. Helen, of 3,500 tons, which had been torpedoed in that vicinity at 3.30 on the afternoon of the 14th. They were the only survivors of the crew of 26 of the St. Helen. Both of them, on their ship being sunk, were able to grasp a piece of timber, and so they remained for four days.

"We continued on our course, and at five o'clock on the same afternoon there was an explosion in the afterhold of the Macau. The captain understood immediately that it was a torpedo, and ordered the boats to be lowered. We had scarcely made the first preparations when a submarine appeared and its commander ordered our captain, Saturnino Hurtado de Mendoza, and a steward, to go on board his craft. We others, except a Brazilian stoker, who was doubtless buried beneath the coal, made our way toward land in two boats. At daybreak, still in our boat, we perceived the plight we were in and our lack of provisions. There were 21 of us on board among them the second and third officers. For the space of four days we kept ourselves alive on ship's biscuit only; fortunately we had a supply of water also. At 3.30 in the morning of the following Monday we saw the lighthouse of Corunna, and at 10.30 in the morning we came up with a couple of fishing boats which towed us into the port."

The survivors of the St. Helen relate that on October 12 they left Newport with a cargo of coal for Argelia, and that the torpedo that sunk the ship blew up the deck and the bridge. The captain and sailor were hurled into the sea and on coming to the surface saw their ship keel upwards. Nobody else on board was saved. The sailor, a Portuguese, has had an extraordinary record with submarines, for this is the fifth time that the boat he was on has been torpedoed, and sunk. His first experience of the kind was on Jan. 27th, when his ship, the Norwegian Dorostod, 1,500 tons, was sunk when 72 miles off Finisterre. The second was less than a month later, on Feb. 25, when he was one of the crew of the Norwegian Elutori, 3,200 tons, which was torpedoed, and a few days later he was on board a Danish steamer when it was sunk by the submarine U-293. Then the St. Helen was sunk, and next the Macau, which had rescued him and his captain. This man, Jose Antonio Dosseio, seems little disconcerted by these experiences, and expresses his willingness to go to sea again in the first ship that will engage him.

Apart from the personal side of his story, however, he makes a statement which is of some international and diplomatic importance. When the U-293 sank the Danish steamer on which he was serving the commander took him prisoner, and he remained on board five months. This was the same submarine that recently escaped from Cadiz, and which has placed Spain in a position of some difficulty. When it entered Cadiz the commander stated that he had simply run short of lubricating oil, and was not suffering from any injuries. Dosseio however, states that while he was on board the craft she sunk many ships, one being the Patricio, a Spanish vessel, the torpedoing of which caused such excitement in Spain last May, and created a considerable public demand for the breaking of relations with Germany. When at last the U-293 was making her way between Ceuta and Gibraltar she fell in with an English destroyer, one of whose projectiles pierced the shell of the submarine after a fight that lasted two hours.

The submarine then made good its escape and effected some temporary repairs, but she was obliged in the end to put into Cadiz, where it was interned, and subsequently escaped. When near to the port, Dosseio jumped into the water, swam ashore, and then went straight to the Portuguese Consul.

Presentation To Pte. Watson

A party was held at the home of Mrs. T. Poole, Liverpool Villa, Byersville, on Christmas Eve in honour of Private Andy Watson, Royal Flying Corps. After a dainty supper there was music, singing and games, and during the evening Pte. Watson was presented with military brushes and shaving set by Mrs. Poole, who wished him the best of luck and a safe return.

Pte. Watson responded in a suitable manner. Speeches were also made by Mrs. Bugg and Mr. McKinley, who hoped all the boys would be back home for the next Christmas.

At the close of the evening all joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "He's a jolly good fellow," and gave hearty cheers for the guest, all wishing him a speedy return, with the Allies victorious, and concluding with "God Save the King." Guests from out of town included Mrs. Alec. Watson and Master Stuart Watson of Ford City.

SHORTHORN BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION FORMED

Object of New Organization Will Be to Further the Interests of the Breeders of Shorthorn Cattle in the County and to Hold an Annual Sale of Surplus Stock.

OFFICERS ELECTED

A number of the Shorthorn breeders of the County met in the City Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Saturday afternoon last. These men were called together to further the interests of all who are engaged in the breeding of pure bred Shorthorn cattle in the County of Peterborough. There are a considerable number of farmers who are interested in this particular branch of agriculture, and it had been felt that the Shorthorn breeders, individually, were not receiving the benefits they might if they had an organization of some kind. It was pointed out by some of those present that in the neighbouring County of Victoria, where a Shorthorn Breeders' Club was organized a few years ago, that great strides have been made on account of united effort. For the past six years at Lindsay, an annual sale has been held, and the result has been that all the surplus stock in the County was disposed of to good advantage, whereas in the County of Peterborough it was difficult to attract buyers to the individual stable because the average man did not have sufficient stock to offer for sale to warrant a purchaser coming in.

An organization, to be known as "The Peterborough County Shorthorn Breeders' Association" as formed with the following as officers:

President—Andrew A. Knox, Asphodel Township.

Vice-President—Allan B. Mann, of Smith Township.

Sec.-Treasurer—F. C. McRae, Department of Agriculture, Norwood.

Directors — Archie Wilson, John Smith, Lakehurst; M. Smithson, S. F. Redmond, S. Matchett, Otonabee Township; Wm. Knox, John Boland, Asphodel Township; Harold Baptie, W. Boles, Monaghan Township; J. H. Garbutt, Allan B. Mann, Smith Township; Harry Patterson, Dummer Township; Frank Scollard, Ennismore Township; Vincent Moher, Geo. Garbutt, Douro Township.

Executive Committee—J. H. Garbutt, Allan B. Mann, Andrew Knox, F. C. McRae.

The object of this Association will be to further the interests of the breeders of Shorthorn cattle in the County, and to hold an annual sale of surplus stock. It as decided that it would not be advisable to hold a sale this winter on account of the lateness of the season, and the short time that the breeders will have to get their stock in sale shape. This matter will be left over until the winter of 1919, when it hoped there will be more young stock available which will be in better shape to offer for sale.

There were a number of breeders who were not present at this meeting who will doubtless be interested in the move which has been taken. The membership fees have been placed at $1.00 a year, and the Secretary will be glad to receive the names of any persons desiring to join this Association. Another meeting will be called early in June for the purpose of drawing up rules and regulations, and receiving entries for all stock to be listed for sale in the winter of 1919.

LESS CRIME IN ONTARIO IS REPORT OF SUPT. ROGERS

Cases handled	1,939
Convictions	1,543
Fines imposed	$64,753

According to the annual police report of Superintendent Joseph E. Rogers of the provincial police, there was a considerable decrease in crime throughout the province. However, the police, owing to the enforcing of the Ontario Temperance Act, have been able to hand to the Government $64,753, an increase of $32,880 over last year.

The report shows that 1,939 cases were handled this year, compared with 1,198 last, but the Ontario Temperance Act enforcement has a lot to do with this. There were 1,543 convictions, an increase of 536. There were 165 senteneed to imprisonment, 167 on suspende sentence, 223 discharged, 40 cases withdrawn and 75 still awaiting disposition.

Fourteen cases have been handled by the provincial police for other police forces, and 14 prisoners have been handed over, and 333 cases under the War Measures Act have been attended to. These were for failure to report to registrar, failing to register, and the violation of their parole.

Nice Sum in Fines.

The sum of $64,753 was imposed in fines, an increase of $32,880. Fes collected and turned in totalled $4,531.72, an increase of $2,257.44.

There were 803 prosecutions under the Ontario Temperance Act, against 333 last year, of which 437 were for violations of the act and 366 for drunks. The fines collected for this amounted to $52,590

Lot of Liquor Seized.

Considerable liquor was seized this year, but in each case it was less than last year, save one: Whisky, 1,493 bottles, 74 1-4 gallons, 6 barrels; gin 187 bottles, 2 gallons; beer, 259 bottles, 2 barrel; brandy, 24 bottles; rum, 5 bottles; wine, 31 bottles, 1 keg, 33 gallons; alcohol 6 gallons.

Forty-one cases under the Game and Fisheries Act were handled by the department, being a decrease of 47, probably owing to certain game seasons being open, and fines to the amount of $2,122 were imposed. There were 37 convictions.

Handled Fire Inquests.

Supt. Rogers has handled five fire inquests and investigated 20 fires for the Ontario fire marshall. There were also three extradition cases conducted.

The force is undermanned, according to the report. There are at least twelve men less than when the force was first organized. The strength is placed at 37 men now. There were three charges laid against members of the force, but all were without foundation.

SPLENDID ADDRESS ON RED CROSS WORK

The sixty workers at the Public Library who yesterday afternoon answered the Red Cross S. O. S. message for pneumonia jackets, were privileged on hearing a remarkably interesting address by Mr. Sarel, who was sent to England and France to bring the English and Canadian Red Cross societies into closer conjunction.

THE HUMAN SIDE

Mr. Sarel, in his address, cast a very clear light on the human side of the Red Cross workings. He told of how the process of elimination had sifted out the unfit, but willing workers from the society until a splendid organization, embracing a representative collection of the brainiest of the nation's women now undertake and carry out the absolutely necessary work which must be done, but does not come under the military.

"To walk," he said, "into the Red Cross headquarters, in London, is to forget your troubles in the cheerful aspect of these courteous women who work so diligently and receive visitors in a courteous manner at all times.

DUTIES OF THE RED CROSS.

Through the Red Cross Society the soldiers arriving from active service in England are immediately taken in hand and supplied with comforts.

Should a relative be reported on the casualty list a cable or communication to the Red Cross in London brings immediate first-hand information secured through the visitors who work in conjunction with the Society, and who follow up the patient visited, sending constant information gratuitously until he is in the field again.

Besides the care of sick and wounded the Red Cross, which is international, has a wonderful system of searching for lost or missing relatives. The organization is good in Germany but behind a little in information.

For this reason hope should never be lost over a "missing" casualty until well over five months after which time the case is practically hopeless.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

The Red Cross is the society which undertakes the management of prisoners of war. When a man is taken prisoner of war the particulars are carefully tabulated and sent to Berlin, and information taken by the International Red Cross and sent to the War Office, Switzerland, and Canadian Record Office. Directly a prisoner of war is reported a prisoner of war parcel containing nourishing food is despatched every five days, tobacco once a fortnight, and clothes half yearly. To send a parcel by the Red Cross is to insure absolute safe delivery. It is taken by ship to Holland, met at the border by Red Cross officials and delivered to the boys, who sign for the receipt, which is returned.

RED CROSS PROVIDES AMUSEMENT.

The Society also sees that time does not lag for the wounded boys, but provides cars to take them to music halls and theatres, so all have a chance to see something cheerful. Four thousand boys have been taken into private British homes, where they met most kindly and hospitable treatment.

AFFILIATED SOCIETIES.

The Canadian War Contingent Association, which is affiliated with the Red Cross, provides things for the men not included in military issues, and through it there is an endless fund of fun for the boys. Through the medium of this society a large percentage of sickness is warded off. Changes for damp feet are supplied, and many comforts and diversions.

The Army and Navy League in Paris affords all luxuries for the boys who have come behind the lines. The ladies in charge see that nothing is lacking to keep up the spirits of the boys.

MATERIALS WANTED.

The necessity of sending socks and more socks cannot be overdrawn. A few isolated cases may report "too many," but the rule is "not enough." The wastage is enormous and must be met. Pneumonia jackets and Balaclava caps are also necessary..

ADDRESSING LETTERS.

Mr. Sarel impressed the necessity of carefully addressing parcels and letters which is not, perhaps, in accordance with printed regulations—the number, the name in full, the last known battalion, and always the word "Canadians" clearly written, practically insures safe delivery.

There are delays he said in letters, but scarcely a case of loss of mail: Seven and a half per cent. fewer letters are lost to the men on active service than through the Canadian civil Post Office. Failure of receiving replies to letters or parcels should be reported to the officer in command of the battalion.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Mrs. Matthews, who occupied the chair, extended a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Sarel for his speech.

MUNITION WORKS CLOSE.

Thousands of Employees in Russia Are to be Paid Off.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The Putiloff Works, employing 30,000 men, and the Petrograd Metallurgical Works, employing 8,000, have begun to pay off their men, according to a Reuter's despatch from Petrograd.

BITTER PROTEST AGAINST CENSOR

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A strong protest against bureaucratic censorship comes from General Sir Ian Hamilton in the foreword to his reprint of his Dardanelles despatches published in volume form. The general had been told that names of battalions must be cut out of the Gallipoli despatches before their publication. To a "friend in power" he wrote in June, 1915:

"You seem to see nothing beyond the mischief that may happen if the enemy gets to know too much about us. You do not see that this danger can be kept within bounds, and is of small consequence when compared with the keenness of the dullness of our own nation. Democracy and autocracy must fight with their own weapons; if they change the foils in the scuffle, then like Hamlet and Laertes they both of them are doomed."

BARONESS ZOLLNER HELD ON SPY CHARGE

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 26.—Baroness Iona Zollner of New York, wife of a German army officer serving on the Flanders front, was held without bail for the Federal Grand Jury here on the charge of violating the espionage act. Lieutenant John W. Spaulding, the 22-year-old United States army officer arrested with the woman at a local hotel, was sent to Ft. Oglethorpe, under guard, after he had testified for the defence.

The charge against the Baroness is based chiefly upon a code found in her possession, and letters written by her to her 16-year-old son, Bedford Shope. The code, Spaulding swore, was arranged so the Baroness could be kept informed of his movements until such time as he might be sent to France. One of the letters to the boy described minutely a trip to Ft. Oglethorpe, the condition of the roads and the topography of the surrounding country.

Spaulding testified that he loved the Baroness and wanted to marry her, that she had paid his hotel bills and other expenses on various occasions, and that she helped him to get a commission in the army after he had been compelled to resign from the Naval Academy on account of "bills".

Baroness Zollner denied the charges vigorously. She said she had been investigated at Washington and Annapolis, and was permitted to move about under the known status of an enemy alien.

Commissioner McAlester, who conducted the hearing, intimated that much of the evidence against the defendant had been explained away. While he refused to accept bail he advised counsel for the Baroness to apply to the Federa District Judge for a writ of habeas corpus.

About the time Baroness Zollner was arraigned in court, Victor Reutner, an enemy alien announced before the District Attorney because his wife's address was found in Baroness Zollner's effects, dropped dead at Louisville.

BALLPLAYERS ARE WANTED

They Make Especially Good Grenade Throwers, it is Said.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—The British-Canadian recruiting mission to-day issued an official appeal to baseball players to enlist because of their natural adaptability to grenade throwing.

"Baseball players can do better at grenade throwing than any other men," says a bulletin issued by recruiting officers. "We can train ordinary men for this service, but this is an age of specialization, and baseball players are better fitted to become grenade throwers than any other class of men."

IRISH CHAPLAIN KILLED IN ACTION; ANOTHER GETS M.C.

The death is announced of Father Stephen Clarke on the field of action. He was twenty-nine years of age, a son of Mr. P. Clarke, of Bailieborough, Ireland, an alumnus of St. Patrick College, Cavan, and of Maynooth. He was ordained in 1912.

Another Irish chaplain, Father C. S. Sheehan, formerly a professor at St. Colman's College, Fermoy, has been decorated with the Military Cross for gallant conduct on the Somme. Says the official report:

"On hearing that there was a lot of wounded in the front trenches, we went there, and remained with one of the battalions three days. His conduct was most conspicuous in attending the wounded and burying the dead, particularly so when, on hearing that some men of another battalion had been killed in the front line trench, he proceeded there under heavy fire, and carried out the burial service."

Father Sheehan belongs to a military family. He has two brothers serving at the Front, Capt. T. M. Sheehan, R.A.M.C.; and John Sheehan, A.S.C. They all belong to Mallow, County Cork.

War To Go On Without Russia

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Dec. 28.— Stephen Pichon, France's Foreign Minister, in the Chamber of Deputies, declared that France could not accept peace based on conditions that existed before the war. The war would go on whether or not Russia made a separate peace, he said. The question of Alsace-Lorraine was a world question, not a territorial but a moral problem, he declared, and on its solution depended whether the world would have durable peace.

Thousands Are Homeless

THE MONEY WAR

By VICTOR MacCLURE

One of the amazing things about the world-war is the extraordinary way in which the average man has begun to patter about money. In Britain, the man with five pounds a week—not the fruit of capital, but payment for the use of his head and hands—read in his evening journal that the country was spending four million pounds a day; and he did not blink an eyelid. When the figure of daily war expenditure counted to five million, he did not blink. When it rose to six millions and he was threatened with a further rise— that did not make him blink either. His inclination was to shrug his shoulders and say, "Good old Britain!" It warmed his heart to think that his solid old country had such broad shoulders, an his pride was increased when he noted that a fair proportion of the expenditure went on loans to Allied countries.

"How big an army have we now?" he would ask, of a train companion

"Oh, getting on for six million, all in—and growing, too," the man in the other corner might say.

'Seven million men and seven millions sterling a day—good round figure—that's the stuff to give 'em!"

He of the black suit and the thin hair meant the Germans when he said "'em." His five pounds per week did not buy two-thirds of what it had before the war—the result of taxation and the increase of prices. But when he got to his dinner table he spoke to his wife as a financial expert, and wondered if he had bought enough War Loan stock.

It never dawns on the five-pound-a-week financial expert that in himself and his attitude he embodies the strength of his country. His black suit represents the sacrifice of flesh of his flesh, a sacrifice borne with outward cheerfulness, though the pillow of his dreams knows what is in his heart. The lowered value of his caring power—even if he has a war bonus—represents another sacrifice, borne without a twinge. His attitude is that one with a stiff upper lip." Then he forgets, and smiles the "twisted smile" which the drama and a certain kind of novel has made popular. Mr. Five-pound-a-week is an ordinary, weakly-strong, sinful human-being prepared to play the game; you cannot help liking him, he is so human.

In the first year of the war our middle-class men had about as much to pay as he had in 1913. Britain was paying very little of her war-expenditure from taxation. So much so that the Secretary of the German Imperial Treasury, in August, 1915, thought fit to pat himself on the back. Germany was dreaming of indemnities and was raising money for the prosecution of the war from loans. The burden of debt after the war was to be borne by the enemies of victorious Germany; it was perfectly safe to leave taxation out of account in paying for the war; the burden of taxation on the German people was heavy enough as it stood; Britain was compelled by circumstances to adopt the same method.

Although it was in no sense an answer to this German taunt, but a clearly conceived policy; in September of that year Britain picked up the gage. She introduced a series of new imposts. She was going to pay for the war as she went along. Within another six months Britain increased her income by further taxation, enough to pay thirty per cent. of her war expenses, so that she has paid twenty-five per cent. of the total cost since the war began. The highest tax on incomes in Britain is thirty-four per cent. That does not too hardly affect Mr. Five Pounds; he has rebates for his two girls, for his insurance premium, for £120 which is deducted as not taxable at all, and a rebate because he earns his income.

The man with £250 a year is taxed for his amusements, for his tobacco, for his drinks, and indirectly on some commodities. The higher up the scale the income may be, the steeper is the tax, and more especially if it be derived from investments, not working capital. Britain imposes a rising tax, additional to the ordinary income tax, or incomes over £3,000 a year. The excess profits tax secures 50 per cent. of all profits from trades and businesses after £200 above pre-war profits.

Britain is paying partly for the war as she goes along, and is to pay the interest on her loans from revenue. Germany, on the other hand, is financing her war entirely from loans, and her revenue is insufficient to pay to ordinary peace-time charges of the country. She has to pay the deficits from money loaned for the prosecution of the war. Her two most recent taxes, on coal and on transport, are war time measures; they cannot be continued after the war without crippling industry at a time when it will need to be entirely unshackled, if it is to revive at all.

The whole root of the difficulty for Germany is that she calculated on speedy victory with a large indemnity to follow. How her anticipation failed to materialize is a matter of history; instead of the war sweeping triumphantly to a successful conclusion for her, it has dragged on for over three years, and defeat stares her in the face. The longer the war goes on the deeper her feet become embedded in the financial morass, the more severe will her struggle be after the conclusion of peace.

Germany's war debt up to the spring of this year stood at, nominally £5,000,000,000 requiring payment of interest, annually, of £250 millions, which does not include the sum required for paying off capital. At the outbreak of hostilities her revenue stood at £120 millions a year, a sum which it is estimated was increased by £70 millions during the war. According to her own statements she will be faced with an expenditure increased through the war by £500 millions per annum. £320 millions cannot pay off £500 millions by any chance; and it must be remembered that in the £500 millions there is no account taken of the ordinary peace-time expenditure of the country, which, after all, cannot be avoided.

After the war German will be faced with many problems in finance. She must pay pensions to those crippled in the war, to the widows and children of the slain— these pensions alone being estimated by her at £175 million a year; there will be the problems of reconstruction; the recreation of the mercantile marine, the heavy expense of rebuilding the industries closed down by the war, the re-habilitation of East Prussia, and many more losses remaining to be covered as the result of war.

Because Germany is enclosed and because all the money is expended in the country and simply changes hands within her borders, she is able to create a fictitious appearance of financial strength. But most of her gold must go abroad to revive her failing credit; within her borders she can make-shift with paper. The Civil War in America was financed by the issue of bonds, and left many evils in its track. No country can fight by bonds alone without impairing its financial strength very greatly. And Germany is paying for her war entirely on bonds; she is paying the interest on these bonds by the floating of further issues.

The Pan-Germanic Party realizes this better than most, and it is this realization that leads to the demand for indemnities which are nothing short of comic, considering the present circumstances. The Bavarian Branch of the Pan German League has published a statement of what Germany requires from her enemies. She needs an indemnity of $£10,000,000,000, part of which would be taken in kind. This German estimate is interesting in that it shows the really parlous state she is in.

Government Will Have To Tackle Railway Problem

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 28.—The railway problem is being forced upon the attention of the government from two angles. The summary and drastic action of the United States in connection with the roads of that country cannot fail in the long run and in spite of what Canada has already done toward government ownership and operation and also toward the co-ordination of railway effort, to influence the government in its attitude towards the railway problem. Furthermore the recent action of the Dominion Railway Commission in uniformly increasing rates on Canadian roads have served to concentrate attention upon the real condition of affairs in the Canadian railroad world. To-day it is stated that co-operative management may follow co-operation in the distribution and disposition of rolling stock. The increase in rates ordered by the Railway Commission, while probably justified on the ground of increased running expensese has not gone without protest. The government is already in possession of strong representations from the west complaining against the new increases in rates. The west contends that for years it fought against undue discrimination in freight rates as against itself and in favour of the east that as a result of that fighting it secured a measure of relief from the Railroad Board, but that now the old situation has been re-established. It is further contended that while the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk lines require the increase, the greater benefit of that increase will accrue to the Canadian Pacific which does not require it.

President Wilson's Birthday

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.— This is President Wilson's sixty-first birthday. He planned to spend it quietly at home in pursuance of his work as leader of a nation at war. The wearing experiences, he says, recently gone through, have left him practically untouched in appearance. His health is much better than it ever has been.

REASONS FOR CURTAILING THE STREET LIGHTING

Why the magnetite arc lights have not been turned on earlier in the evening has been the origin of a number of inquiries. In reply, two reasons are given. The first has to do with a request made by the Commission of Conservation to curtail the consumption of electrical energy while present conditions exist.

This alone does not account for the fact that the street lighting system is not turned on until about 5.40 in the evening, as the request referred to applies more to the Niagara power belt. The second and chief reason is that the power rate for the month is based on a twenty-minute peak. That is to say, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario each month take the maximum consumption for any twenty-minute period for that month as a basis for the rate charged to the city.

By keeping the lights off until 5.45 a large number of the factories begin to close down, and the danger of a high peak is considerably lessened.

It will be only a matter of a short time until the days begin to lengthen and the difficulty complained of will be overcome.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner or which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—On looking over the list of candidates for the Board of Education I find the names of some very good citizens, but I doubt if they are all qualified to look after the educational requirements of our children.

Napoleon once said, "Find me the man who suits the place; not the man the place will suit."

I would strongly recommend to the electors of this city Mr. G. Reid Munro, a man who would "suit the place."

Mr. Munro is a graduate mechanical engineer of the School of Science, Toronto University. When he completed his very creditable course there, he accepted a position as demonstrator in the School of Science, which position he held until he returned to Peterborough to accept his present position.

Having this experience and being on the engineering staff of the Wm. Hamilton Co., when the time arrives to build our Technical School, he would be fully aware of the requirements of the young artisan.

Mr. Munro was born in Peterborough, and is well acquainted with local conditions; he is progressive, and his conduct in every department of life commands nothing but the highest respect.

Thanking you for your valuable space.—Yours very truly,

An Interested Parent.

Peterborough, 28th Dec., 1917.

Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—Of all the new men who are running for the Board of Education the name of J. W. Worth stands forward most prominently. He is a young and energetic man, and he has for a long time shown a great interest in civic affairs. Proof of his energy and capabilities is shown in the way he, along with his brothers, has worked up the Bonner-Worth Company from a small beginning to one of Peterborough's largest industries. It may be interesting to citizens to know that the Bonner-Worth Company is the largest spinning concern in Canada. Mr. Worth is vitally concerned in the promotion of technical education in Peterborough, as the Bonner-Worth Company has at the present time to get all its skilled men in the States or train them themselves.

His connection with the playground association shows his deep interest in the welfare and advancement of the children.

When voting, keep in mind the necessity of having young, energetic, and successful men on the Board.—Yours truly,

Energy and Success.

Peterborough, 28th Dec., 1917.

Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—In view of the observations appearing in the press, directed to the Warden and his appointment as Advisor of the Government regarding the exemption of farm labour, I wish to say that in order that farmers may not be disturbed by such letters that they are wholly unfounded. In the first place, the Warden was appointed (and Mr. Knox for the East Riding) as official advisor of the Government in this matter, and with directions to report to Military Headquarters at Kingston. He was not appointed for any other purpose and to say he was not is both unnecessary and peculiar. The first appointment of these gentlemen was dated Dec. 5th, and was clear and definite. Owing to the criticisms referred to I communicated with the Government on December the 26th, and pointed out to them the desirability of confirming the appointment. I got the following telegram yesterday from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa: "Your letter 26th re exemption farm labour, received. Am taking matter up with Military Sub-Committee. In meantime confirm my wire 5th inst., appointing the Warden, Maxwell Brown, representative of Department in this connection."

I trust that this will do away with any suspicion that the Government is guilty or preparing to be guilty of, a violation of its pre-election promise. The Warden has sent away a very large number of recommendations, as directed by the Government, to Headquarters. He and Mr. Knox heard all complaints in private, had them taken down and typewritten, added their recommendations in each case and dispatched them to headquarters. These gentleemn interfere with no other tribunal and must not be interefered with. The farmers may rest assured that unless the Government is composed of the worst elements in Canada it will carry out it's promise twice made by telegraph and originating in the promise of the Prime Minister himself made to the farmers of West Peterborough at the Empress Hotel when he spoke here.

MICROPHONE FINDS U-BOATS.

British Said to Have Improved It To a Miraculous Degree.

STOCKOLM.—Two of the methods by which the British are effectively fighting the German submarine are by the use of the new microphone detectors and explosive bombs of enormous power, according to a writer in the Tidningen, an authority on technical information.

British experts have so improved the use of the microphone on anti-submarine vessels, says the writer, that they are able to steer accurately and automatically down on the submarine, while formerly they were unable to locate a vessel beneath the surface. The microphones are placed below the water close to the keel of the vessel, and answer the same purpose as the microphones of a telephone. By listening to the beat of the submarine's propeller they can determine the exact location of the enemy and attack him before he has the slightest idea of what is happening.

The detection instruments used with the microphones are very complex. One of them shows the distance of the submarine on a graduated scale, the indicator responding electrically to the sound from the submarine's propellers. The variations of distance are shown with marvellous accuracy. Another device shows whether the enemy is on the port or starboard side. The electro magnet hand moves to the side on which the sound is loudest and the ship is guided accordingly.

When the proper spot is reached, bombs are dropped in the same manner as from airplanes. Their underwater force is so great that they can destroy a submarine 150 feet from the point of explosion.

Be Careful Of The Little Ones

Do Not Leave Things Around That Are Harmful to Them

The fact that two little children died recently from poisoning from eating in one case, thought to be some pills, and in another fruit that was decayed, should make parents very careful of putting away from the reach of little ones anything that might be fatal or even injurious to them. It is only recently that one little child playing with pins left some on the floor which were picked up by a baby just creeping and the first thing it did was to put them in its mouth. Two much care cannot be exercised where little ones are around.

QUESTION OF FRENCH LIQUORS

(Specail to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 28.—An interesting question has been raised in connection with the government's new order-in-council respecting intoxicating liquors. This order prohibits the importation into Canada of intoxicating beverages of various kinds. The question has been raised as to how this will affect French wines and liquors. Under the conference treaty a year's notice is provided for in the case of any import changes between the two countries. It will, therefore, appear that the import prohibition could not immediately apply to French wines, etc. It is contended here, however, that action has been taken by the French government in connection with certain Canadian imports without the stipulated notice being given and it is believed that a similar flexibility for war purposes will be permitted to Canada.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

The prize given for Christmas Day at the Water Street Alleys, was won by Mr. V. Dawson, with a score of 608 in three games. Mr. Phillips also won a prize, by making the first 200 score.

The Peterborough City Ten Pin League will hold a meeting to-night, at 8 o'clock. All Captains of each team are asked to be present.

CURLING

Two rinks left at noon to-day for Millbrook, skipped by R. M. Waddell and Jas. Skinner. One of the members had a business engagement there and this was considered sufficient excuse for taking the eight curlers along for a friendly tilt.

One of the members, when informed that the water dripping from the roof had taken ten years to rot the brick wall, regarded the colour evidence of decay and remarked "The handwriting on the wall. What will our 'pipes' be like in 1927 if we have nothing but water to drink?"

All the ices are in good shape, and old No. 7 presents a new and finished surface. Four games were played last night, and all the members were on their way home by 10 o'clock. What a contrast to the old days!

TORONTOS WIN AGAIN

Coming from behind when practically all hope had been abandoned by the big crowd of over three thousand fans at the Arena last night Torontos scored their second victory at home by defeating the champion Canadiens by the score of 7 to 5, and put themselves on an equal footing with the Frenchmen, dividing the position at the top of the heap with them.

It was a glorious finish, and one that thrilled the audience to such a point that when the final bell rang their cheers were prolonged even after te players had left the ice. For the Blue Shirts it was a real test of mettle, and they proved true and strong.

Entering the third period they were faced with a two-goal handicap, the Canadiens playing a three-man defence, and Cameron, their crack defence man, resting in the penalty bench. It was a handicap that most teams would have given in to, but Manager Querrie sent his boys at the enemy from the very start, and it was not long until the Canadiens found the offensive taken from them and Vezina battling for his very life under a fusilade of shots that forced him to extend himself to the utmost.

Ottawa Won From Wanderers

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—Ottawas defeated the Wanderers at the local Arena by 6 goals to 3, before a comparatively small crowd of spectators. The game was fast for the first ten minutes, then the locals slowed down and the visitors kept piling up the score until they were a safe distance away from their opponents.

The Red Bands played with practically the same team which had suffered defeat before, though it had been announced that they would have some new blood to-night. Skilton, who was in the Saturday night game against Canadiens, was ill to-night and did not play.

The Senators were strengthened by the services of Frank Nighbor. His brilliant playing was a feature of to-night's game, and through his clever puck-carrying he assisted his teammates in scoring.

The play was too one-sided to be rough, and all the penalties handed out were for minor offences. Both Benedict and Lindsay were warned for getting on their knees, but were allowed to go unpenalised, although they offended several times in this respect.

"What results did your investigating committee get?" "We found out a lot of interesting things," replied Senator Sorghum. "It will take some time to investigate them all. In the meantime, the original investigation will have to wait."—Washington Star.

Deceased Was Ill But a Few Days —Funeral on Monday

A well-known citizen passed away this morning in Nicholls Hospital, in the person of Mr. H. B. Taylor, coal and wood merchant. The late Mr. Taylor entered the hospital on Saturday last, and his death, shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, terminates the career of a citizen whose sterling integrity and the fairness and manly character of his business dealings, gained a reputation that few men leave behind.

The late Mr. Taylor was born in the township of Alnwick, near Roseneath. About fifteen years ago he moved to Peterborough and entered into the coal business with R. Hicks and Company. About ten years later, the deceased went into business for himself. He was a Mason and a member of the Independent Order of Foresters. In religion he was a Methodist and a member of Trinity church.

The funeral will take place on Monday from the family residence, 209 Dalhousie street. Service will be conducted at the house at two o'clock. The Rev. J. P. Wilson will officiate. Interment in Little Lake cemetery.

MARY WALTON.

A death which will cause the deepest sorrow amongst a wide circle of friends occurred yesterday afternoon, when Mary Robinson, beloved wife of W. J. Walton, 217 London street, passed away suddenly.

Mrs. Walton had not been in perfect health for three years, but of late had shown such signs of regaining health her recovery was hoped for, and yesterday she joined her family downstairs, evidently as well as usual, when suddenly she was taken with a weak turn, which ended in her death.

She leaves her husband and six sons and daughters to mourn her death. Mr. T. W. Robinson of this city is a brother.

The funeral service, which will be held at the family residence to-morrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, before leaving for the Little Lake cemetery, will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas and Rev. Mr. Wilson.

Inadequate Means Of Disposing Of Homeless Dogs

The city's dog by-law and the facilities for its enforcement are so unsatisfactory and incomplete that its usefulness is to a large extent nullified and its operation is almost farcical. Three or four dogs have been destroyed recently by the police, and this afternoon there were three more to walk the plank unless their owners claimed them. Two of them have been kept in the cells at the police station for practically forty-eight hours, and the constant howling has driven from the minds of the force the last of the Christmas spirit. The ordinary wails of the two unlucky mongrels re-echoing through the empty cell room and rolling into the guard room and upstairs to the Chief's office sounded like the close-up cry of coyotes or any unwelcome, noisy bawling that would sound better away off in Keene or Warsaw.

The police rounded up these dogs although it is anything but clear that dog-catching is one of the duties of a constable. Lacking other accommodation they were locked up in cells where they howled themselves hoarse providing ironic punishment for the alleged much-married prisoner who was temporarily confined in the police station. This morning he was remanded for a week and transferred to jail.

But dogs are dogs, and the police would be justified in refusing to be keepers of the civic kennels and chambermaids to wandering curs that should receive summary and scant attention. The situation might as well be stated plainly. The police have forbore to complain of the conditions and probably they are well able to voice their objections at what they regard the proper time. But these dogs should not be confined in the police station. There must be some other place of detention and the by-law should be systematized in its operation.

The police are averse to shooting the dogs, and the provision of a lethal chamber should be speeded up. It was somewhat amusing this afternoon to watch the efforts of one of the force trying to manoeuvre the two dogs into a favourable position to shoot them. He was outside the cells, an automatic pistol ready to despatch the homeless pups. Finally, he gave up from sheer aversion of the job and because of the inefficient method of destruction. The execution appeared to be indefinitely deferred. The dog by-law demands, once and for all, a few minutes of the Council's time while they decide to put its administration on an effective basis.

THE WEATHER

There has been a decided change in the weather within a few hours. Last evening the temperature was up to 30 degrees, with snow and sleet. To-day at noon it was drifting, with the thermometer 14 degrees below zero; and probably still lower to-night.—W P

GERMAN SMUGGLERS USED MASKED BALL AS CAMOUFLAGE

Smuggling of foodstuffs into Germany is still practised in ingenious and unexpected ways. The other night a party of about fifty persons crossed the frontier to take part in a masked ball in a little Swiss town. Toward midnight they returned in automobiles, whih were warned to stop at the frontier.

No notice being taken of the warning the sentinels fired and brought the cars to a standstill. The occupants, most of whom were discovered to be German soldiers, succeeded in making their escape, but the cars, in which were hidden large quantities of soap, chocolate, butter, leather and fats, were seized by the authorities.

HOW NEW REGULATIONS REGARDING CEREALS ARE TO BE CARRIED OUT

After New Year's Day Licenses From the Food Controller Will Be Required by Manufacturers or Importers of Breakfast Foods—The Package Rule.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—On and after New Year's Day licenses from the Food Controller will be required by all manufacturers or importers of breakfast or cereal foods if intended for sale in any part of Canada and in packages of less than 20 pounds each. Few people realize the extent of the cereal and breakfast package food consumption in the Dominion. The special committee appointed by the Food Controller to investigate some features of this trade has made a detailed report on the subject.

"It is a business," the members of the committee say in their introductory remarks, "which has reached large proportions in the last few years. Its magnitude has given rise to the idea that the prices are extravagant and that fortunes have been made in this trade." The committee adds, however, that "while fortunes may have been made in the past, in most cases it is quite evident that the large profits have resulted from the enormous quantity of the packages sold."

A glance at any grocer's shelves will convince one of the proportion of his trade in package cereals. Housewives, too, know the heavy share of the weekly food expenses that is taken up in package goods.

In the broadest understanding of "food control," therefore, the regulation of the package cereals trade is obviously important. It was also one of the most readily reached of our Canadian food supplies, because centred in comparatively few firms and makers. Nothing was done without due regard to the legitimate requirements of a trade which has, through extensive and sustained advertising, become well known to the public. In fact, the investigation was undertaken by men who command the respect of the manufacturers, the wholesalers, the retailers and the general public. The Chairman was Prof. R. Harcourt, Professor in Chemistry at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont. The other members were Dr. A. McGill, Chief Analyst to the Department of Inland Revenue, Ottawa; Mr. P. B. Tustin, Chief of the Food and Dairy Division, Health Department, Winnipeg; and Mr. W. S. Lecky, of the War Purchasing Commission, Ottawa.

What, it will be asked, was the object of regulating the sale of package foods under 20 pounds in weight? Primarily, to keep down excessive profits on such packages, which naturally are bought in the smallest sizes by the poorer classes. There was also the desire to prove how great a saving in cost could be made by the purchase of cereals in bulk. The difference in the last named case was such as the average housewife could not be expected to find for herself. Rolled oats were found to be selling in packages weighing a little over 3 pounds at the rate of 8.73 cents a pound. Bought in ten-pound bulk lots the same oats could be obtained for 6.50 cents a pound, and in 20-pound lots at 6.25 cents a pound.

Measured by the difference in energy-giving units the variation in brands was found to be as striking. For instance, a certain fairly well advertised make of oats giving 1,000 "calories" or energy units, cost only 4.41 cents, while another breakfast food giving the same calories cost 21.93 cents.

With such considerations before them the Committee came to the conclusion that package cereals are not so cheap as cereals bought in bulk. Thanks to a peculiarity in the cereal package food trade their prices today certainly approximate more nearly to the bulk prices than ever. This is due to the fact that the essence of their business methods has been to standardize prices over a large area. Many firms have advertised over the United States and Canada a fixed price for their packages. Rather than change the standardized price during war time, when the cost of "raw material" to the manufacturing firms is higher than it was formerly, they have in most cases thought it advisable to work on a narrower margin. In fact two firms were said to be actually selling at a slight loss at present.

With the licensing of the manufacture of these cereals a set of regulations has been drawn up which will enable the consumer to know precisely what quantity of food he or she is buying in the small package. The report specifically states that there is not the remotest idea of condemning the cereal package: it has served and still serves a definite part of the public but under the proposals of the committee a considerable step will have been taken to keep the consumption of wheat products down to the level of actual necessities. How important that is need not here and now be emphasized with the armies and civil populations of Great Britain, France and Italy depending for their daily bread largely on this continent. Hence the italicised recommendation of the committee that the sale of cereals should be under regulation if sold in packages of less than 20 pounds each. Equally emphatic is the recommendation to the larger purchasers to buy in bulk: "It is unquestionably the better course."

Cooked cereals could not, the makers urged, be handled in bulk because of friability and their tendency to absorb moisture from the atmosphere but the committee came to the conclusion that the regulations for all cereals if in small packages should be the same.

The onus of getting the license rests with the maker in Canada or the importer if the factory is not in Canada. It will therefore be illegal after New Year for any firm to sell unlicensed goods. Wholesale and retail merchants will not have to be licensed for the sale of cereals only: that rests with the manufacturer or importer.

Licenses will protect the public in what they buy through the operation of regulations, and which have to be complied with before a license can issue, that there must be printed on the package in easily read form: 1, the name of the article; 2, name and address of the manufacturer; 3, license number; and 4, net weight of contents in pounds and ounces. The committee insisted also that the cost of containers, empty cartons and bags must be only a small proportion of the total cost, so that the consumer may not be paying for the package at food rates. Still more important, the regulations contain the stipulation: "The price at which the goods are sold to the public must not exceed an amount allowing a reasonable profit on bulk goods, plus the cost of the containers."

To assure the carrying out of these regulations the manufacturer's books must be open to inspection, subject to the cancellation, at a month's notice, of his license. A fee from $10 to $50 and even upwards based on yearly turnover will be charged for licenses.

Another new and important departure in food control is contained under the scheme by the provision that the "licensee must agree, if so required, at once to make earnest endeavours to find substitutes for ingredients which, from time to time, may be necessary to conserve. Just at present there should be a saving of all the wheat possible.

Thus it will be seen, taking the extent of the cereal trade in the Dominion into account, that the Food Controller has by a simple expedient under his discretionary powers, already secured effective control of one of the food supplies of Canada. He has, moreover, by the same simple method without interfering with ordinary course of trade so far as the retailer and his customer are concerned, given the public an effective guarantee that prices will not soar through causes which may not be justified.

This is the lowest record for this winter, although a couple of weeks ago the temperature fluctuated in the neighbourhood of twenty-five degrees.

GRAIN MARKET

Oats continue to move up to new high records, closing yesterday 1 1-8 cents higher than Thursday's close. The corn situation remains strong, though the action of the leading exchange directors in stopping any further dealings in the December option was expected to influence the market downwards. CATTLE MARKET

Receipts at the local cattle yards during the week have been extremely light, a condition usually following on the heavy receipts immediately preceding the Christmas season. Packers however, were well stocked up for the holiday trade, and there has been no apparent shortage of supplies to meet the extra demands at this season. Trade has been good for the limited offerings available and prices have been well sustained at the pre-holiday levels with a tendency generally higher for anything choice.

Sheep and lambs were particularly light on receipts and prices were very firm.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Interest in the rolled oats and oatmeal situation has been keen during the week, following advances that have been made effective on the part of the mills. There is an insistent demand from the local trade in the face of the upward tendency in the market. One manufacturer advanced the price considerably in excess of other mills just by way of stopping the demand. There has been a heavy export movement in this class of cereal and milling oats are reported scarce. Corn products are also in firm market as a result of the situation in corn. While the embargo on shipments of corn into Canada has been raised by the United States Government, the quality of corn coming forward is very poor and millers have to consume larger quantities of corn in order to obtain a given amount of corn products. This is working out toward firm prices. No announcement has been made as yet with respect to a change in the price of flour, although millers are expecting that permission to charge higher prices will be granted by the department of food control.

One Canadian refiner obtained some supplies of Demerara raw sugar during the week and this will help out toward relieving the sugar situation. Supplies of margarine from the United States came into the Canadian market during the week. Shortening is in light supply owing to the light arrival of cottonseed oil. Barrel pork was in firmer tone with higher prices recorded in some quarters. This condition has been induced through the possibility of an embargo on supplies coming into Canada from the United States. Turkeys and ducks were in good supply during the week were also in good supply. Wholesalers are now engaged in taking stock for the balance of the year. Travellers will not make their rounds to country points during the week, although calls will still be made in some of the large centres. Trade for the holiday season has been very gratifying in view of the shortages in numerous lines.

NORWOOD RESIDENCE DESTROYED BY FIRE

House and Contents a Total Loss —Cause Unexplained

NORWOOD, Dec. 28.—The residence of Mr. Thos. W. Morrison, Belmant street, was burned Thursday mroning. No one seems to know just how the fire started. Mr. Morrison himself had a narrow escape. Fortunately Miss Hazel and her sister were out in the country visiting, otherwise they might have perished in the flames.

Mr. Morrison attended service in the Methodist Church Wednesday evening and says the fires were all right when he retired for the night. He was awakened out of his sleep by the roar and crackle of the flames and had difficulty in making his exit. In his dazed condition he forgot that his children were away and rushed back into the burning house to find them. This time he had to make his escape through a window and was somewhat burned and cut in getting out.

The alarm was sounded and many hurried to the scent of the fire but the flames had gained such headway that nothing could be done. The only article saved was a hall rack. The house and contents were insured, but the insurance will not nearly cover the loss.

Britain Will Not Repudiate War Debts Declares Chancellor.

LONDON, Dec. 29.— Great Britain will not repudiate her war debt, declares A. Bonar Law, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in an open letter which he has caused to be published, and in which he denounces rumours that the country would fail to meet some of the liabilities incurred in the war. In his letter the Chancellor states:

"I should like to state, and state as strongly as I can, that, in my opinion, no British Government, present or future, will seek to break faith with those who have placed their financial resources at the disposal of the State in this crisis of its history. Such a policy would not only mean that the Government of the United Kingdom was in the hands of men who were blind to all considerations of national honour, but would, be the financial policy of the British Government after the war, I am certain of this, that any discrimination there may be will not be in favour of those who have withheld their money from the State at a time when its needs were greatest."

August Rains Spoil The Crops

The food crisis in Belgium is again serious, and the population faces Christmas with the knowledge that even the potato crop is a practical failure, on account of the persistent rains in August. It is stated in official reports that the injuries to the crop are even greater than was at first thought, and the infection is not local to one region, but affects the late potato crop throughout the whole country. In Ardennes, where the soil is particularly favourable to these crops, and great crops were expected, the harvest will be more than the children of Belgium—the children of those soldiers who in checking the Hun in his first mad rush across Belgium, saved the civilized world from sudden disaster.

In the midst of our own Christmas festivities, we, in Canada, should draw face to face with our duty to those Belgan children.

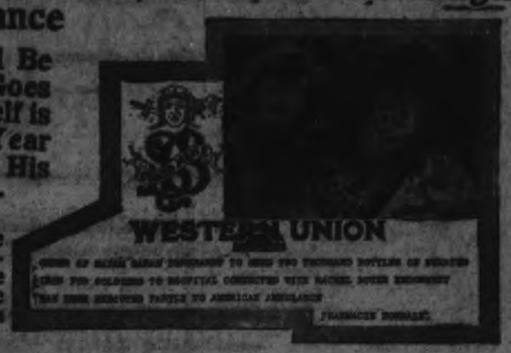
Sends Nuxated Iron

To the French Soldiers to Help Give Them Strength Power and Endurance

General Gibson Says it Should Be Used by Every Soldier Who Goes To The Front—That He Himself is Hale and Hearty in His 91st Year He Attributes Largely To His Recent Use of Nuxated Iron---



Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital, Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr and others give valuable advice and information on the use of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder.

What every soldier most needs is tremendous "stay there" strength, power, and endurance, with nerves of steel and blood of iron. To produce this result there is nothing in our knowledge which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron, says Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physican in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner. A large quantity of this valuable product was sent to the French soldiers by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. I took Nuxated Iron myself to build me up after a serious case of nervous exhaustion. The effects were apparent after a few days and within three weeks it had virtually revitalized my whole system and put me in a superb physical condition.

If General Gibson's advice were followed and every soldier who goes to the front carried a package of Nuxated Iron in his kit, I am sure that the men would not only be better, stronger fighters, but that we would have far less sickness in the Army and much less work for the Red Cross and Army Hospitals to do. Time and again I have prescribed organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and surprised patients at the rapidity with which the weakness and general debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality.

General Horatio Gates Gibson says Nuxated Iron has brought back to him in good measure that old buoyancy and energy that filled his veins in 1847 when he made his triumphant entry with General Scott into the City of Mexico and that he attributes the fact that he is hale and hearty in his 91st year, after an active military life with service in both the Mexican and Civil Wars largely to his recent use of this wonderful product.

Another remarkable case is that of General David Stuart Gordon, noted Indian fighter and hero of the battle of Gettysburg. General Gordon says: "When I became badly run down this year, I found myself totally without the physical power to 'come back' as I had done in my younger days. I tried different so-called tonics without feeling any better, but finally I heard of how physicians were widely recommending organic iron to renew red blood and rebuild strength, and made up my mind to try Nuxated Iron. It is really astonishing how Nuxated Iron did within a month to lend tone to my weakened vital forces and make me feel strong again, giving me an endurance such as I never hoped to again possess."

Former Health Commissioner of Chicago, Wm. R. Kerr, said: "As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago, I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy. But in the case of Nuxated Iron, I feel an exception should be made to the rule. From my own experience with it, I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it."

Dr. E. Saner, a Boston physician, who has studied both in this country and great European Medical Institutions, said: Nuxated Iron is a wonderful remedy. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty, and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking Iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 39 he was in bad health—at 45 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run-down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants, and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they would ward off diseases, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases, and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. If your are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is so strongly endorsed by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, the world's most noted actress, and which has been used with such surprising results by Generals Gibson and Gordon, and former Health Commissioner Kerr of Chicago, and which is prescribed and recommended by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the other inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Keeping Fit: It is almost impossible to over emphasize the importance of keeping well at the present time. The number of physicians available for your care has already been reduced by the war 20 per cent., and all of the physically fit students at the medical colleges will be called to serve the fighting forces. Stupendous and vital changes in our regular dietary have already been made, and while nearly all of the changes so far recommended by the government have been decidedly in favor of increased health yet there are many people who do not yet know how to make the changes so as to maintain a well balanced supply of nutrient matter for their bodies and especially for the children.

There are people, I am sorry to say, who live for themselves alone. They are of the kind that have no children, or having them, that lay by an oversupply of all kinds of the very foods that it is necessary for us to send to our allies and to our brave boys in Europe. They over eat, and cease not to waste. With such I have no patience and the sooner they gorge themselves to the lethal point the better for humanity in general.

One thing that is more important than all others in the fight to maintain the physical well being of the race is the health of the children. They must be well nourished. Now, to most people the meaning of well-nourished is to eat a large quantity of food but this is an entirely mistaken idea. Many children would be better nourished with a generous bowl of whole milk and whole wheat or oatmeal porridge for their supper than with a heavy meal of various meats, vegetables, fruits, pastries and ice cream, such as many of them are fed.

All children under ten years should have their supper before six o'clock and should be in bed and asleep before eight p.m., and they should be allowed to sleep if they will until at least seven in the next morning. If this rule is followed and the child is well nourished and not over fed it will grow rapidly, be strong, vigorous, active, good natured and usually free from colds and not very susceptible to children's diseases.

We are asked by the food control department to observe one wheatless and two red meatless as well as one porkless day each week. The porkless days should include pork products or lard. Many families would be far better off if they would make all of their days porkless and at least half of their days wheatless and meatless. At this time no person in average good health should eat meat oftener than once each day. A person doing hard physical labor needs a substitute that will give him the equivalent of the meat, and this he can easily have and at less cost while at the same time his general health will be improved by the change.

A generous dish of cottage cheese, with a little cream, a free dash of red pepper and a little salt, will be just as appetizing and fully as nourishing as an ordinary portion of beef steak.

It has been noted by English travellers in the far East that the Bedouins, clean limbed, good size and with no protruding abdomens, were capable of far greater muscular endurance and entire freedom from any kind of sickness that so frequently attacked their own countrymen; would undertake a long journey with a heavy load, and his only food supply would consist of dried dates, olives, nuts and black bread made from the meal of grains ground by the women with a smooth round stone in the hollow of another and larger stone.

When the mind does not control the appetite and properly select the food, there is usually developed in the alimentary canal a fermentation process instead of a digestion process, and the result of fermentation is always an acid and a gas. You who are thinkers and reasonable human beings, will from that simple hint correct your own diet when you find that you are troubled with gas and cannot seem to get rid of it by the medicine route.

Quit eating so much; leave some for those that are starving, and you will not need so much medicine. In my next article I will tell you about food combinations that will be good for the meatless days and at another time for the wheatless days.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication, if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with four cents in postage.

Dear Doctor: I wrote you some time ago about my stomach trouble, and how badly I was troubled with gas. I at once adopted the directions you gave me for my diet and was better, but I did not tell you all about my case. The gas still troubles me and there is a burning sensation in the stomach, especially if I get the least hungry. If I eat only a crust of bread the burning stops for the time being. My tongue is coated white, and has deep cracks in it. I belch great quantities of gas. For the last few weeks I have steadily gone down in weight and am beginning to grow weak. Please tell me plainly what you think is the cause of this and I will do just as you tell me to do to overcome it.—N.E.J.

(Answer): The description which you have now given me is entirely different from that given in your previous letter. I judge from this that you are suffering with an ulcer of the stomach and unless you promptly adopt the method of home treatment and diet which I have directed in a private letter you are liable to become a victim of cancer of the stomach. If you were to consult a surgeon he would no doubt order an operation. This might cure you because it would enforce a complete fast both before and after the operation. This would be of such great benefit that you would probably recover in spite of the handicap of the anaesthetic and cutting.

I think, however, that if you follow instructions you are certain of a cure and you should then remember that the diet that makes a sick man well will frequently keep a well man well. For immediate relief procure a few ounces of slippery elm bark. Make a tea by soaking a tablespoonful of small pieces in a teacup of cold water, let it stand a few hours and drink a cupful of the water three times daily. Swallow the juice but not the pulp. Write me again after following full directions for a week. You need our Nature Cure Cook Book and also Medicinal Plants and how to Use them.

NEW RECRUITING METHODS

The cursory examinations which many recruits allege they received in the earlier days of the war were far greater tests of endurance and stamina than the result of fifty years ago was wont to receive. In those days if a man could count all his limbs and had sufficient teeth to enable him to crunch the hard army biscuits and salt beef, or bite off the end of a cartridge before putting it into his old brown Bess, he was certain of being accepted.

In earlier times, however, there was no pretence at medical examination at all. When Queen Elizabeth resolved to assist in raising the siege of Calais in 1596 the Lord Mayor and aldermen of London received instructions to raise a thousand men for this service, and on Easter Sunday they proceeded to several churches with their constables, fastened the doors and selected from the congregation the number of men required. Without any medical examination they were equipped and sent to Dover.—Tit-Bits.

AN ITALIAN FROM GLASGOW.

The Times (Correspondence: It was in these trenches that I met the most extraordinary Italian I have yet found on the front. Imagine that you have before you a picturesque fellow with alert, flashing eyes, dark oval face, glossy black hair—the typical Italian of grand opera or the Sicilian vendetta—and that he suddenly addresses you in the broadest Lowland Scottish. That was the remarkable combination I met to-day in a sniper's post among the willows on the bank of the Piave. For seventeen years he had kept an ice-cream shop in Bellfield street, Dennistoun, Glasgow, and he had a command of the North British tongue almost the equal of Harry Lauder's.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. EVERYDAY READING

A friend of mine asked me to answer the question: "What do I know of God?" He wished me not to answer it in a hurry, but with due thought and consideration. I understood he desired a statement of my own personal knowledge of God. The Scriptures say: "The fool has said in his heart, there is no God." This statement would infer that the person who says "there is no God" has not taken trouble to thoroughly seek to know God. Drummond says: "the existence of God" no man can can prove by reason. Man's reasoning powers are not the only, nor yet the highest, power he is possessed of. While man cannot get acquainted with God by any mental faculty, he can know Him by some other personal power or faculty. God is a Spirit and they who would know Him, must know Him through His spirit. It is a pleasing fact, known to those who know God, that God takes the initiative move in man getting to know God. When I was about sixteen years of age, outside of any mental operations, apart from any previous teaching, and independent of any act of seeing or hearing by those faculties, I received a message of loving entreaty to be a Christian, or, in other words, to take the way of righteousness from some outside personality. The invitation was given so kindly and lovingly that I could not attribute it to an evil personality. This voice, or Spirit communication to my spirit came to me so lovingly and entreated me so kindly to take the way of righteousness that I had the consciousness that some good personality was appealing to my personality. I foolishly, ignorantly and wickedly did not heed that loving call, which is the one great standing regret of my life. In later years Jesus was lifted up before my gaze as a Saviour from sin. Those who lifted up Jesus said He would save me from sin, for He had done it for them. Again I heard the loving, drawing call, similar to the call in early life. Again I failed to heed that loving call, and turned my attention to proving creed and theory in regard to God and His will concerning me. Then, realizing I could not get any answer to my questionings, in my helplessness, I cried unto God (How? My Spirit cried out to the Great Spirit). O God I do not know anything about it, tell me what to do, and I quit all mental effort to solve the mystery. Within twenty-four hours the answer came to my spirit clearly and unmistakably. I wish I did not have to record what immediately followed. Instead of falling in line with the Divine direction and finding assurance and rest, I was so wedded to religious associations that I failed to shake myself free and heed the loving, instructive call. It was again a case of disobedience. This time against clear light. Through not walking in the unclouded light given, I drifted rapidly and deeply into a state of extreme doubt. In this dense wilderness of doubt, doubting everything of a religious character, I cried out "lost," as one in a forest would cry out (who was lost) not knowing of any one to hear and possibly with very litle hope of any one hearing. Immediately God heard my cry and showed me the way out. In response to the instruction given and then walking in the light previously received, I found out for myself that the Spirit's revelation to my spirit was real and true; I found out by personal testing of the grace of God, that Jesus saves from sin. The Spirit has been teaching and leading me from the time I surrendered to Jesus until now. I found out for myself that "like as a father lovingly cares for his child" so God cares for those who trust in Him. I also found out that to serve God was not a hardship. I also know that His way excels man's way so much that I cannot describe it. I have found out that the Divine energy in man is exceedingly better than human energy, no matter how much sacrifice we may make. The way of obedience to the Spirit is better than all manner of so-called Christian activity. I know God not only as a Saviour from sin, but as a liberator from doubt, fear and slavish bondage. I know Him as a Comforter, giving joy in the place of mourning. I know Him as an abundant giver; I know Him as the hearer of prayer; I know Him as one that satisfies; I know Him as abundant in mercy. I know His love, condescension, mercy, and goodness to me is so great I cannot fathom it. I know Him, wonder of wonders, that He uses the weak and foolish in accomplishing His purposes of love and mercy. I know I love Him. I know I cannot tell all I know of God. My friend will excuse me publicly, answering the question put to me, as I have not mentioned any names. My answer may come as answer to some one else's questioning.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Warning

Was It Given by Auto-suggestion or an Unexplained Spiritual Power?

By Alan Hinsdale

Captain Gifford, commanding the good ship Nautilus, stood on the porch of his land home overlooking the Atlantic ocean, his wife clinging to him, loath to let him go. The captain had sailed several times before since his marriage, but not dreading any peril except what has pertained to a sailor's life from time immemorial. But now he was to face a new danger, a danger compared with which storm or sunken rock was far less dreadful, for a storm may be weathered and a sunken rock may be avoided. Gifford was to face the dreaded submarine.

This is why his wife parted with him so much more reluctantly than ever before.

"Don't worry about me, sweetheart," he said. "We have a gun forward and a gun aft and an ensign in the navy commanding a crew of trained gunners. We shall keep vigilant watch by day for submarines, and at night not a light will be allowed aboard the ship. I venture to say that we will have as good a chance as any submarine that may attack us."

"That is but one chance in two," replied the despondent wife.

"No; I believe we shall have a great advantage over the submarine. We shall enter the restricted zone when there is no moonshine, and, not showing a light, I do not believe we shall be in danger of attack at night. As for an encounter in the day, by keeping incessant watch we will get the first shot, for the submarine to get our bearings must do so from the surface. If we put one shot into her she is lost, and our gunners are very quick and very skilful. Then, too, she must attack us when we present a broadside to her, and we may show either stern or bow. If the stern, we may run away from her; if the bow, we may ram her. There will be no need for us to put our prow against her but once, for she will roll over and go to the bottom. But remember this—we may not see a submarine."

"But suppose she sees you before you see her and has time to send a shot at you before your gunners are ready to fire."

"Don't worry about that, my dear. We shall always be on the alert. From the first light of dawn to the closing in of night our lookout and our gunners will keep their eyes peeled for them."

It was with such hopeful assurances that the captain sought to comfort his wife. Finally she released him, and he started for his ship.

The Nautilus passed through the danger zone safely. Not even the tip of a periscope was seen above the surface of the water. Captain Gifford on entering forbidden waters followed rigidly the course laid down for him by the British admiralty, and it was to this fact that he owed his safety. The crew and the gun squad were of opinion that all a ship need do to escape being sunk in the danger zone was to adhere to instructions. They heard of ships being torpedoed by disregarding them, but not of ships being wrecked that observed them.

It was to this opinion that was due some laxity on the return voyage. Captain Gifford did all he could to counteract this disposition, constantly watching the men for breach of the rigid system of attention to duty he had instituted. He found the work very wearing, and the night his ship was leaving the zone, having been long without sleep, he turned in for a brief rest.

It was about three bells in the morning that the captain awoke. He was astonished to see his cabin faintly illuminated and horrified as well, for he had given the strictest orders that no light was to be allowed on the ship, and here was light in his own cabin. But this was not all that amazed the captain. His wife was standing beside his berth.

"Great heavens, Lucy," he exclaimed, "how did you come here?"

"There is a submarine a few miles distant. When day comes and your ship will be visible you will be in danger."

Now, the captain had been so profoundly sunken in sleep that he saw this scene but half awake. By the time he had become fully aroused the illumination of his cabin had faded, as well as the figure of his wife. Naturally he ascribed his vision to nightmare induced by his mind being absorbed in the danger through which his ship was passing. It was yet several hours before day, but so vivid was his dream, or whatever it was, that he arose—he was in his clothing—and went on deck to see if the watch were doing their duty. The sailors were alert, but the men on duty at the guns were dozing.

While Captain Gifford regarded the vision as the creation of his own brain, he had a feeling within him that it was a real warning of danger. At any rate, it served as such. He ordered every man on deck and instructed the officer commanding the gunners to have a man at the breech of each gun, ready to fire instantly on sight of an enemy. It was still dark, the sky covered with clouds, and nothing would be discernable for more than an hour. During the interval the eyes of every man on the ship were peering in different directions, taking in the whole periphery of the ocean, ready at the first glimmer of dawn to see an enemy if one appeared.

But the heavens above were black and the ocean beneath was black. If a periscope were raised above the surface it would not have been seen. The ship was painted a dark lead color, which rendered it invisible against the sky.

Then the clouds to the eastward became a trifle lighter than at the other points of the compass, and slowly the dawn began to make sky and ocean visible.

At eight bells—the bell was not struck—a man in the rigging cried out:

"Submarine on the port bow half a mile away!"

Ten seconds later the forward gun of the Nautilus boomed. The shot flew above the water and ricocheted when some thirty yards from the submarine, passing clean over her deck, which was but a few feet above the surface.

The submarine dived. It was probable that she had been taken by surprise, but must have got the bearings of the Nautilus. Within two or three minutes a torpedo came through the water a few feet beneath the surface. It would have struck the ship in the stern had not Captain Gifford given an order to put the helm hard down, which was turning the ship to sail in a circle about the submarine. This had moved the stern away from the line of the torpedo.

Captain Gifford, having moved from the position he was in when the submarine had him sighted, believed that it would be necessary for it to rise again before she could locate his ship. He kept his course till he had completed a semicircle, when the periscope of his enemy appeared about 1,000 yards dead ahead. The marksman at the bow gun was very quick in sending a shot at her. Whether the shot hit her or not was problematical, for instead of completing a rise to the surface she went under.

Captain Gifford concluded that if she had not been disabled she would send another torpedo to him or rise to get a better sight of his location. He concluded that it would be safer to keep right on his course toward her. If he turned he must expose a broadside, whereas by heading for her he would expose only his narrow bow and might have an opportunity to ram her. A ripple in the water a cable's length from the ship on the starboard side and running parallel with it indicated that the enemy had risked a shot, but had gone wide of the mark.

The Nautilus kept on her course on a guess that she was making for the submarine, the bow gunner ready to send a shot the moment the periscope of the enemy showed itself. It did not show itself, however, till the Nautilus was within a few yards of it. There was a bump, and those on the bow of the Nautilus saw a sharklike body roll on its side, turn turtle and disappear.

A shout went up from the Nautilus' crew, for all knew that they and their ship were saved. In the ship's wake the surface of the water was covered with oil, indicating that the submarine would no longer trouble them.

However, being still on the verge of the danger zone, Captain Gifford kept a strict watch during the day, and when night fell the Nautilus mingled with the gloom, not a light being seen on her.

When Captain Gifford passed to safe sailing his mind naturally reverted to his waking in the night and his warning vision. Since the warning had undoubtedly saved his ship and its crew, he could not consider it a nightmare or a dream. His wife's face and figure, a look of terror in her eyes, were vivid, while her warning words still sounded in his ears. At the same time the captain was not naturally disposed to refer the matter to any cause except his own presentiment. He finally settled down to this view, believing the presence of the submarine near his ship and his dream, or whatever it was, coincidences.

When the captain reached home he found his wife's nerves much broken down, so much so that he did not for a time refer to his narrow escape. He asked her why she had worried herself into so deplorable a condition, and she replied that one night she was seized with a foreboding that a submarine was lurking near the Nautilus and at soon as dawn appeared would undoubtedly attack the vessel. An overweening desire asked her to warn her husband. She then passed into a trance. She seemed to be flying over the ocean at night, reached the Nautilus, saw the drowsy gunners and passed down into her husband's cabin, where she warned him of his danger. When she awoke in the morning her nerves were unhinged and had remained so ever since.

This information staggered the captain's rational view of his warning. That he had produced it by anxiety, that his wife should have produced the complement of his part in the matter also by anxiety, did not serve to fulfill the conditions of a warning dream or autosuggestion. Furthermore, the warning proved to have been needed. Without it the Nautilus would doubtless have been sunk by the submarine.

When Mrs. Gifford recovered her health her husband told her his part of the story. Since then there are two opinions of the matter in the Gifford family. Captain Gifford attributes the warning to autosuggestion and coincidence. His wife believes that she was endowed with power to know of his danger and to go and warn him. Both have their adherents.

But, granting this, how did she get? Surely it will not be admitted that her body was transported over several thousand miles, and that without her being conscious of it. But the soul! If it is a soul it is not material. And why should not a soul move as well as wireless electricity?

VICTORY LOAN

Payments due on January the 2nd may be made at any time to and including January the 11th. Scrip Certificates will be delivered in exchange for payments then due. Payments due January the 2nd must be made at the Bank branch mentioned in the application.

The extension of time to January the 11th is given for the convenience of subscribers and Banks so that subscribers will not be unduly detained waiting their turn at a Receiving Teller's wicket, as would most likely be the case if all payments had to be made on one day only. Subscribers should not wait until January the 11th, or a day or so before, and thus create the situation sought to be avoided. In every case, interest at the rate of five and one half per cent per annum from January the 2nd must be paid if payment is not made on or before the 11th.

For the convenience of subscribers, by arrangement of the Canadian Bankers' Association, Banks will remain open on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, January 3rd and 4th, and on the afternoon of Saturday, January the 5th. Evening hours 7.30 to 9.30. Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

It has been brought to the attention of the Finance Department that a considerable number of subscribers, who have deposits with Banks, are under the impression that their Banks will take care of their January payments by automatically debiting their accounts with the necessary payments. This is incorrect. Each and every subscriber must personally arrange for these payments.

STILLED THE BATTLE.

A Touch of Nature That Halted War's Carnage For a Moment.

A day was dawning on a battlefield in northern France through a fog so thick that none could see more than a few yards. The Germans had drawn back their lines a little, and the French had silently advanced, but between the two positions a lone farmhouse was still standing. As the sun rose and the fog cleared and the gunners dismal their ranges, heavy guns began to boom and answer back. Thus began the old, old wearisome story of day after day of desolation and death.

But suddenly on both sides the firing ceased, and there fell a peculiar dead stillness. Midway between the trenches, near the now shattered farmhouse, there was—no, it must be impossible, it must be a delusion! But, no—there in the green meadow, crawling on its hands and knees, was a little child, a mere baby. It appeared perfectly happy and contented, and in the sudden dumbness of the soldiers the baby's laugh was heard as it clutched at a dandelion. Not a sound was heard but that; not a shot was fired; scarcely did a soldier on either side dare breathe.

Suddenly a soldier jumped out of a German trench and ran to where the child was crawling. He tenderly took it up and carried it back to shelter. From the trenches of the French there came no shots, but there rang along both lines a mighty cheer.

But soon, alas, the guns were booming again and answering back, and the flowering bit of meadow was plowed by shells, for war is war, and men must not long yield to pity.

TICKET SPECULATORS.

Their Trade Was Really Started by Dumas and His Barber.

The practice of speculating in theater tickets, strange as it may appear, was started by the elder Dumas. He patronized a Paris barber named Porcher, and one day this worthy while shaving the novelist asked him why he did not sell the tickets given him by the managers of the theaters where his plays were produced.

"To whom could I sell them?" asked the author of the "Three Musketeers."

"Why, to me, if you like," replied Porcher.

"And what would you do with them?" asked Dumas. "That's my business," replied the barber, continuing to lather the bronzed face of the famous story teller.

"But I give you tickets whenever you ask for them," said Dumas. "Ah, one or two are not sufficient for my purpose," responded Porcher. "I must have all your tickets and every day too." "And you will pay for them?" said the dramatist. "Cash," was the simple yet practical reply.

Dumas at that moment was very badly in need of money, so he at once concluded the bargain. Porcher, who shortly after this gave up shaving and cutting hair, made similar bargains with other authors and quickly became rich.

Turner Had His Way.

The late J. M. W. Turner, one of England's most famous artists, served for some time on the hanging committee of the Royal academy, and one day when he strode into the picture rooms he was struck by a picture sent in by an unknown provincial artist of the name of Bird. Turner took it into his hands and examined it this way and that. "A fine work!" he exclaimed. "It must be hung up and exhibited."

"Impossible," responded the other members of the committee. "The walls are full, and the arrangements cannot be disturbed."

"A fine work," repeated Turner. "It must be hung up and exhibited." And, finding his colleagues to be as obstinate as himself, he placed down one of his own pictures and hung up Bird's in its place.

THIS MAN IS SHORT.

He Hasn't Got His Full "Per Capita," and He Thinks He Needs It.

According to the latest population figures with reference to the money in circulation in this country, every man, woman and child in the United States should have $43 in his, her or its jeans.

Have you got yours?

I haven't got mine.

It occurs to me that when the fact becomes generally known that I haven't got mine some "per capita" who discovers that he has considerably more ready cash in his pockets than he ought to have according to this division of funds will split with me so that I will have my normal quota of dollars.

All I need in order to have my $43 is $37.50.

No hurry about it, of course, but the sooner somebody remits me this $37.50 the more grateful I will be. There is really no necessity that I can see of delaying or postponing such a little matter as this. By a rapid mental arithmetical calculation it will readily be seen that I now have $5.50 of the $43 needed, and before I have spent any portion of this $5.50 it would be well for somebody to make up the deficit of $37.50, otherwise the deficit is liable to be more.—Newton Newkirk in Boston Post.

PHOTOGRAPHS ON WOOD.

An Easy Method by Which the Prints May Be Transferred.

A method of transferring pictures to wood is given in the Electrical Experimenter by V. C. McIlvaine, as follows:

Dissolve salt in soft water, float your photo print on the surface picture side up; let it remain about an hour. The wood should be of birdseye maple or other light colored hardwood, which should be varnished with the best copal or transfer varnish.

Take the picture from the water, dry a little between linen rags; then put the engraving, picture side down, on the varnished wood and smooth it nicely. If the picture entirely covers the wood after the margin is cut off so that no varnish is exposed lay over it a thin board and heavy weight; leave it thus over night. If you wish but a small picture in the center of the wood spoil the varnish only to a space the size of the picture.

When ready to complete your work the next day dip your forefinger in salt and water and commence rubbing off the paper. The nearer you come to the picture the more careful you must be, as a hole would spoil your work.

The First American Play.

Harvard college produced the first American playwright in Royall Tyler, a graduate of 1776. His comedy, "The Contrast," was the first original play acted in this country, and it was produced at the old John Street theater in New York. The first subscriber was George Washington, then president of the United States. The country found that to "The Contrast," on a visit to

A Valuable Tree.

Besides the nuts used in confectionery the Indian cashew tree yields an insect-repelling gum, a juice that makes indelible ink and three kinds of oil, one edible, the other used to tan fishing nets and preserve wood.

How Butterflies Sleep.

The butterfly, like the bat, invariably goes to sleep head downwards, its eyes looking straight down the stem of the grass on which it rests. It folds its wings to the utmost, and thus protects its body from the cold.

Fashion Authorizes Martial Styles

Hats and Boots Follow Suit

ORIENTAL INFLUENCES

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Last Spring there was a perfect epidemic of military styles, capes, collars, brass buttons, and so forth, and then the summer fashions were the softest, frilliest frills possible to organdies and mulls and that prime favourite, gingham. Now we are having more military costumes, saner they are too, and seemingly more subtle in their resemblance to the uniforms and other toggery of the men.

Never have brown, army drab, khaki colour and navy blue been so much used. Gilt braid, too, abounds on the frocks for afternoon, the most severely plain of all the coat-dresses having a touch of miltarism that makes the fashion world akin to the real world. High boots in the lovely mahogany-brown or lighter tan have wide military heels and there are whispers that woolen stockings, oh, fine, soft, lovely woolen stockings are replacing the cobwebby silk ones.

As to hats, they, too are quite martial. One may wear the wide-brimmed peaked, crowned service-hat without any feminine details to disguise it. One may have a cocky little hat (or cap, as you will) borrowed from the boys, with wings. One may wear the drooping cock feathers of the Italian officer or a velvet hat shaped like the cap of the French lieutenant. In fact one may wear what one pleases as long as the chosen headpiece be becoming. Trim they are, too, and very fetching, worn at the right angle, with the proper amount of coquetry, but woe to the unwitting damsel with the high pompadour who perches a Tipperary hat on the tip-top of her hair! The result is ridiculous.

OF MILITARY SIMPLICITY

ORIENTAL INFLUENCES.

There are reports of other sources for styles than Paris. The Orient, with its bewildering array of things mysteriously beautiful, sends us rare colour combinations, unusual embroideries and hand-woven materials that are not made elsewhere. One famous house here in New York has sent its buyers to China, Japan and India instead of to Paris, and we can look for some very interesting developments along fashion lines. Of course, now we have the mandarin coat, and other Chinese and Japanese garments occidentalized for our benefit. There seems to be a wave of colour worship going broadcast over the land, and everywhere one hears the remark, "I don't care how simple it is, or how little trimming you put on it, you will just make it beautiful of line and colour." After all, that is the true beauty in dress, as in everything else.

CHARM IN SIMPLICITY.

Just a suggestion for the every-day dress, the dress you must wear for "work or play," is illustrated here. The lines are very good. The high rolling collar and long tight sleeves bespeak a businesslike attitude. Of course there are buttons, giving a smart double-breated effect, and the arrangement of the belt is most unusual. Her hat belongs to the times, for it is an aviator's cap, made of the same material as the dress.

You can have a wealth of Beautiful Hair

Nothing equals an aureole of beautiful hair as a frame for a pretty face. Without a background of nice hair a really pretty face frequently becomes plain but, with it, unattractive features assume life and beauty.

Every woman can increase her natural charm by using Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide makes hair beautiful. Dandruff saps the vitality of the hair. Herpicide applied intelligently and regularly, checks this destruction of hair life and prevents the hair from falling out, giving it a snap and luster, a soft silky fluffiness which can be acquired in no other way.

LOGICAL DYSPEPSIA TREATMENT

Importance of Eliminating Acidity and Food Fermentation.

During the past two or three years reports have frequently appeared in the Press concerning the remarkable value of bisurated magnesia as an antacid; and its ability to promote normal, healthy digestion by preventing food fermentation and neutralizing dangerous stomach acid has often been demonstrated. Until recently druggists could supply bisurated magnesia in powder form only, from one to two teaspoonfuls of which, taken in a little water after meals, almost instantly stops all fermentation and neutralizes acid, but sufferers from stomach trouble will be glad to learn that, after a long series of experiments, a leading firm of manufacturing druggists has now succeeded in producing a 5 grain tablet which combines all the valuable antacid properties of the ordinary bisurated magnesia in a very convenient form. This new tablet of bisurated magnesia can now be obtained of druggists everywhere and many physicians are already prescribing them instead of the powder form.

30,000 CHINESE ARE COMING TO CANADA

MOST RETURNING FROM VISIT TO THEIR HOME—HEAD TAX WILL NOT BE IMPOSED.

Ottawa, December 29. — A report from Vancouver that the head tax is to be raised on 30,000 Chinese coming to British Columbia, is given official denial here. No such action has been taken by the government or discussed by the cabinet up to the present time it is asserted. The report is probably due to the circumstance that a considerable number of Chinese are now en route to the Pacific Coast, who, after residing in Canada for a while, returned home for a visit, and were detained there because of the lack of shipping facilities. They were unable to secure passage back to Canada because the steamers sailing from the Orient were fully occupied in carrying war supplies. Recently the steamship companies made special arrangements to bring them back. As they are all Chinese who have paid their head tax there will be no question about their re-admission to the country.

Cold Weather Stops Fighting In the West

ANOTHER BIG BRITISH VICTORY IN PALESTINE

General Allenby's Forces Repulse Turkish Attacks and Then Advance to a Depth of Two and a Half Miles on a Front of Nine Miles North of Jerusalem---Cold Weather in France Interferes With Operations.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, December 28.—The British troops in Palestine have repulsed a Turkish attack north and northwest of Jerusalem, and made an advance of about two and one-half miles on a front of nine miles along the Turkish right flank, says an official communication issued to-day.

The Turks suffered severe losses in the repulse, which came after the British pickets had been driven in.

TEXT OF THE STATEMENT.

The text of the communication follows:

"During Wednesday night four attacks were made by the enemy on our pickets at Ras El Tawil, three and one-half miles north of Jerusalem, and east of Bir Nebala, five miles northwest of Jerusalem. The pickets were driven in, and several determined attacks followed, all of which were repulsed without loss of ground.

"At Tham our troops on the left attacked against the right flank of the Turkish attack, and gained ground east and northeast, penetrating to about two and one-half miles on a frontage of nine miles. The attack of the enemy was made with very great determination, and his losses were proportionately severe.

"The British troops, both in defence and attack, showed the utmost gallantry and staunchness. Some German prisoners were taken.

"Our flying corps effectively attacked in the vicinity of Kulundria, six miles north of Jerusalem, enemy troops and transport with bombs and machine-gun fire."

TURKS HAVE BEEN HEAVILY REINFORCED

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, December 29.—Four Turkish army divisions—upwards of 60,000 men—reinforced by Austro-German troops from the Russian and Roumanian fronts, have begun a desperate campaign to retake Jerusalem and drive the British from the Holyland, according to official reports reaching Washington to-day. Heavy fighting is in progress over a line extending from Jaffa through Jerusalem and along the Jericho Road, almost to the River Jordan. The Turks vainly attempted to break the British grip on the Jaffa-Jerusalem Road. Abortive efforts to turn the British flank in the neighbourhood of Bethany, northeast of Jerusalem failed. At some points along the line General Allenby's expeditionary force is outnumbered two to one, according to official reports. He is making a determined stand against General Falkenhayn's combined Turko-Austro-German divisions.

Cold Weather On The British Front

(By William Philip, Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, December 29. — Winter's cold has practically frozen up all fighting on the British front. With the lines buried under snow to-day, and the thermometer far below freezing, there was no chance for fighting. The Germans heavily shelled British trenches near Bullecourt and southwest of Bourlonya. Later the Homoge sector was the object of a gas-shell attack at 9:30 p.m. Still later in the night the Germans sent a brief barrage fire north of Poelcappelle. The shells started flying about 1:15 a.m. and continued for about a half hour. Everywhere back of the fighting lines the Tommies were enjoying themselves to-day in skating and other winter sports.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, December 29.—There was nothing to report last night with the exception of a patrol encounter north of the Chemin-des-Dames and near Sapigneul, says to-day's official statement.

French aviators last night bombarded the railway station at Naizieres-Les-Metz and Thienville, and German establishments in the vicinity of Vouzieres and Rethel.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, December 29.—An Italian attack against the Austro-German position on the heights east of Monte Tomba broke down yesterday under the fire of the Teutons, it was announced officially to-day by the German War Office as follows:

Italian Front — An Italian attack against the heights east of Monte Tomba broke down under our fire.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 29.—A Zeppelin and seaplane, which was accompanying it, have been wrecked in the North Sea, according to a Central News despatch from Copenhagen, quoting advice received there from West Jutland. The Zeppelin is said to have fallen in flames to the sea.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, December 29.—King Ferdinand has abdicated the Roumanian throne in favour of Crown Prince Charles, according to persistent rumours in Petrograd. Official confirmation, however, is lacking.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 29.—There is nothing of special interest to report, says to-day's official communication.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, December 15 (by mail) — British prisoners held by the enemy including those in Switzerland, total 46,712, according to an official announcement.

FOUR FOE SUBS CAPTURED BY U. S. DESTROYERS

Undersea Boats Were Caught on the Surface During the Process of Recharging Their Batteries According to Boston Report

WITHOUT A FIGHT

Canadian Press Despatch:

BOSTON, Dec. 29. — Four German submarines were captured recently by twelve American destroyers, according to an American seaman who reached his home here from a French port. The seaman, a former Boston newspaper man, was aboard a troopship at the French port recently, he said, when the destroyers, all flying the Stars and Stripes, steamed in with their prizes.

The submersibles were lying upon the surface of the ocean with their conning towers open, during the process of recharging their batteries, when the American destroyers swept down upon them and took them prisoner without a fight.

While the transport was still at the French port, the seaman said, a German boat entered the harbour with a white flag flying from her periscope. The enemy crew explained that they had been lying in wait for the troop ship in the open sea, and that when they failed to find her, and the supplies ran low, the crew mutined, killed the commander and decided to surrender.

ESCAPES FROM JAIL

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Geo. Murrelles, of Ingersoll, who is known under half a dozen names, and who was a prisoner in the Middlesex county jail, sentenced on several charges of burglary, made his escape at 6 o'clock this morning. He knocked down the turnkey, who opened Murelles' cell door to allow the prisoner to exercise in the corridor.

Bank Manager Arrested By Bolsheviki

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—The State Department to-day announced the Bolsheviki arrest of Manager Bstens of the Petrograd branch of the National Bank of New York, with an accountant named Link. The two men were marched through the streets to the bank and there released. The bank, apparently, had been closed. No action will be taken by the State Department in view of the release.

Sunday School Entertainment at St. John's

St. John's annual Christmas Sunday School entertainment was held yesterday. The Primary scholars enjoyed themselves thoroughly in the afternoon, a capital programme having been arranged by Miss English—games, lantern slide pictures, supper—the good time being shared by seven of the children from the Shelter, in the care of Mrs. Read.

The evening was taken up by the Senior and Junior scholars, when a programme was thoroughly enjoyed. The scholars each brought presents for the Halifax children. The stage was beautifully decorated by Mr. R. J. Devey and the ladies of the Church Woman's Association.

Francoeur Motion Is Deplored

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 29.—L'Action Catholique of Quebec, which is the official organ of the Catholic clergy in Quebec city, deplores the fact that Mr. Francoeur presented his motion regarding the separation of Quebec from Confederation. It says, in part:

"What would happen, for instance, if the Canadian provinces were separated? Is it even possible to effect such a separation? Who would bear the charges of Canada as it is at present? Who would pay its debts? On what conditions could be retire from Confederation, and what would happen to us once we were out?"

"To break up Confederation were tantamount for us to enter into the unknown. It would be the same thing as making a pawn of our future and even of the future of groups of our nationality located outside of Quebec. It is quite clear that we can't decently stay in the Canadian family if we are to be looked upon as people whom it is desired to put out of Confederation at all costs. Furthermore it cannot be denied that of the five provinces which entered Confederation, Quebec has been the only one almost to stand by the agreements which were signed by all, the others along with her. In the words of Senator Landry, we can pride ourselves on the fact that we have looked upon the British North America Act as an agreement of honour. And we believe that all the other provinces strike their breasts and say that on more than one occasion they had looked upon it is a mere scrap of paper.

Cannot Arrest Peace Movement

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 29.—"The movement towards a general peace cannot be arrested," declared Dr. Erseberger, leader of the German minority Socialists, in an interview received today. Erseberger predicted a separate peace with Russia very soon.

CALLED TO WASHINGTON ON SERVICE

Mr. Ed. Cowles, of the C.G.E. staff, has been called to Washington, D.C., to enter the Radio Service Department.

RUSSO-GERMAN MANOEUVRES ARE DOOMED TO FAILURE

GERMAN DELEGATES AGREE TO PLEBISCITE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, December 29.—German delegates to the Brest-Litovsk peace conference were reported to-day as having privately agreed to a plebiscite to determine the future disposition of Alsace-Lorraine. Such a concession was not formally made in the announcement of terms outlined by Count Czernin, and the declaration that it had been covered in private conferences was regarded here as further evidence of a favourable step toward general peace. The Central Powers' reply in general caused a good impression here. Some observers declared that if the Bolsheviki convened the constituent assembly at this moment, their peace aspirations would probably be supported by a majority of this body—and this despite the fact that the Bolsheviki party is in a minority there. The admission of ten revolutionary socialists to the Bolsheviki government circle strengthened the Bolsheviki very greatly here to-day.

PAN GERMANIC PAPERS CONDEMN THE PEACE TERMS

Deutsche Zeitung Says German Diplomatics Have Destroyed All That Has Been Fought For by the German Armies

HUN PRESS COMMENT

Canadian Press Despatch:

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 29.—Pan-German newspapers angrily condemn the peace terms of the Central Powers.

The Taglische Rundschau, of Berlin says: "Never before have we given up so completely everything we so dearly bought with the blood of hundreds of thousands, with the sweat of millions, with deprivations of our children, with our own hunger."

The Deutsche Zeitung says that the Entente has won the greatest victory of the war and that the diplomats have destroyed all that has been fought for.

The Koelnishe Zeitung, on the other hand, regards the conditions as opening the road to peace advantageous to all sides.

The Lokal Anzeiger thinks that the German answer to Russia will not be much to the taste of people with military leanings, but adds: The outlines, however, are drawn wide enough to give scope for the demands of justice. Definite judgment upon peace work at Brest-Litovsky depends on how far this possibility is utilized in later negotiations.

COLD WAVE IS GENERAL

Canada from the Rockies to the Atlantic is Suffering

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 29.— All Canada, from the Rockies to the Atlantic, is in the grip of exceptionally severe zero weather to-day. Calgary, which yesterday reported 10 below zero, was a bit warmer spot this morning at 8 a.m., when the mercury stood at four above. The weatherman reports the cold wave moving east, but it will likely linger around Ontario and Quebec over Sunday. Winnipeg and Cobalt each reported temperatures of 32 below zero this morning, and White River, Ont., which rejoices in its record as the coldest spot in American civilization, was 43 below. Quebec province reported the temperature between twenty-eight and thirty below, while Ontario was considerably warmer, varying from sixteen below in Toronto to twenty-two below in Kingston and 27 below in Peterborough. In the Maritime provinces, Saint John, N.B., reported 14 below at 8 a.m., but suffering Halifax was being mercifully spared the extreme cold weather at that hour, when the temperature was reported 12 above.

MR. C. N. MESERVE RESIGNS FROM THE LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

General Secretary Has Accepted a Position as Associate General Secretary of Young Men's Christian Association in Lincoln Nebraska

WILL BE MISSED

Members of the Y.M.C.A. and citizens generally will learn with regret that Mr. C. N. Meserve, general secretary of the local Young Men's Christian Association, is leaving the city in the near future. Mr. Meserve yesterday presented his resignation to the local directors to take effect on 22nd January, in order to accept the associate general secretaryship of the Lincoln, Nebraska, U.S.A., Association, and will leave for that city with his family previous to 1st February. His oldest son Ralph will remain in Peterborough to complete his Collegiate course.

In his new sphere of activity Mr. Meserve will find plenty of scope for the energy and ability he has shown in Peterborough. Lincoln has a population of 60,000, and the Y.M.C.A. in that city a membership of 1,700. The employed staff of the Association there numbers ten men. The Association occupies a fine new building and on the 1st of February will dedicate another new building to be devoted exclusively to the High School boys.

The Association also owns a permanent summer camp, which is open for three months of the year, and during a part of the time is utilised as a State Boys' Camp.

Lincoln possesses a fine new city High School building, which cost $60,000. It is also the capital of the State and contains the University of Nebraska and three other educational institutions.

Mr. Meserve's first work at Lincoln will be to carry out the programme for the High School boys, but in view of the fact that the general secretary has asked to be released for overseas service his responsibility may soon be increased.

Mr. Meserve came to Peterborough from Kingston on 1st May, 1914. During his term at the head of the local Y.M.C.A. considerable progress has been made. The building has been remodelled according to plans drawn by Mr. Meserve himself, and as a result the building receipts have increased by more than $1,500 per year.

The Y.M.C.A. has nearly covered all of the Association liabilities up to 1st January, and is better equipped for service than ever before in its history.

Mrs. Meserve has been president of the Y.M.C.A. Mothers' Club for two years, and has personally supervised over seventy-five suppers, banquets, etc., for the Association. She will be greatly missed.

It is understood that the offer Mr. Meserve has accepted calls for $1,800 salary and $200 for moving expenses.

William Jennings Bryan is a member of the Board of Directors at Lincoln, and united in the unanimous call that was extended to Mr. Meserve.

Official Utterances in England, France and the United States Show That They Are Determined to Fight Until Victory is Won.

HUNS NOT PLEASED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Chas. D. Great.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—American authorities expect that Russia or Germany will make a definite move to get the Brest Litovisk peace proposals officially before the United States and the allies. If it comes from Russia it will probably be open and dispatched through diplomats at Petrograd. If it comes from Germany, a neutral convoy will doubtless be used, and overtures will be so presented as to permit Germany to deny them when they become known.

If Russia, as indicated, attempts to put a peace programme before the allies she will have two purposes, first, to aid Germany in getting a general, rather than a separate peace; and, second, to place the allies in a position where she hopes an answer carrying a recognition of Bolsheviki will be made. In either case, the manouevre is doomed to fail. England, France and the United States have definitely disposed of any Russian or German hope for a general peace at this time. Official utterances in all three nations show clearly that they are determined to fight on until Hohenzollernism is scotched. As for recognition of the Bolsheviki that is entirely out of the question now. The United States has carefully refrained from any utterances or action which would give ground for that regime to be considered even a defacto government, and it is banking on a reaction or revolution which will sweep Trotsky and his incendiary crew out of power.

Cantata Splendidly Rendered

Park St. Baptist Choir Make a Fine Impression.

The Nativity of Christ, the beautiful Christmas cantata presented last night by the talented and splendily trained members of the Park street Baptist church choir, was attended by a good audience, who braved the unusual weather.

Rev. Mr. Dougald Brown, who occupied the chair, explained the cantata as being a commemoration of the angels singing at the birth of Christ.

The Programme.

The anthem, "Christmas Awake," by the full choir, was exceptionally well rendered, and showed the result of careful and expert training.

Miss F. Nicholls, who possesses a voice of unusual sweetness, which admirably suited her solo, "Night of Nights." In the anthem, "Ring Christmas Bells," the solos were sung by Miss Nicholls, Mr. George Gladwin, Mr. Edward Pembworthy and Mr. Joseph Iredale, all of whom were heard to great advantage, having voices of unusual quality. Mr. Nicholls, organist of the church, acted as choirmaster and played the accompaniment to all the production. A recitation by Mrs. Nicholls was greatly enjoyed and indicated marked elocutionary talent.

At the conclusion of the entertainment Mr. Brown voiced the opinion of all that the cantata should be repeated soon under more favourable weather conditions.

Frank Jenne Says:

It was the big city department stores that benefited by the abolition of the old Canadian surtax on German goods. Like opium "made in Germany" wares were dangerously punk, but department stores could sell them to mail order customers for they looked just as good as the genuine in pictures. Try the feel of the British weave and Australian wool in my Semi-ready suits and you will always "Come to me."

MIGHT GO TOGETHER.

We are told that the Railway Commission has given the railways permission to increase rates. That seems to be reasonable. We know by experience that the price of getting everything and doing everything has greatly increased. If the railways justified their demand for power to increase rates, upon the increase in operating expenses, implied in increase of wages to employees and operatives corresponding to the increased cost of living, their demand would be more logical. Both increases logically go together.

Instalment payments on Victory Loans, due on January 2nd, may be made any time up to Jan. 11th; but the days of grace should not be abused.

THE ELECTIONS TUESDAY.

Though the municipal elections on Tuesday are deprived of a good deal of their excitement and interest by the acclamation election of Mayor and some aldermen, there are important matters, to challenge the judgment of the electors—three aldermen are to be elected, one each in Centre, East and South wards, respectively. For these only three-tenths of the ratepayers will have a chance to vote. But every ratepayer will have the privilege of voting for the five new mebers to be added to the Board of Education for the coming year.

Every elector will also have the privilege of voting to give himself a vote next year and succeeding years, for every member of the City Council—that is, to vote for or against the proposal to revert to the system of electing all the aldermen by general vote—as is now done in the case of the Mayor and members of the Board of Education—or to continue the present ward system which results in the ratepayers having the right to vote directly for only two out of the ten aldermen, that are to do the business of the ratepayers.

Again every elector, can, and should, vote on Tuesday to grant the request of the De Laval Company for the use of 40 feet of a street reservation, now unused and with no prospect of being put to any good use unless it is used by the company as a site for the election of new buildings, for which there is no room available on their present property.

The De Laval Company deserves well of Peterborough. It has more than kept faith in regard to its promised undertakings in consideration of the city granting it a site. It has erected much larger and handsomer factory buildings than it was expected to do, or bound to do under its agreement with the city. It has employed and is employing four times as many hands as its agreement called for. It is paying in wages $200,000 per year—every year ten times the amount of assistance given by the city. Though exempted from general taxation for ten years, it pays for school and special rates $2,000 per year. So that in this way alone, when the ten years of exemption expires the company will thus have repaid every cent of assistance, given by the city, not to speak of the two millions in wages that will have passed into the ready money circulation of the city in the ten-year period.

Peterborough has got a good name for dealing fairly and generously with its great industries; and we cannot afford to imperil our good name by taking a different attitude now.

Noblesse oblige. We are in honour bound to grant the request of the company for a building site that costs us nothing and will help it enlarge its business. It has more than kept faith with the city.

A revolution in the United States. King Coal has been deposed and his rather autocratic kingdom has come under the republican form of government.

A CENSOR WANTED.

If a censor is required in order to prevent the giving of publicity to matters that would help the enemy, and contribute to our defeat, or postpone victory, so much more is a censor needed in Canada to prevent Canada getting the benefit of a victory over the Huns.

We are fighting to save Canada, and are using every means to that end. There is, however, another fight to be waged to make and keep Canada worth living in, when it shall have been saved from the assault and menace of European militarism.

Canada, after having been saved, won't be worth the price, won't be worth living in, if it is made a divided country, without the harmony and good understanding, necessary to co-ordination of effort and cooperation in accomplishment, in turn necessary to bring the best conditions of citizenship and material progress.

We want a censor, because we have too much "wild-cat," visionary newspaper talk that is infinitely mischievous and discord-breeding. We talk glibly and thoughtlessly of "the priceless privilege of freedom of the press." But freedom of the press may easily be too much deferred to. No law, no constitutional condition, justifies abuse of privilege to the end of doing harm. Freedom of the press, freedom of speech, have their legitimate limitations.

Freedom of the press has degenerated into a distinct evil in Canada; and that is why we need a censor; if we cannot otherwise get newspapers to take a proper view of their duty and responsibility.

A day or two ago the papers received a press despatch, repeating a mischievous despatch from Ottawa to a Quebec journal. This despatch purported to emanate from Ottawa. It threatened commercial boycott of Ontario by Quebec. It was absurdly impossible, and was only the irresponsible vapourings of some sensational newspaper correspondent. It should never have been accepted by the journal in quqestion, and above all should not have been repeated by despatch and publication in Ontario newspapers.

Its tendency was only evil, and the republication in Ontario of such and similar matter in Quebec papers, is what does the evil, gives currency to irritating and unsettling sentiments.

Even a responsible newspaper like The Globe, reprints under the heading "Spirit of the Press," an excerpt from an obscure Quebec weekly, with a circulation of 1,500, an intemperate and mischief-breeding paragraph, tending to create irritation and discord, and serving no other purpose. It is not the "spirit of the press," it is the spirit of evil. Printed in its journal of origin, it would have been read by only a few and have done little harm. But reprinted in a great journal with about 100,000 daily circulation, and corresponding influence, it obtains an immense publicity, and becomes an element in doing infinite harm. It spreads broadcast the seeds of discord, and leads the people of the other provinces of Canada to conclude that Quebec is deeply disaffected, when, as a matter of fact the disaffection is confined to a few mischief-makers.

We have a section of the press of Ontario, that in unbridled license is habitually employed in printing irritating jibes against Quebec and rabid appeals to racial and religious prejudices. These are bad enough, printed and read in a province where the Hun character of these libellous sheets robs their vapourings of weight, and much of their power for evil; but reprinted as they are too often in French newspapers, the readers of the latter get the idea that they express the sentiments of Ontario instead of being exhibits of journalistic sewage.

The mischievous tittle-tattle or gossip of a neighbourhood does little harm unless it is repeated. Likewise, the intemperate, irritating, prejudiced and passionate ribaldry that finds its way into the columns of a class of Quebec and Ontario newspapers, will do less harm if let alone. But mutually reprinted in the respective—there is no danger of writing respectable—journals in either province, with exaggerated comments, they do endless harm in keeping the fires of passion burning and creating a condition of discord and strain between the two provinces.

Here is where a newspaper censor, with big sense and wide powers, could do an unspeakable good if he would effectively use authority to check the publication of the rabid appeals to passion and incitements to discord in certain papers in Ontario and Quebec. He might decree that any such utterances by the press of either province should be copyrighted—in the devil's name—with heavy penalties decreed for infringement.

It is an accepted theory that to bring "hard times," a good way is to talk "hard times," and it is equally true that if we wish to create discord and break harmony we can do so by harping on discord and harmony and, at the same time, amplify and exaggerate the petty causes of discord that would be harmless, if they were not given a false importance by repetition.

The heading of an Ottawa press despatch says, "Canada will not seize railways," but have we any assurance in past experience that the railways will not "seize" Canada?

Production As Necessary As Retrenchment To Win The War

Many, in discussing the economic problem of the war, put almost all their emphasis on the need for retrenchment. While the soldiers and the sailors produce nothing, they, above all, must be clothed and fed. Therefore, the civilian population must eat less and wear out its old clothes. The ship-builders must have plenty of steel and lumber, and therefore activities not directly connected with the war which consume such things must be stopped. So runs the argument.

It is but too notorious that waste has prevailed in the United States. The well-to-do classes have burned too much fuel and kept their houses unhealthily hot. They have bought needless clothes. They have kept needless servants. They have eaten and drunk to excess, and provided the full garbage-can. They have indulged in much joy-riding. There are said to be 4,000,000 automobiles in this country, as compared with 800,000 in all the rest of the world. The members of the working class, especially those of American birth, have emulated these practices of our well-to-do to the best of their ability.

Abolition of waste will provide a substantial part of certain things required for military purposes. A drastic curtailment of the use of mere luxuries will stimulate many important readjustments of industry which will become more necessary as the war goes on. War makes great demands, but they are mainly demands for a comperatively few things—explosives, fuel, iron, steel, copper, clothing, food-stuffs. The reduction of the use of luxuries will tend to force capital and labour out of industries which produce luxuries into those which produce necessities.

But although no effort should be spared to reduce waste, we must face the fact that there are limits beyond which we cannot harmlessly carry economy. Although our annual production is larger per capita than that of any other country, and although our division of what is produced among the various classes of the people is as equitable as it is elsewhere, only a small part of our people ever have had incomes considerably exceeding the amount required to keep them in comfort.—Scribner's Magazine.

HEAVY PENALTIES FOR ABSENTEES

HEAVIEST PENALTY FIVE YEARS IN JAIL

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—With the calling up of the first draft next week strong measures will be taken against men who have failed to register under the Military Service Act. Announcement of a reward "to any civic police or peace officer for the apprehension and delivery into military custody of a deserter or absentee without leave" is the forerunner of further steps to ensure that all members of Class One comply with the law.

Instructions for dealing with deserters and absentees without leave have been issued, and the general policy determined.

FIVE GROUPS OF ABSENTEES.

Generally speaking, there are five different groups of men who, from a military point of view, may be dealt with as absentees without leave. The groups and the penalties to which the men in each case are liable are as follows:

1. Men who have failed to comply with the proclamation calling out class 1—liable for any term of imprisonment not exceeding five years, with hard labour.

2. Men, who, having reported or claimed exemption under the Military Service Act, have failed to attend for medical examination when ordered to do so—punishable by civil magistrate by a fine not exceeding $200, and not less than $25, and to not more than three months' imprisonment. If not fined, punishable by military law as absentees without leave or deserters.

3. Men who, having been ordered to report for duty fail to do so—punishable in the same way as absentees of the following group (group four) if before they were required to report for duty, they were taken on the strength of the C. E. F.; otherwise, punishable by military law.

TWO YEARS EVEN FOR VOLUNTEERS

4. Men who having been taken on the strength of the C. E. F. or of the active militia, either as volunteers or as drafted men, and either before or after the issue of proclamation under the Military Service Act, or the passing of that Act, are now, or hereafter become, absentees without leave—punishable by civil magistrates by two years' imprisonment, with the consent of the general officer commanding the district from which the prosecution is brought, or by military law.

5. Men who, having been granted leave of absence without pay, cease or fail to comply with the conditions upon which their leave was granted—punishable in the same way as men in group 4.

Men in all the five groups mentioned, it is pointed out, are alike in that they are all soldiers absent without leave and subject to military as well as civil arrest for their absence.

MILLS BEGIN GRINDING "WAR FLOUR" TO SAVE WHEAT.

Minneapolis. — The local mills today began grinding "war flour" under the new government regulations designed to save 16,000,000 bushels of wheat in the present crop year. Under these regulations which provide for seventy-four per cent. of the wheat berry instead of only fift- per cent., two grades of flour will be eliminated and the output will be listed as war flour of first and second grades.

The change resulted in a sharp reduction in bran prices and a drop in the prices of other by-products also is expected.

Members of the Food Administration milling division said that because of the large supply of our now on the market it would be some time before war flour reached the consumer.

HALF-DEAD MACEDONIAN FLED FROM HOSPITAL.

Niagara Falls, Ont. — The police of the country are still looking for John Romanan, the Macedonian, who while being taken on a train from Port Colborne to Merriton, jumped off at Thorold and was found nearly dead some time after. Romanan was taken to the Welland Hospital, and was believed to be so badly injured that he would be unable to get out of bed. But he got up in the middle of the night and let himself out of a second storey window, and got away. He was wearing only a night shirt and a dressing gown, and his head was bandaged up, so the police hope to find him if he is not already dead from exposure. He is wanted in Toronto for a minor offence.

WANT LOWER PRICE FOR OLEOMARGARINE.

Montreal, December 28. — Alleging that the price of oleomargarine, 37 cents a pound, is too high, the city Council of Montreal to-day passed a resolution requesting Food Controller Hanna to fix a price for oleomargarine with the least possible delay.

Drink More Milk
Drink Pure Milk

There is practically NO WASTE IN MILK. Every part of it serves a good purpose. All Pure Food.

But you say: Milk is largely water. That's true. Everything you eat is largely water. Your meat, fowls, fish, cereals, even your bread, has its content.

It is also true that most foods show a large waste in other ways. Consider what part of a lamb chop is really available as food. Think of the bone, the fat and inedible tissue that is not consumed. Think of the "leavings" from a roast of beef. Think of the "scrap" from a roast chicken and remember that the "leavings," the "waste," and "scrap" cost just as much as the food you have eaten.

MILK IS ALL FOOD. IT IS WHOLESOME FOOD. IT IS FOOD AT LOW COST.

As to the comparative Cost of Milk as a Food, it GIVES MORE FOR THE MONEY than any animal food you use.

STARTLING FACT

Professor Rosenau of Harvard University states that the actual food value of one quart of milk is equal to three-quarters of a pound of beef, two pounds of chicken, eight eggs, two pounds of codfish, etc.

A quart a day of good pure Pasteurized Milk is not too much for workers. But take time and drink it slowly.

Use more Milk in your Cooking.

Sleeplessness is only hunger which you can quickly satisfy with a glass of Warm Milk.

Use Milk as a substantial part of your meal. Begin to-day to drink more milk. Teach every member of the family to know its value. Stop overeating. Eat less—Drink More Milk.

The German As A Fighter

By Major Donald Marion McRae, Formerly of the Canadian Army, Now of U. S. A. Infantry

After asking me how long the war is going to last, the average American, military and layman, wants to know what I think of the German as a fighting man. I find this more difficult to discuss than the first question.

If I declare that the German is not a first-rate fighting man, I am immediately asked to explain how I account for the success of the German armies and the inability of the Allies to inflict a decisive defeat up to the present time. And this is not easy.

According to British and American standards, which after all are closely akin, the German is not a first-rate fighting man. By that I mean that he is not a reliable individual fighter. Left to their own resources, in tight places where it is a question of each man for himself and the devil take the hindmost, the Germans are invariably the first to call quits, which in their case is the now well-known cry of "Kamerad" with a few embellishing references to a wife and any number of children.

Confirmed in the Field.

I have often had occasion to compare these traits of the fighting men on the French front. Invariably my personal encounters with the Germans have affirmed anew my conclusions.

As I have stated in a previous article, my principal work at the front was as a scout officer, a job that took me into No Man's Land practically every night and often led me and my men into death grips with the Huns.

Our patrolling parties were always perfectly organized and every precaution taken to prevent being separated, but when a patrol or scouting party is surprised by superior enemy patrols, by a sudden burst of machine gun fire or the startling illumination by flares, each man must look out for himself. His commanding officer must do the same thing. There is no time for orders.

It would be useless and fatal for the party to stay together. The only tactics capable of meeting this situation is to scramble out of it in the best way possible. The Canadians are especially adept at this sort of work. They have learned how to hide in the shadows cast by the brilliant flares, how to time the intervals of enemy fire and how to outguess the logic of the Hun.

Germans in No Man's Land.

With the Germans it is different. Many times I have detected enemy patrols also at work in No Man's Land, and the fact that I am alive is pretty good proof that we usually got the better of them. When thus encountered, the Germans invariably wait for their officers to tell them exactly what to do. I have seen them stand stupidly about or drop to the ground in a group, always waiting for a command. That delay gave us the time we needed to touch off our bombs and hurl them into the men across the way.

A striking instance of this difference in resourcefulness was the manner in which a friend of mine earned for himself the reputation of being the most effective single-handed Hun killer in the entire Canadian contingent. He once destroyed an entire German patrol, killing many of them, by chucking bombs into them before they decided or had been told what their next move should be. On another occasion, in a trench raid, this same chap caught thirty-five Germans unawares in a dug-out, and, holding them in by pegging bombs at the entrance of the hole, finally brought them out without guns and hands up and led them back to headquarters.

I do not think that any thirty-five Canadians or Americans could be taken in this way. Incidentally, this brave fellow, who has been decorated with about every medal his country has to offer, was before the war a pianist in a motion picture theatre in Montreal. Hun hunting became his only interest in life, and, although he has been in the Service almost from the beginning, he was still uninjured at the time I last heard from him. He is probably the most popular officer on the battle front. Every one except him, fears he will be hurt some day.

It must not be inferred that the German soldiers are lacking in other of the qualities that go to make up a soldier. They are poor individual fighters, they hate cold steel, but they maintain a marvellous discipline and, given competent officers or incompetent officers for that matter, to lead them, they will go into any inferno of fire. Once their officers fall, however, they are quick to surrender. Many times they resort to dastardly tricks, but seldom do they, left alone, stand up and fight it out man to man. I shall never forget one trick, which they worked successfully on my men, when we were new at the game.

The Hun Trick and Its Costs.

We had executed a dashing trench raid and cleared our sector in quick order. The only live German in sight was a Fritz who was kneeling in supplication in front of a dugout. A couple of my men started in his direction to bring him in and they were both shot down by a German in the dugout who sighted with his rifle barrel under the arm of the kneeling Hun. This trick worked just once, and it is likely that many a kneeling German died thereafter who would have lived had it not been for the ruse of his clever comrade.

It is habitual with the Canadians that they do not surrender as long as there is the faintest glimmer of a fighting chance to beat off their would-be captors and rejoin their own forces. Often, they are able to break away from the Huns and get back. On the other hand, the German private is likely to give you the impression that he has been waiting for a chance to surrender. Frequently when they are being led back to our reserve lines, they are impatient lest their comrades overtake their party and rescue them.

I well recall one German prisoner who made no attempt to hide his joy at being captured. I asked him why he was so pleased with himself. He declared he had been at the front two years and had been waiting for the chance to surrender which came that day. I asked him who he was, and he told me he had been a waiter in Reisenweber's restaurant in New York and was only by chance caught in Germany when the war broke out, as he had gone back to the Fatherland to marry. He added that, as soon as possible, he would again be a waiter in Reisenweber's in New York.

The average German private does not seem to be so completely convinced of the righteousness of his country's cause as the soldier of the Allies. Of course, he wants to do his part in the "defence" of the Fatherland, and in many respects he has a remarkable sense of loyalty, but he often lacks the higher spirit of sacrifice which fills the soldier of the Allies.

I believe firmly in the maxim that a real soldier will do his best for his country whether his country be right or wrong, but a man's best often depends on his mental and spiritual attitude, which he cannot always control, toward the task in hand. With the French, this attitude might well be called a religion of sacrifice. With the British it is likewise, but th eBriton, while he suffers the same hardships with glowing good cheer and gladly gives his life, is less likely to analyze his feelings and more loath to talk about the deeper phases of the war.

Average German Lacks Spirit.

This spirit the average German lacks. To him the summit of all worldly things is the Fatherland with the supreme being in the person of the Kaiser. He cares naught for humanity nor for any of the higher motives that actuate his adversary. And it is for that reason more than any other that we are going to beat the German in the end. Our morale is built on firmer rocks than his. Our will to a finish fight is greater, our determination is less blatant but more sincere—and all because we are fighting for ideals and not selfish and ambitious aims.

The German officer is a well trained fighter and a far more courageous individual than the man he commands. Usually he has spent the better part of his life in earning the insignia of his rank and his chief business in life is to prove worthy of his rank. The German officer is not likely to quit cold. Even after capture, he must be carefully watched.

Some men of our battalion once came across a wounded German while clearing up the ground after a successful action and immediately sent back for stretcher bearers. The officer was put on the stretcher and the journey back started. It was pitch dark and it was necessary for the officer conducting the party to pick his way with a flashlight. Thinking to observe the condition of his prisoner and ascertain if he needed anything, or whether he was still alive and worth taking back, this officer put his flashlight on him. The German captain, although badly, perhaps mortally wounded, was revealed busily feeling under the sandbags along the parapet as they went along, pulling out the wire and destroying our communication.

The German officer is far superior to the private when it comes down to a two-fisted encounter, but still he lacks the punch of the Briton and the man frim this side of the Atlantic. I always recall the battle put up by a Prussian Guard officer who fought all the way through the punishment inflicted by a fairly husky adversary and did not succumb until a revolver butt put him away.

Of course, the German officer seldom gets any true news about the war. As prisoners they invariably are surprised to hear that the war is not at that moment being concluded in Germany's favour. Ont German officer taken by my battalion, speaking very good English, expressed genuine regret that the Zeppelins had completely destroyed London. He had spent many happy years there, he said, and, while he hated the British [illegible] London was a pleasant place to live, and he had hoped to live there again until he had received information from his headquarters that the city had been laid waste.

NOW SLEEPS ALL NIGHT, HE STATES

Gets Up Every Morning Rested and Ready for Work, Says Carrothers

There was hardly a time in three or four years, before I began taking Tanlac, when I felt right," said William B. Carrothers, a well-known carpenter living at 151 Dreaney Avenue, London, while in the Standard Drug Store, recently.

"I was almost a nervous wreck," he continued, "and it seemed that I was just about ready to collapse. I would just roll and toss half the night, unable to sleep. Why, my nerves were so unstrung that I couldn't hold a pen steady enough to write, and I was so worn-out and weak that I never felt like doing my work. The least little job of work would fag me almost completely out.

"I was lucky to get as much as three or four hours' sleep at a time before I took Tanlac, and that seemed to do me no good. But now I can sleep all night without waking and get up in the mornings rested and ready for my work. I don't have that nervous, weak feeling like I did, and am gaining my strength back rapidly.

"My wife had been suffering from stomach trouble and indigestion and nothing seemed to help her. But Tanlac certainly is doing her a world of good. We have taken three bottles between us, and are going to keep it up as it has given us better results than anything else we have ever been able to find. Tanlac certainly is fine and I don't hesitate to recommend it to anyone."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Deniker, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

To The Electors

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the City of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "general" education and "technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able [illegible] with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous boards of education, and will endeavour, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the City of Peterborough and the public purse.

KNOCKED VICTORY LOAN AND BARBER GETS YEAR'S SENTENCE

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—Men who have unpopular opinions about the war are faced, by from one to five years in prison if they voice them above a whisper. At two o'clock this afternoon, the "morning" Police Court being still in session, Joshua Swan, a barber, 185 Roncesvalles avenue, was committed to the Ontario Reformatory for one year for making remarks likely to injure recruiting.

The sentence followed a great deal of character evidence on behalf of Swan, the Ontario manager of the Massey-Harris Company and Detective William Wallace being among those who gave the barber a good character and expressed surprise to hear that he had said anything disloyal.

Harold Littlejohn, 22 years old, and in Class 1A2, said that between the 15th and 20th of November Swan, then in his shop, said that anyone who invested money in Victory Bonds was a fool. On Littlejohn saying that he and a brother had enlisted, Swan remarked that it wasn't necessary to join. He said that men in Montreal were not enlisting and could not be compelled to do so.

O. H. Moore and S. J. Robertson, who asked Swan to display a Victory Bond bill in his window, said Swan had said he didn't approve of the Government getting money in that way. To Robertson, Swan said that anybody who would enlist was foolish.

Swan denied the statements of all the witnesses, and his wife, who said she was listening at the door on one occasion, corroborated her husband. The Victory Bond advertisement was put up in the shop.

"We don't tolerate that kind of nonsense in the country while the war is on," announced Col. Denison, who then committed the accused to the Ontario Reformatory for three months. This, however, was changed to one year, that being the minimum penalty for the offence.

M. H. C. OFFERS VARIETY OF GARDEN COURSES

Chrysanthemums such as Manitoba gardeners have rarely seen were shown in the recent exhibition of work done by the soldiers in the vocational training classes conducted by the Military Hospitals Commission in connection with the Manitoba Military Convalescent Hospital in Winnipeg, and directed much interest to the excellence of the horticultural and gardening courses offered to the men.

The number of prizes which the boys carried off in the fall fairs emphasised the gardening end of the work, but less has been said about the facilities for horticulture and landscape gardening which are available for the men who want such courses.

Splendid Equipment.

There are fine greenhouses and hot frames, and under the direction of Mr. Fred Nichols the men are making fine progress. Florists are turning out such blooms as are not often seen outside the southern countries.

With Canada's ever increasing prosperity, the number of city people who demand summer vegetables in the winter season multiplies, and the future for gardeners with hot frames and the proper equipment to cater to these tastes grows more golden. With this in mind, many of the returned men are planning to establish gardens just outside the large cities with the intention of supplying the markets in the summer and the high-class grocers in the cold season with green salad materials and out of date delicacies which will bring fancy prices.

Chance for Specialists.

The Commission is also prepared to give would-be landscape gardeners the proper grounding in gardening should they have sufficient ability and art education to enable them to look to success in this line. The openings for such work are limited, of course, and soldier landscape gardeners will be exceptional.

Home Gardeners.

In addition to these men who are taking the different courses as vocational re-education because their disabilities prevent them returning to their former occupations, there are many men who are taking a course during their convalescence just as a means of acquiring proper exercise and putting their leisure to good use. Many of them have had gardens at home, only fairly successful gardens run haphazardly on little real knowledge, and they are taking advantage of the opportunity to put their work on a scientific basis through Mr. Nichols' instruction.

HOSPITALS ON WHEELS CARRY WOUNDED WEST

Many visitors to Canada have praised the hospitals and sanatoria supplied by the Government through the Military Hospitals Commission for treatment of returned soldiers, and the schools conducted in connection with them for the vocational training and re-education, but the hospitals on wheels, the shuttle-like institutions which are shot from coast to coast over the rails, bearing the bed cases brough back from Britain, elude them.

In these cars, complete with wards, dispensary, kitchen, and nurses' and physicians' quarters, 22 bed cases bound for inland points can be perfectly cared for. The beds are standard hospital cots, so spread with white linen and bolstered in pillows as would make a weary salesman weep with envy; there are solicitous nurses in perky white caps, and with every unit of two cars a physician to look after the men.

One car carries all the service facilities. There is a space equivalent to drawing-room accommodation in the regular sleeping car reserved for the nurses, a diet kitchen, dispensary, and a compartment for the medical officers, consisting of upper and lower berths. The remainder of the space is given to eight cots for patients.

Side Entrance to Cars.

One special feature of the car is a side entrance, giving easy access for the stretchers so that the patients may be moved with least possible inconvenience to them. All cases are brought in this way and transferred to the adjoining ward car through doors made specially wide for the purpose. To protect the men already in the first car, heavy curtains are drawn in cold weather.

The second car is a complete ward, giving sufficient space for 14 cots. The upper berths are retained even though they are never used, since they provide good space for carrying linen and supplies, and in case of a great emergency certain cases might be carried there.

By arranging these cars in units of two they may be attached to any ordinary passenger train or made up into a special train.

RUSSIA OVERRUN BY ARMED BANDS

New York, December 28. — Armed bands of one time soldiers roam at will about Russia, responsible to no one but their temporary leaders, looting, committing highway robbery and killing all persons who meet their disfavor, according to travellers who yesterday reached an American port aboard a neutral steamship from Norway. Conditions are hopeless in the land "ruled" by the Bolsheviki, say the persons just out of that country.

Among the passengers on board of the steamship was Captain J. T. Williams, secretary-treasurer of the American Red Cross in Roumania. He brought from Petrograd several important despatches which he guarded carefully. But for soldiers upon a relief train with supplies for his unit, the lawless would have helped themselves to what they wanted, he said, for the train was flagged time and again. When it was discovered that there would be armed resistance the bands beat hasty retreat, he said. Captain Williams was met by government agents and left at once for Washington.

Mrs. J. B. Wright, wife of the counsellor to the American Legation, at Petrograd, was also on board. She, too, spoke of the unsettled conditions.

In describing conditions in Moscow Captain Williams said he was ordered from a hotel, which soon was riddled with bullets from the machine gun of one of the large bands that had congregated nearby.

Machinery Is Being Moved Into Quaker Oats Plant

Main Brick Building is Almost Completed With Exception of Interior Work

The plant of the Quaker Oats Company is rapidly nearing completion. The brick main building on the east side, next to the river, is almost finished with the exception of the interior work. Part of the machinery is being moved in, and in about two months' time the office will be ready for occupation.

Ten or twelve gangs of men are still employed on the work in connection with the completion of the sub-contracts, such as plumbing, wiring, glazing, etc.

The front end of the main building is eight storeys high and the back portion extends skyward to a distance of nine storeys. The layout in the main building is much the same as that which existed in the old building.

In the new structure the office is on the third floor, and the entrance to the office will lead out on to the new high level bridge when it is erected. A new method of drying the grain will be used in the dryers. Steam will be used instead of coke, which should go a long way towards minimising the danger of an explosion.

On the West.

On the west side of the plant, commencing from the north end, there is a battery of thirty-six concrete storage tanks. This is followed by the work house, which is one hundred and seven-five feet high. Then follows the flour mill, the puffed grain mill, the oatmeal mill, and a warehouse which will run out to Hunter Street.

The warehouse portion of this building will hardly be completed before June next, as winter weather is anything but suitable for concrete construction. On top of the work house will be erected a sixty thousand gallon water tank. This will extend twenty feet above the present height of 175 feet, making the whole thing equal to a twenty-storey building.

Sometimes it is better late than early. The bit of repartee you think of ten minutes too late might have cost you a friend.

TO DEVELOP MOLYBDENITE MINES IN NORTH

LINDSAY, Dec. 29.— Mr. T. Horscroft, of London, Eng., a mining expert, is in town on an important mission—the development of the molybdenite deposits in the northern part of Victoria County.

Molybdenite is a mineral occurring in soft lead-gray foliated masses or scales, resembling graphite, sulphite or molybdenum. It is a difficultly fusible metal. It is used for tempering steel, and the French nation has used it with remarkable success in connection with their wonderful 75 guns, as it keeps the barrels from corroding.

There are large deposits of this valuable mineral in Victoria and Haliburton Counties and it is Mr. Horscroft's intention to develop the mines and to sell shares locally.

No part of the ham should be wasted. The rough ends can be ground, creamed, and served on toast for breakfast and the bone can be boiled with cabbage.

THE CULPRIT ESCAPES AS RUSSIANS DEBATE

Challenges Justice of Sentence as He Is Led Out For Execution as a Spy—Diverts Soldier Guard

PETROGRAD. — The provincial newspaper Prisovsky Krai publishes an account of the escape of a Russian military prisoner who had been sentenced to be executed for selling military secrets to Germany and plotting explosions in two powder factories, which caused the death of 3,000 persons.

When a squad of soldiers and government agents had assembled to watch the hangman do his work the condemned man startled them by a proposal that, instead of executing him they give him a vote of approval. In the debate which ensued the executioner narrowly escaped hanging in place of the prisoner. The convicted man was elected secretary of the meeting and escaped while the vote was being taken. The meeting then voted to sentence the executioner to imprisonment for failure to do his duty.

Smiling contemptuously the prisoner was led to the scaffold. When the sentence had been read he raised his hands and demanded to be heard.

"No," objected the Prosecuting Attorney. "It is too late now. You should have spoken at the trial."

One of the squad of soldiers stepped out and said in a tone of amazement, "What? Why too late? Is not speech free? Thank God, there's no Tsarist regime to keep our mouths closed. Speak, comrade, speak!"

The condemned man began: "Comrades! Do you know who has condemned me? A court-martial constituted entirely of lower middle-class capitalists, inspired by the imperialists of the allied countries. The prosecutor, as I know absolutely, was a masquerading Kornilovist! Comrades! Shall not democracy itself speak? Shall I not say 'Hands off the creators and inspirers of the Internationale?' Comrades! Can you possibly recognise a decision of this counter - revolutionary, anti - democratic court as binding on you?"

"Bravo!" shouted a guard. "Let me also speak."

The condemned man yielded the floor to the guard, who began: "Comrades, can anything be more atrocious than for us to permit the hanging of this man, who speaks as an apostle and champion of the Internationale? Comrades, I propose a vote of want of confidence in the executioner."

"I demand the right to speak," said the executioner. "Comrades, I solemnly protest against this universal condemnation of all executioners. I am just as good a revolutionist as any of you, and if the revolutionary people have imposed on me this sad duty, I am bound by my conscience. I demand, comrades, that you pass a resolution confirming the lawfulness of my acts. I hope that you understand that it is better to deprive one dangerous individual of his life rather than sacrifice thousands of useful lives."

"I move to discontinue your speech, Comrade Hangman," broke in the condemned man.

"And by what right, Comrade Exploder of Powder Magazines, do you constitute yourself the chairman?" replied the executioner vehemently.

"Chairman! Chairman! Let's elect a chairman," came from several parts of the audience. The election proceeded fast. It took only half an hour, and the condemned man had the office thrust upon him of secretary of the meeting.

At this point an unfortunate divergency arose among three of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates. One of them, a Minimalist, demanded the instant execution of the prisoner; another, a Socialist Revolutionary-Internationalist, suggested getting explanations from the Government; the third, a Maximalist, proposed that they should release the prisoner, and in his stead execute the executioner as a servant and agent of the counter-revolution.

The drummer got up to declaim against the third suggestion, but after his first sentence he began talking, not to the point, but to demand the transfer of all land without purchase to the masses. A vote of closure was invoked to cut his speech off.

A very eloquent speech followed by the Secretary of the Garrison Committee, although it was not much to the point. He said that the revolutionary government was now organized, and there was no reason now to fear the German spies or explosions at powder magazines; and therefore, in the name of the garrison, he called for the disclosure of all secret treaties.

The Chairman here turned the discussion to the actual subject, putting two questions to vote, first, the fate in store for the condemned prisoner; second, the fate in store for the executioner.

The voting showed a two-thirds majority in favour of executing the sentence, whereupon the condemned man expressed dissatisfaction as to the accuracy of the voting and demanded a formal division of the house. Thus the matter was carried to the prison court yard, and the ayes and nates were requested to line up on opposite sides of the gates. The result was still the same, but when they looked around for the Secretary, who was also the condemned prisoner, he was nowhere to be seen. It was explained that he had voted by marching out at the gate and had failed to return subsequently.

After some discussion, the meeting decided that the disappearance of the prisoner had disposed of any necessity of further discussing question Number One, and that there remained before the meeting only Question Two, namely, the fate in store for the executioner. This time the vote was unanimous, and the following resolution was passed:

"In consequence of the fact that the Revolutionary People on Feb. 28 to March 12 gained its freedom, not in order to down civil liberty; also in consequence of the fact that Executioner Demochkin neglected to execute sentence on the condemned man, the Assembly has decided to condemn Demochkin to three months' imprisonment. Long live the self-determination of the peoples on the basis of Russia, federative and indivisible!"

PRAIRIE PROVINCES IN GRIP OF COLD

Calgary, Alta., December 28. — The extreme cold weather of the past few days is having a marked effect on the railway traffic of the Prairie Provinces. There is a strong wind over almost the entire westerly section and it is this which has been mostly instrumental in the delays to passenger and freight traffic by reason of drifting.

The thermometers at Calgary registered from twenty-five below to eighteen below, with a temperature of twelve below about noon on Thursday.

A blizzard is reported in the Columbia Valley and in the Field locality.

A BUSINESS MAN FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Services of Mr. J. M. Greene Are Offered to the Electors

When voting day comes, it is as well to know something about the man you try to elect by marking your ballot for him. On the list of candidates there is the name of one prominent business man, Mr. J. M. Greene, who, judging by his remarkable record is eminently fitted to handle the work of the city on the Board of Education. Mr. Greene would be too modest to tell these facts himself, but the discerning public should show its appreciation of his allowing his name to come before them, by endorsing him as their first selection for this important position. Mr. Greene has been a resident of Peterborough for 29 years. To all who know him his sterling worth is appreciated. As a business man, he has in thirteen years built up one of the largest businesses in the city, having four branches in other large centres. This result has been achieved from a very small beginning, solely due to the energy and capability of Mr. Greene himself. The Greene Music Company limited now has a first-class financial rating, and it is the man who has done this whose services are now offered to the city in the executive capacity of a member of the Board of Education. In the writer's opinion, when the ballot is marked on voting day, the first choice should be J. M. Greene, and the other four selected from the other splendid candidates who are also willing to undertake the city's work.

Centre Ward Electors

Centre Ward Electors:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In appealing for your votes in my behalf as candidate for alderman for Centre Ward, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I am a firm believer in Municipal Government by Commission, recognizing the fact that better results are to be obtained under this system, and if elected will do all I can to have the system fully explained and an opportunity given to the ratepayers to decide the question for themselves.

The foot bridge at the C.P.R. speaks for itself as the result of my work when in Council. I take credit for this, as Councils in previous years tried to secure this bridge and were unsuccessful. This bridge is very convenient and useful to the general public.

There are several important matters coming before next year's Council requiring careful consideration, and I assure you if elected will have my careful coonsideration.

Trusting you will see to it that I am elected as your representative in Centre Ward.

Yours truly,
JOHN EDGAR.

GERMAN CHRISTMAS A DAY OF HUNGER.

Geneva. — Features of the German Christmas, according to news from across the frontier, were women and children openly begging in the snow-covered streets for food to appease their hunger, and riots in some of the towns. Only the rich enjoyed a good but ordinary dinner, and for this they paid high prices, as much as $30. Most of the churches in Germany were closed owing to lack of coal.

POLICE FIND COAL SUPPLIES IN HOMES APPLYING FOR RELIEF

The police have discovered that some of the urgent demands for coal have been made by persons whose bins contain an adequate temporary supply. There has been a suspicion that this practice was more or less general, and the fact disclosed by the police fully substantiates the belief that some citizens have obtained quantities of coal while they have had reserves in their cellars.

To avoid indiscriminate deliveries and to supply the most necessitous cases first, Chief Thompson instructed his men to investigate the applications received recently, and as a result of their work, some of the "safety first" citizens will be transferred to the second class until their supplementary stocks approach exhaustion.

Incidentally this is another of the unexpected tasks the police have accepted, and this morning some of the men were tramping the outside wards, each bearing a little bundle of application cards of supposedly needy cases, which they were instructed to investigate.

Since the channel of the coal inquiries have been diverted from Ald. Dobbin's office to the Police Department, the men have come to undersand the local conditions of supply and demand. Last night, for example, a soldier's wife presented at the police station an order from the Great War Veterans' Association for immediate relief. She had no fuel and she had a sick baby to care for. The police called up Mr. R. Hicks, who pulled out a truck with a load of coal, got the woman's address from the police and delivered the fuel immediately. It was then after eight o'clock. This is but one of many cases, and the police state that their efforts would be practically useless were it not for the co-operation of Mr. Hicks, and especially the supply of coal which he has endeavoured to husband as carefully as possible.

At another coal yard yesterday $50 worth of coal was distributed in small quantities to women who had to draw it home on hand sleighs.

Employees of the Auburn Woollen Mills Surprise Mr. Kendry on the Eve of New Year

The employees of the Auburn Woollen Mills presented a handsome gold watch yesterday evening to Mr. James Kendry, president of the company. Every employee, from the youngest to the veterans of the service, gathered in one of the departments at 5.30 o'clock. The motors had been shut down, and the hum of industry was hushed for the day. Mr. Walter Anderson, overseer of the picking department, who has been with the Auburn Mills forty-five years, read the address, and Mr. Wm. Hartley, overseer of the dressing department, with forty-three years' connection with the company, made the presentation.

The address follows:

Dear Mr. Kendry,

On the eve of a New Year and your departure for the Sunny South, we have gathered together to extend our sincerest good wishes, showing our appreciation of your many kindnesses and your consideration during the long years of office as President of the Auburn Woollen Co., Ltd.

Life is as a rainbow web, in whose making each one has a part to play. Time with its opportunities for good or ill, sorts out each act of strong or weak endeavour, the spinner spins the rope of years into the warp of life; the weaver, in his busy round, fills in the golden ambitions, ties up the broken threads, and views with pride his work performed—the inheritance of the loom.

To have devoted a life time of service, to have reached the rewards of your endeavours, and to have woven into the fabric an honourable record—this has been your recompense.

We find no more fitting time to recite our feelings, and would ask you to accept this remembrance as a token of our goodwill and of the good fellowship existing, and may it long mark out for you the hours and days and years of happiness, health, and prosperity; and may you return restored in health and ready to take up once more the work to which you are so devotedly bound.

Signed on behalf of the employees of the Auburn Woollen Co., Ltd.

Mr. Kendry was deeply moved by the testimonial of the hands with whom he has worked, and in his reply thanked them for their kind wishes and their splendid gift. The occasion was another of the evidences of the harmony and fellowship that exists at the Auburn Mills, extending from the president through the department heads to the youngest and newest employees.

Preparing For Census

The ministers and those who are to assist in the religious census which is to be taken next Friday are asked to take special notice of the place from which the different chairmen will work. A number of visitors is being assigned to each chairman. The chairman will have an office, and all who assist are asked to meet him promptly at two o'clock, or even a few minutes before two. He will then assign the work to each set of visitors, who are to go forth two by two.

District I.—Mr. W. G. Read, Headquarters, St. Andrew's Sunday School.
District II.—Mr. Wm. Madill, Headquarters, Y.M.C.A.
District III.—Mr. R. C. Braund, Headquarters, Knox Church.
District IV.—Mr. A. J. Johnston, Headquarters, Nugent's Drug Store, 386 George Street.
District V.—Mr. John Speer, Headquarters, Mark Street Church.

A meeting of all visitors and workers will be held in Charlotte Street Sunday School, corner of Reid and Charlotte Streets, on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. This meeting will be addressed by Mr. Halpenny, of Torono, who will give full instructions to the visitors. It is very necessary that the visitors be present at this meeting if at all possible.

RAILROADS ELIMINATE OBSERVATION AND BUFFET SMOKING CARS FROM TRAINS.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28. — Immediate curtailment of luxurious passenger service equipment was among the first steps taken to-day by some of the railroads with headquarters in Chicago when the Government came into control of the nation's rail systems. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul announced that it would eliminate both observation and buffet-smoking cars from its trains. The change will be made between Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis at once, and on the lines to Kansas City and Omaha next.

STRIKE AS A PROTEST.

4,000 Union Workmen Demand Release of Arrested Leaders.

HAMILTON, Ohio, Dec. 28.— Four thousand union workmen refused to go to work to-day, and as a result a general strike of union men has resulted from the imprisonment yesterday of thirty union leaders, who were charged with rioting in the recent disorders here. While it was at first thought the strike to-day was to be only of one day's duration as a protest against the imprisonment of their fellow workers, it early became known that the strike leaders had decided the strike would last until the men are released from jail.

Practically every factory in the city is closed down completely or seriously affected by the strike.

AMERICAN PRESS IS CAUSTIC IN COMMENT

MANY OBJECTIONS.

Offer Is Not Made in Good Faith, Is Opinion of Tribune.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The following editorial comment appears in the New York newspapers to-day on the Teuton-Russian peace negotiations and proposals:

The Herald says: "The only peace that can come out of Brest-Litovsk is the separate peace between Teutonism and Bleshevism, which would put the Russian neck under the Prussian heel for ever."

Thousands of Objections.

The Tribune comments as follows: "The peace terms proposed by Count Czernin at the Congress of Brest-Litovsk are inadmissable, because they make no provision for the restoration of Belgium, and Northern France. A thousand other objections might be advanced, many of them equally rated, but they would only serve to complicate the discussion."

To Mislead Teutons.

The Chicago Herald says: "The latest offer may mislead the Teutonic peoples, who it is intended to fortify in the belief that their rulers are peace-loving and moderate. But it will be a pointless shaft against the allied peoples."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: "Out of the lair of Russian anarchy are to issue the angels to carry Berlin's Christmas message into all the world. To the Anarchists masquerading at Brest-Litovsk, as spokesman of the Russian people, the Kaiser entrusts this mission. 'Go,' says he, 'to the nations that have been your allies, and tell them that Prussia magnanimously accepts the terms that Russia has proposed.' Such is the pompous fraud of Kaiserism's latest play for favour."

The Providence Journal says: "A proposal put forward by fools for consumption by children."

The Chicago Tribune says: "Such a German peace would be a substantial German victory."

The Buffalo Express says: "Until the Germans accept the world's standard of ethics and recognize the deep wrongfulness of such policies as these, any peace that could be negotiated with them would be simply the triumph of evils, would mean merely that the whole fight would have to be waged again from the beginning."

The Pitsburg Dispatch says: "The newest offer is interesting only as proof of increasing German perception of what the terms of peace must be."

Indianapolis Star: "The thought is very carefully presented to the simple Bolsheviki mind that the only thing standing in the way of peace is the fact that the allies insist on fighting."

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "The only probable results are that the Bolsheviki will be deluded and the people of the central powers will be impressed that their Governments are trying to make peace."

The Boston Globe says: "As foreseen, this document comes with the allies entirely unprepared and disunited in their political strategy regarding peace. The offer is appaeently so liberal in its terms that, in order to prevent political disruption in their own countries, they cannot afford to ignore or hastily reject it. They must meet a proposal for a Wilsonian peace without victory combined with the Russian programme of 'no annexation and no indemnities.'"

Disguising Charity In Belgium Now

Whatever may be said regarding the ethics of the case, it must be recognized that the middle class people of Belgium are suffering more than any other. For not only are they unable to buy food on account of the enormous prices, but their past training makes them willing to starve before they will accept charity. The Belgian people themselves in their generosity have organized dining halls under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen, which have been called after Her Majesty—"Elizabeths." They are in reality patriotic and charitable institutions maintained by subscriptions. The table service is given by young ladies of the middle class.

We in Canada have held our Christmas festivites with a light heart, and it is well that we can do so, but we will be held up to a charge of ingratitude if we do not find ways and means to render such assistance as we can in the way of contributions to the Belgian Children's Health Fund and Belgian Orphans' Fund.

PETITIONS FOR COAL.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Dec. 28. — Mayor Bowlby has sent a wire to Fuel Controller McGrath urging that action be taken to have coal despatched to Brantford. He states that only coal dust, and very little of that, is coming in, and that immediate action is necessary. The civic distributing centre is active in distributing what supplies are available in such a manner as to prevent stores of coal from being laid in by those who have sufficient on hand to keep them until more coal arrives, but they have little to work on.

THE CULPRIT ESCAPES AS RUSSIANS DEBATE

Challenges Justice of Sentence as He is Led Out For Execution as a Spy—Diverts Soldier Guard

PETROGRAD. — The provincial newspaper Priasovsky Krai publishes an account of the escape of a Russian military prisoner who had been sentenced to be executed for selling military secrets to Germany and plotting explosions in two powder factories, which caused the death of 3,000 persons.

When a squad of soldiers and government agents had assembled to watch the hangman do his work the condemned man startled them by a proposal that, instead of executing him they give him a vote of approval. In the debate which ensued the executioner narrowly escaped hanging in place of the prisoner. The convicted man was elected secretary of the meeting and escaped while the vote was being taken. The meeting then voted to sentence the executioner to imprisonment for failure to do his duty.

Smiling contemptuously the prisoner was led to the scaffold. When the sentence had been read he raised his hands and demanded to be heard.

"No," objected the Prosecuting Attorney. "It is too late now. You should have spoken at the trial."

One of the squad of soldiers stepped out and said in a tone of amazement, "What? Why too late? Is not speech free? Thank God, there's no Tsarist regime to keep our mouths closed. Speak, comrade, speak!"

The condemned man began: "Comrades! Do you know who has condemned me? A court-martial constituted entirely of lower middle-class capitalists, inspired by the imperialists of the allied countries. The prosecutor, as I know absolutely, was a masquerading Kornilovist! Comrades! Shall not democracy itself speak? Shall I not say 'Hands off the creators and inspirers of the Internationale? Comrades! Can you possibly recognise a decision of this counter - revolutionary, anti - democratic court as binding on you?"

"Bravo!" shouted a guard. "Let me also speak."

The condemned man yielded the floor to the guard, who began: "Comrades, can anything be more atrocious than for us to permit the hanging of this man, who speaks as an apostle and champion of the Internationale? Comrades, I propose a vote of want of confidence in the executioner."

"I demand the right to speak," said the executioner. "Comrades, I solemnly protest against this universal condemnation of all executioners. I am just as good a revolutionist as any of you, and if the revolutionary people have imposed on me this sad duty, I am bound by my conscience. I demand, comrades, that you pass a resolution confirming the lawfulness of my acts. I hope that you understand that it is better to deprive one dangerous individual of his life rather than sacrifice thousands of useful lives."

"I move to discontinue your speech, Comrade Hangman," broke in the condemned man.

"And by what right, Comrade Exploder of Powder Magazines, do you constitute yourself the chairman?" replied the executioner vehemently.

"Chairman! Chairman! Let's elect a chairman," came from several parts of the audience. The election proceeded fast. It took only half an hour, and the condemned man had the office thrust upon him of secretary of the meeting.

At this point an unfortunate divergency arose among three of the Soldiers and Workmen's Delegates. One of them, a Minimalist, demanded the instant execution of the prisoner; another, a Socialist Revolutionary-Internationalist, suggested getting explanations from the Government; the third, a Maximalist, proposed that they should release the prisoner, and in his stead execute the executioner as a servant and agent of the counter-revolution.

The drummer got up to declaim against the third suggestion, but after his first sentence he began talking, not to the point, but to demand the transfer of all land without purchase to the masses. A vote of closure was invoked to cut his speech off.

A very eloquent speech followed by the Secretary of the Garrison Committee, although it was not much to the point. He said that the revolutionary government was now organized, and there was no reason now to fear the German spies or explosions at powder magazines, and therefore, in the name of the garrison, he called for the disclosure of all secret treaties.

The Chairman here turned the discussion to the actual subject, putting two questions to vote, first, the fate in store for the condemned prisoner; second, the fate in store for the executioner.

The voting showed a two-thirds majority in favour of executing the sentence, whereupon the condemned man expressed dissatisfaction as to the accuracy of the voting and demanded a formal division of the house. Thus the matter was carried to the prison court yard, and the ayes and nates were requested to line up on opposite sides of the gates. The result was still the same, but when they looked around for the Secretary, who was also the condemned prisoner, he was nowhere to be seen. It was explained that he had voted by marching out at the gate and had failed to return subsequently.

After some discussion, the meeting decided that the disappearance of the prisoner had disposed of any necessity of further discussing question Number One, and that there remained before the meeting only Question Two, namely, the fate in store for the executioner. This time the vote was unanimous, and the following resolution was passed:

"In consequence of the fact that the Revolutionary People on Feb. 28 to March 12 gained its freedom, not in order to down civil liberty; also in consequence of the fact that Executioner Demochkin neglected to execute sentence on the condemned man, the Assembly has decided to condemn Demochkin to three months' imprisonment. Long live the self-determination of the peoples on the basis of Russia, federative and indivisible!"

PRAIRIE PROVINCES IN GRIP OF COLD

Calgary, Alta., December 28. — The extreme cold weather of the past few days is having a marked effect on the railway traffic of the Prairie Provinces. There is a strong wind over almost the entire westerly section and it is this which has been mostly instrumental in the delays to passenger and freight traffic by reason of drifting.

The thermometers at Calgary registered from twenty-five below to eighteen below, with a temperature of twelve below about noon on Thursday.

A blizzard is reported in the Columbia Valley and in the Field locality.

A BUSINESS MAN FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Services of Mr. J. M. Greene Are Offered to the Electors

When voting day comes, it is as well to know something about the man you try to elect by marking your ballot for him. On the list of candidates there is the name of one prominent business man, Mr. J. M. Greene, who, judging by his remarkable record is eminently fitted to handle the work of the city on the Board of Education. Mr. Greene would be too modest to tell these facts himself, but the discerning public should show its appreciation of his allowing his name to come before them, by endorsing him as their first selection for this important position. Mr. Greene has been a resident of Peterborough for 26 years. To all who know him his sterling worth is appreciated. As a business man, he has in thirteen years built up one of the largest businesses in the city, having four branches in other large centres. This result has been achieved from a very small beginning, solely due to the energy and capability of Mr. Greene himself. The Greene Music Company limited now has a first-class financial rating, and it is the man who has done this whose services are now offered to the city in the executive capacity of a member of the Board of Education. In the writer's opinion, when the ballot is marked on voting day, the first choice should be J. M. Greene, and the other four selected from the other splendid candidates who are also willing to undertake the city's work.

Centre Ward Electors

Centre Ward Electors:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In appealing for your votes in my behalf as candidate for alderman for Centre Ward, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I am a firm believer in Municipal Government by Commission, recognizing the fact that better results are to be obtained under this system, and if elected will do all I can to have the system fully explained and an opportunity given to the ratepayers to decide the question for themselves.

The foot bridge at the C.P.R. speaks for itself as the result of my work when in Council. I take credit for this, as Councils in previous years tried to secure this bridge and were unsuccessful. This bridge is very convenient and useful to the general public.

There are several important matters coming before next year's Council requiring careful consideration, and I assure you if elected will have my careful coonsideration.

Trusting you will see to it that I am elected as your representative in Centre Ward.

Yours truly,
JOHN EDGAR.

The Buffalo Express says: "Until the Germans accept the world's standard of ethics and recognize the deep wrongfulness of such policies as these, any peace that could be negotiated with them would be simply the triumph of evils, would mean merely that the whole fight would have to be waged again from the beginning."

The Pitsburg Dispatch says: "The newest offer is interesting only as proof of increasing German perception of what the terms of peace must be."

Indianapolis Star: "The thought is very carefully presented to the simple Bolsheviki mind that the only thing standing in the way of peace is the fact that the allies insist on fighting."

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "The only probable results are that the Bolsheviki will be deluded and the people of the central powers will be impressed that their Governments are trying to make peace."

The Boston Globe says: "As foreseen, this document comes with the allies entirely unprepared and disunited in their political strategy regarding peace. The offer is apparently so liberal in its terms that, in order to prevent political disruption in their own countries, they cannot afford to ignore or hastily reject it. They must meet a proposal for a Wilsonian peace without victory combined with the Russian programme of 'no annexation and no indemnities.'"

Disguising Charity In Belgium Now

Whatever may be said regarding the ethics of the case, it must be recognized that the middle class people of Belgium are suffering more than any other. For not only are they unable to buy food on account of the enormous prices, but their past training makes them willing to starve before they will accept charity. The Belgian people themselves in their generosity have organized dining halls under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen, which have been called after Her Majesty—"Elizabeths." They are in reality patriotic and charitable institutions maintained by subscriptions. The table service is given by young ladies of the middle class.

We in Canada have held our Chistmas festivites with a light heart, and it is well that we can do so, but we will be held up to a charge of ingratitude if we do not find ways and means to render such assistance as we can in the way of contributions to the Belgian Children's Health Fund and Belgian Orphans' Fund.

PETITIONS FOR COAL.

Brantford Mayor Urges Fuel Controller to Act.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Dec. 28. — Mayor Bowlby has sent a wire to Fuel Controller McGrath urging that action be taken to have coal despatched to Brantford. He states that only coal dust, and very little of that, is coming in, and that immediate action is necessary. The civic distributing centre is active in distributing what supplies are available in such a manner as to prevent stores of coal from being laid in by those who have sufficient on hand to keep them until more coal arrives, but they have little to work on.

MR. JOHN McINTOSH MAY OPPOSE REEVE RYE IN NORTH MONAGHAN

The municipal nominations at May's School House in North Monaghan on Monday may produce opposition for Reeve Rye. It has been mooted more or less that Mr. John McIntosh will be a candidate for the Reeveship, and he has confirmed the rumours by stating that he expected to re-enter the fight.

Robert Dobbin has been named as a probable opponent for Deputy Reeve Bell, and should he contest this office he will leave a vacancy in the Council that will have to be filled.

The members of the Council this year were John Williams, Thos. Henry, and Robert Dobbin. There have been few suggestions of a contest, except for the Reeveship, and both Mr. Rye and Mr. McIntosh have been more frequent visitors in the city during the past two weeks than is their wont.

A PEERAGE ROMANCE CLAIM TO MARQUISATE

LONDON, Dec. 28.—A gardener's claim to be the Marquis of Waterford was the subject of a case heard in the Court of Appeal this week. The claimant, George Beresford, a gardener, also known as Tooth, declares that he is the child born to the fifth Marquis of Waterford, March 29, 1873, but said to have been stillborn. For the Marquis, on the other hand, it is contended that the claimant is the child of the sister, named Tooth, of a cook in the employ of the Marquis at the time.

The present action was an appeal of the seventh Marquis of Waterford and his trustees from an order by Justice Horridge refusing to allow them in the forthcoming action to use evidence already given by a Mrs. Priscilla White and Mrs. Vivian in a suit to perpetuate testimony.

Mr. Hume Williams, K.C., M.P., who appeared for the marquis, said the defence to the legitimacy declaration suit was that the wife of the fifth marquis died on April 4, 1873, after having given birth to a stillborn child on March 29, 1873. The mother and the child were buried.

ADOPTED CHILD FROM WORKHOUSE.

Some time before her death Lady Waterford had a cook, whose sister had given birth to an illegitimate child in a workhouse. Lady Waterford, out of sympathy for the girl, took the child out of the workhouse, had it educated, and after the death Lord Waterford continued the education of the child. "That child" said the K. C., "we contend is plaintiff in the legitimacy declaration suit, Geo. Tooth, a gardener." The only people who knew anything about the matter were two old people. One was Mrs. Priscilla White, formerly a Miss Kynaston, a maid-companion to Lady Waterford. She was the lady who was instrumental in taking the illegitimate child out of the workhouse and in arranging for its support and education. The second lady was a Mrs. Vivian, who was formerly a Mrs. Pryce, a great friend of Lady Waterford, and who gave evidence as to the birth of the stillborn child.

ABUSIVE POSTCARDS.

After the evidence of these ladies to perpetuate testimony in 1913, nothing happened until 1914, when claimant brought an action for slander against Mrs. White, complaining that she had told her solicitor that he (Tooth) was not the Marquis of Waterford, that he was the legitimate son of Georgina Tooth a cook, and was born in the workhouse of the Holborn Union This statement of claim was struck out. On the very day that the appeal against the action being struck out was dismissed the claimant commenced to send abusive letters and postcards, not only to Mrs. White, but to her husband, Mr. Cheetham White. The references in the letters and postcards to a conspiracy was a suggestion that the Dowager Marchioness had used Mrs. White for the purpose of changing the children and that she received £500 a year for what she did.

Mr. Colam said Lady Waterford's child was not stillborn, but was brought from the marquis' house, where the birth took place, to a Mrs. Jones, where he had been ever since. They wished to see Mrs. White in the witness box, to put dates to her which would show that her story that the child was 15 months old when taken from the workhouse was untrue. The child was infant in arms.

COURT ALLOWS APPEAL.

The court allowed defendant's appeal, holding that the evidence taken in the suit to perpetuate testimony was available and could be read in court at the trial, which would probably not take place until after the Christmas vacation. They also refused to compel Mrs. White who was ill, and Mrs. Vivian, who was 76, to attend the trial, as evidence had been given that they were not well enough to be present at the trial.

Well, this cork has the record flow so. She broke something before she started in. What on earth was that? Her promise to come.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Controversy Is At End

The Examiner is in receipt of several letters dealing with the recent elections, and especially with the women voters. There has already been a large number of such letters published, and the Examiner can see no reason in continuing the controversy any further; so the letters received today, and any others sent in, will not be printed.

200,000 MOTHERS OF ILLEGITIMATE PRUSSIAN BABIES

BERLIN TOWN COUNCILLOR DECLARES SUCH BIRTHS "PROOF OF MORAL HEALTHINESS."

Amsterdam. — Ten per cent. of the children born in Prussia in war time are illegitimate, according to statements made in the Prussian House of Representatives during the debate on the vital statistics. The Berlin town councillor, Dr. Engel, in an article in Vorwaerts, makes the statement that this large proportion of illegitimate children is "evidence of the moral healthiness of the German race." He adds, in the course of an appeal for the withdrawal of all distinctions between legitimate and illegitimate children:

"Paradoxical though it may seem, this great number of illegitimate children represent a measure of the morality of our people. They afford evidence that, after all the idea of the restriction of families, an idea which the war with special emphasis bids us combat, has not yet penetrated the masses.

"The terrible fact, however, is that only 136 out of every 1,000 illegitimate children reach their nineteenth year as compared with 512 in the case of legitimate children. The death rate of illegitimates is a convincing plea for the improvement of the situation of unmarried mothers and their children. There should be a uniform birth certificate, and women who were engaged to fallen soldiers should be awarded the title 'frau.'

"War time, owing to the card system is a torture for the unmarried mother. Every journey for a food card is a path of thorns and a source of fresh mortification and humiliation. In the card issuing office, and again in the shops, she must again and again make confessions of her fault. The awarding to her of the title frau would remove many obstacles and much mental torture."

The number of unmarried mothers in Prussia, Dr. Engel states, has now reached a total of nearly 200,000 yearly.

GERMAN FAMILY'S SUBSTITUTE MEAL

A pathetically realistic story of personal experience with "scientific" substitutes for food is told by the editor of the "Bergische Arbeiterttimme," of Essen:

After all, the science of substitutions is not so very intricae. Every genuine product may be imiated. An egg, for example, is yellow within. There are many other yellow things which, though they are not made by the hen, are none the less truly yellow. Therefore, some such mysterious yellowish article is provided with a plausible title, and presto! we have a substitute for eggs, and so right along the whole line of victuals.

Yesterday our spouse hit on the idea of preparing a dinner wholly and solely from such substitutes, a project for which she may be forgiven in view the maddening and saddening daily unt after food.

The banquet was opened with a spicy soup concocted from a mystery ons orange colored powder. Then came a pasty compounded from "Chanticleer," the latest egg substitute, mixed with imitation pea flour, and "artificial sausage." The pastry was fried in the "Hindenburg" fat substitute, and finally we enjoyed a salad well soaked with the oil substitute known as "Salatfix."

After dinner we set to calculating its cost and we arrived at a total which was about three-fold more than if we had eaten real eggs, real fat, real sausages, real flour, and real oil.

We should like to know to what branch of economy this substitute regime may be said to belong.

Veterans To Get Preference On Staffs Of New Battalions

TORONTO, Dec. 28. —Camp orders issued from the Toronto Military District headquarters contain very definite instructions regarding the compositions of the depot battalions of the Central Ontario Regiment, of which four have now been authorized in this district. The orders explicitly point out that, so far as possible, officers, staff sergeants, drummers, band corporals, bandsmen, pioneers and employed men should be selected from those who have returned from overseas service.

VESUVIUS IN ERUPTION

(Specail to the Toronto Star and The The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, Dec. 29.—Mount Vesuvius is again in violent eruption, according to word received here to-day.

Only the man who holds the key to the situation is in a position to open a deadlock.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Whatever I have or have not, I have lots of time to review the past, and the name of J. W. Flavelle has been brought before us very prominently this year. Now, he and I started life near the same time, in the same county, belonging to the same denomination religiously, favoured with the same name partly, and took the name of Joseph; in the Old Testament and also in the New both were very highly honoured. I have also been told that he was blessed with a very fine mother. And Billy Sunday says, "Why, if all the children to-day had good mothers, and were given a right start, the devil would close his doors, bank his fires, and hell would be for rent by the Fourth of July." Now, there is one thing in which we are all alike. No difference, either age or sex—we all want or desire to make money. I believe this is true in all countries, under all conditions. Now, J. W. Flavelle started, as I knew him, by keeping a store on Simcoe Street. I started, as I remember, by helping to clean up the land as a boy, and when 11 years of age ploughing with a yoke of oxen. Yes, and took first prize as a boy under 18 years, but not with oxen, and one prize after, but not first. So I farmed or helped to farm in summer, and in winter took a span of horses and went back to what was known as the shanties in those days. Of course, at work long before daylight, at $1 per day. And what appears surprising yet, the size of the load which they gave me to draw; and that any man or number of men, created in the image of God, upheld by His almighty power, blest with the power of speech, could use so much foul language. I was dubbed "the preacher" there. I am thankful in looking back, through the goodness of my Heavenly Father and also an earthly father, I lived to see better days. But I have read with a great deal of interest some things which have been printed about J. W. Flavelle, and have also looked in the Bible to find out something about riches. I think that Jacob must have been a rich man, and we cannot admire all the ways in which he got it, but he was mighty in prayer. (Read Genesis 32, from verse 23.) That must be a good point in any person. Job also was a rich man. But we find from the 19th of Matthew that riches take a terrible grip. The young man who came to our Saviour with the words, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do?" when he was told, went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions. A terrible thing if wealth or riches keep us out of heaven. I think the largest boast that I ever made when I found that I could not farm very well was to say that I could pick up enough for my partner and myself. That was five or six years ago; but I think living has about doubled since that. We are led to believe that J. W. Flavelle has kept up the family altar, or reading a portion of God's Word, and kneeling in prayer in the family. This in itself is one great means of success. Is it dying out in the world? Is vital godliness low in the world? Is this the cause of this awful struggle in the nations? As far as stepping aside from the right, the best of men have done it. It is not the depth or blackness of the sin, but the depth of the repentance that tells. Look at David's life, and then read Psalm 51. See how much he gives us in the Psalms to think and ponder over. See the depth of his repentance. It is so easy to step aside. I have been there more than once. I know what I am saying. Look at Rev. Mr. Peever, preaching for years in one of our largest churches the great truths of our holy Christianity. A grand man from whatever point you view him, leaving this city and going to another, and stepping aside, only for a few minutes probably. Now, we do not know how many tears or how deep the sorrow, or how it may drive him afresh to the Word of God for help. Remembering that in that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness.

The dying thief rejoiced to see
That fountain in his day;
And here may I (or here do I),
though vile as he,
Wash all my sins away.

I had a brother that used to think something of me, or at least, I thought something of him, and at his wedding I had the honour of being best man, or groomsman. Well, he lived on the south side of Rice Lake, I lived on the north side, and we used to visit with our families three or four times in the year—a grand time for the little people. Well, he imbibed, it was said, infidel views. One night late we got talking on religion, and after some time he said, "I don't want to say any more," and got up and went away. But before he left this world he wrote to me, or rather, got his daughter to write, telling me how wonderfully things had changed. Reader, from my experience in life, infidel views do not look well when you come to know that you have soon to cross the river. Come now is the word.—Yours,

J. H. Taylor.

Want Balance Maintained In Raw Materials

WOULD THUS CO-ORDINATE AND STRENGTHEN ALL WAR EFFORTS

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—Creation of a War Trade Board to do for Canada what a commission, similar in character is already doing for the United States, is being strongly urged upon the Government by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. A deputation of manufacturers will wait upon Sir Robert Borden in connection with the matter as soon as he returns to the Capital.

The functions of a War Trade Board in Canada would be to effect an adequate distribution and conservation of material entering into manufacture of war supplies. Since the entry of the United States into the war it has been found difficult to strike a proper balance between the needs of the two countries in regard to raw material.

In some cases American manufacturers have been able to corner supplies to the detriment of factories in Canada, and in other instances American factories have found it difficult to procure needed materials from Canada.

A War Trade Commission would ensure a fair distribution between the two countries insuring adequate supplies of material to all manufacturers of war supplies in both countries, thus co-ordinating and strengthening their war efforts.

TOO MANY HEART AILMENTS.

Military Authorities Will Have 500 Men Re-examined.

HAMILTON, Dec. 28.— During the recent registration in connection with the Military Service Act, 1,500 local men were placed in Category E. Lt.-Col. R. A. Robertson, chief recruiting officer for this district, made the statement to-day that he believed fully 500 of these men, were they re-examined, would prove to be all right and fit for service in the first draft. Examining physicians have been led to believe locally that many fit men indulged in self-enforced violent exercise, and some administered powerful drugs to themselves to increase their heart action in an alarming way. Five hundred of the 1,500 who were placed in Category E were suffering from valvular heart disease and steps are under way to have all of these men re-examined three or four times if need be to determine if their defect is natural or brought on for the purpose of evading military service.

WALTER VARTY AGAIN REMANDED FOR WEEK

The charge against Walter Varty of Havelock, of having made a false declaration under the Military Service Act was remanded yesterday until Thursday, January 3rd. Magistrate Langley went to Havelock, but the rest of the Peterborough party missed the noon train. At the station they were informed that it was an hour overdue. The group returned up town for lunch and in the meantime the express clocked in and had reached Indian River when the local officials arrived back at the station.

No More Dog Killing Or Catching By Police

The police are through with dog catching and keeping. They disposed of their three canine prisoners yesterday afternoon and were surfeited with the very crudity of the proceedings in which they had no choice. The dogs were shot in the cells, but their surviving brothers of the street will see the end of a dog's age if their removal depends upon the police as executioners. Henceforth, the force will endeavour to bring the owners of unleashed, unmuzzled dogs to court, but the Council will have to find some effective way of rounding up the wandering dogs and of killing those that are unchained. In other words a dog catcher will have to be appointed.

BASEBALL IN WAR-TIME.

Comforts of Travelling Not the Same For the Players Next Season—Announcement Monday.

CHICAGO Dec. 28.—Officials of the two major league baseball clubs of this city to-day discussed the probable effect Government control of the railroads would have on spring training trips and the regular schedule of games during the season.

While radical changes are looked for by the baseball men in handling the teams on the present railroads, it was said that the new order of things would not seriously disarrange plans of the Chicago Nationals to condition in Pasadena, Calif., or curtail the training trip of the White Sox in Texas.

STOVE EXPLODED

Mrs. Steath, Rogers St., Has a Narrow Escape

Mrs. Steath, 465 Roger street, had a narrow escape from serious injury this morning at 10.45. She had filled the stove with fuel, not knowing the pipes to be frozen, when the steam generated causing the water front to explode. Mrs. Steath had left the stove only a minute or so before the accident. The Fire Department was called and found the stove completely blown up and the carpets blazing. Very little damage, outside the destruction of the stove, was done.

A SOLDIER OF FRANCE

A dozen or more soldier boys, just landed from America sat in front of one of the cafes in Paris, not far from their own quarters.

These bright-faced, square-jawed, straight-limbed young men from the farms and villages of the Middle West, had almost in advance of any signal, answered President Wilson's call for men, and were the first wearing the uniform of the United States to land in France. Their welcome, as they stepped on to French soil, their welcome from the towns and cities through which they passed, and the wonderful hurrahs and cheers and hand clapping which the generous mothers and daughters and little children and old men in Paris had given them that morning had had a sobering effect on these gay young men. They had been taught much in a few hours, and war and those who must be left behind when men are needed to fight, became more real than their fresh, light hearted minds had thus far grasped.

After the march through the Paris streets they had been allowed a little time to themselves, and with that natural and genuine adaptability, which is always so delightful, these newcomers made themselves at once "at home" in various parts of that beautiful city. Of this number our dozen young men had sought the hospitality and cool protection of this cafe—when the attention of one of the group was directed to what was to him an unusual sight. There, being slowly pulled up the street by one forlorn, poor horse, came a shabby weather worn hearse, followed by one mourner—a poor, tired, little old woman, who showed in every line of her face and in her manner, an awful sorrow—a loss of hope—utter despair. The American's eyes and his entire expression proved his fine, manly feeling of sympathy, and the smile of a moment before disappeared, when suddenly he stood up and, pointing to the hearse, he cried to his mates: "Fellows, do you see that? Do you see that hearse? Do you see the uniform, they have wrapped around the coffin? It's a French soldier, fellows. Let us do him honor. Fall in!"

And without a word of question every man took his place in line behind the poverty stricken little woman, and the example so impulsively but naturally set, was followed by other loiterers near the cafe, and before they had crossed the next street the line had grown to a hundred, and when the cemetery gate was reached a thousand sober respectful people had joined these young American soldiers.

The poor little woman saw all this with wonder and with pride. That her soldier son, to whom she had said a long and last good-bye, should receive this honour, was almost more than she could bear, and after the brief service at the grave she turned to the fresh faced young leader, and with tears streaming down her cheeks she grasped his hand and kissed it. Then turning again to the newly made grave she crossed herself devoutly and then slowly and with head bowed walked past the silent assemblage.

Once more the young men in uniform stepped out from the line, and reverently lifting his cap, said in a low voice: "Now fellows—all together—Hip, Hip, Hip, Hurrah!" and so holy and so full of sincerity and true respect was the message of hope and good will called out to the sad little mourner that those in the procession who were French found themselves joining in the last glorious cheer with their own "Hourra," given with a loyal feeling of "God-speed little women."

And as she walked on in spite of her tears and sadness, her heart was full of great thankfulness and of honest pride, that her beloved son—a soldier of France—had received the honour which the sacrifice of his life for his country had made his due.—H. G. S., in Pall Mall Gazette.

AMERICANS BEING TAUGHT TO EXPECT GERMAN CRUELTY

ATROCITIES OF ENEMY LIKELY TO CAUSE TAKING OF FEW PRISONERS.

Washington, D. C. — American troops who go into the trenches will know before they leave the United States the kind of foe they are fighting against. If they take few prisoners their officers will not reprimand them very severely, although reprisals will not be a part of the American military policy for the present.

The publication of General Pershing's general order announcing that German troops had murdered an American sentry after having taken him prisoner by cutting his throat from ear to ear, is accepted as a case in point. The War Department has received no official confirmation of the report but there is no doubt that it is General Pershing's purpose to let American soldiers know the fate which might befall them.

It is not the policy of the Administration to encourage reprisals or to follow the example of the Germans. There is no intention of violating the rules of warfare. It would not be surprising to army officers if the Germans, in accordance with the practices they have followed heretofore, would vent their resentment against Americans by systematic barbarities in the hope of intimidating the men now under training. It has been shown by several incidents, proven beyond question, that brutality is the military gospel of the German army, and the men are encouraged to instill fear by butchery and bloodshed.

The troops in the camps in the United States, as well as those who have gone to France, are being told as a part of their training, something of what the Germans have done in Belgium, in Roumania and in Northern France. In some of the camps, where a large proportion of the men have only a vague idea of what German domination means and its threat to the peace of the United States, the terrible record of German atrocities in occupied territory is being told in the form of lectures by officers.

It is the conviction of the American officers that the mistreatment of American soldiers will have the effect of strengthening their determination to put down German brutality by the defeat of the enemy and dispelling whatever traces of indifference might still remain toward the failure or success of the war.

WANT TO FIGHT

LONDON, Dec. 28.—A number of young men in middle and western Ireland, according to a Dublin despatch to The Times, have applied for passports to enable them to go to the United States to join Irish regiments in the American army. The Government authorities up to this time, it is added, have refused to grant such permits.

New Year's Rally in the Methodist Sunday Schools

The Methodist churches of the city have arranged for a grand rally of their Sunday School forces on New Year's Day at 10.30 a.m. This is in line with similar plans which have been carried out very successfully in other Canadian cities for a number of years. The five schools, St. James', Mark Street, Grace, Trinity and George Street, will co-operate, and will assemble at their own school rooms at 10 o'clock. Thence they will proceed to the corner of Hunter and George Streets, where, under the direction of the marshall, Mr. C. N. Meserve, of the Y.M.C.A., they will form into line, and headed by the Salvation Army Band, will march to the George Street Church.

A most interesting programme has been prepared and printed for the occasion.

Rev. B. Greatrix will preside, and His Honour Judge Huycke will deliver an address. Each school will provide a selection, and each superintendent will give a minute talk.

A large orchestra will assist in the musical service and the singing of appropriate hymns, the words of which will be found on the printed programme, will be a special feature of the gathering. Great interest is being taken in the plan, and it is expected that a very large number will be in attendance.

CHIEF GRANGE FROST BITTEN

Chief Grange had his face and chin badly frozen this afternoon in answering a call to a chimney fire at 504 Bonaoord street. No damage was done by the blaze and the Chief was the principal loser as a result of the alarm.

The Duke of Connaught Visits U.S. Camp in France - Other War Pictures of Merit

German prisoners in camp on the Meuse front. One of them, utterly tired out, has fallen asleep, much to the amusement of a fellow-prisoner.

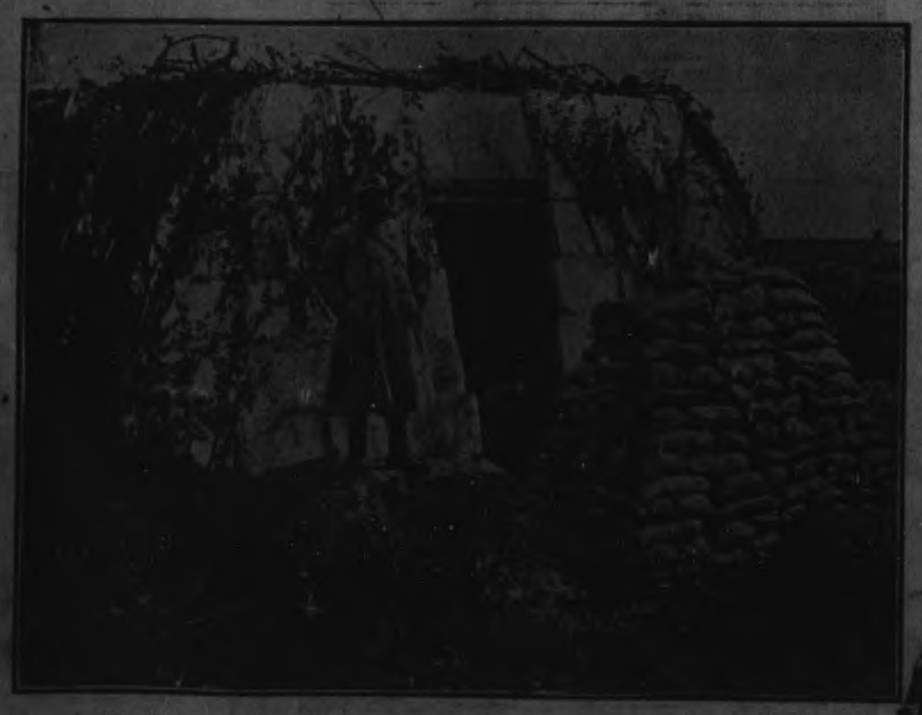
His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught visits the school of instruction for American artillery officers in France. The above picture shows the Duke inspecting American officers who are training at this camp on the western front.

Looking out on the City of Jerusalem from the church atop the Mount of Olives.

A group of Turkish prisoners in a Siberian prison camp. The remarkable thing about these men is their age. Most of them seem to be past middle years, yit they were able to put up a vigorous fight against the Russians. This is evidence of the scarcity of young men in Turkey.

A strong man and a firm friend of England: The new French Premier, M. Clemenceau. M. Georges Clemenceau has long been prominent as an exceptionally devoted friend to Great Britain, and also as an irreconcilable enemy of Germany.

French and British troops are now in the trenches along the Piave and on the Asiago Plateau helping [illegible] from the Teuton tide. These French "Blue Devils" are in ambush awaiting the Hun.



A picture that gives one a splendid idea of the solidity with which the French build their concrete shelters. This particular one in Belgium is partially camouflaged with branches, and as an added protection sacks of sandbags have been piled around the sides and before the entrance.

All the British dominions are represented in this group of men on leave. They are a happy lot indeed.

Land Cruisers on The Field - Scenes on Italian and West Fronts

A memento of the German bombardments of Ypres. Suggesting the "Leaning Tower" of Pisa after bombardmtnt: Ypres reservoir tower.

Just before the regulated "Topple": A tank of the type used at Cmabrai, in action.

With the water nearly drained off: A lock on the Ypres Canal.

An Italian scene. The head of the valleys leading to the northern end of Lake Garda. The town of Riva stands at the northern end of Lake Garda, which is long and narrow, and in fact occupits a valley between two almost parallel ranges of hills. Two streams flow into this northern end of the lake. One of them, the Sarca, flows past the picturesque little town of Arco. The hills pitch up steeply from the lake in sugar-loaf form. Away to the right beyond them lie Rovoreto and the upper waters of the Adige.

General Franchet D'Esperey, commander of the northern French army group, examining an armored German battleplane brought down on the Aisne front, Germans, as well as French and Americans, now painting devices on their machines. The head of this bird has been destroyed by French shot, but apparenly it is a goose.

Front view of one of the tanks in action before Cambrai. This shows the forward portion of No. 8 lying on some soft ground. Sacks are loaded with soft earth, and show the strenuous time which Crusty has had in the earlier part of the day. Two heavy guns carrying useful guns.

The Cambrai battle. A deep dug-out as dressing-station. German prisoners hauling up a wounded Scot by a windlass from a deep dug-out. A Highland battalion's advanced dressing-station.

The former Premier inspects the officers of a French division in Italy. Their arrival in Italy was the signal for scenes of great enthusiasm. The same warm welcome was extended to the British soldiers who have recently been sent there. M. Painleve is here seen offering his congratulations to the officers of a French division now in Italy.

- Incidents of the Great War and Canadians Engaged in It -

Harry McVeigh, Oso, Ont., officially reported died of wounds on Nov. 5th, but word has been received since stating that he is still alive, and admitted to 2nd West General Hospital, England, suffering from wounds in tht chest. "E chaws our bloomin' arm"—but not, in this case, in malice. An exceptional camel. The description supplied with this official photograph, relating to the Camel Transport Corps on the Palestine front, says merely that the animal seen with a soldier's hand in its mouth is "an exceptional camel—one in a thousand."

Our ever-advancing front line: A communication trench bridged for cavalry to cross. Trench-lines, however indispensable to infantry, are, in the case of other arms, obstacles to free movement. In particular is this si in places where it may be necessary to cross winding communication trenches in rear of the fire-trench line.

An anti-aircraft gun station on the Belgian front, with long belts of cartridges ready for instant use.

The propeller tube of the great German Zeppelin L-49, which was brought down intact at Bourbonne-Les-Bains, France, added to the war trophies in the court of the Invalides.

Stretcher cases at a dressing-station on the western front, following the Battle of Cambrai.

After part of one of the twin-screw ships under construction at Ivry-on-the-Seine, near Paris. The need for coastwise and river vessels has caused the French to use concrete in shipbuilding as yielding the quickest results.

Boat built of concrete under the direction of the United States Shipping Board is launched at Savannah, G. The craft is sent bottom side up into the water, where it almost immediately rights itself, owing to the low centre of gracity, and the water is then pumped out.

ALL ABOUT STRENGTH AND VIGOR

MR. READER:

Here is something we have to offer you absolutely for nothing—a little private book of special information about the legitimate uses and unnatural abuses of manly strength; about the preservation and its possible self-restoration, an illustrated pocket compendium of 5,000 words, 72 pages and 30 half-tone photograph reproductions—which I am very pleased to send by mail, absolutely free of charge, in a plain sealed envelope, to any man, young or elderly, single or married, who writes for it.

Over a million of these books have been thus sent to applicants all over the world since my free offer first appeared. Publishers are charging as much as $2 for books on sex subjects, while my book is free. Therefore, reader, if you would like a great fund of inside information relating directly to the subject of manly strength, all put in perfectly plain, easy-to-read language, with many hints that you can surely apply to your own self, no matter how strong you may be, or how nervous or rundown you may be—if you want to know the facts about this particular subject, given to you without a single scare, then fill in the coupon below, send to me, and receive my book sealed, by return mail. In one part of this little publication I describe a mechanical invention of my own, which I call the SANDEN vitaliser, something you wear at night as an aid to the restoration of waning strength. You are not expected to get one of these appliances unless you want to. The book is complete, and there is absolutely nothing you are required to buy or pay. Therefore, please send your name and address to-day.

SANDEN, Author.

MANHOOD WINS IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE.

MANHOOD! The quality which rules the world to-day. My friend, there never was a time in the history of the human race when real, sturdy manhood, manly vigor and manly courage counted for as much as they do now, this very minute. No matter what your years, whether you are 20 or 60, you must be either entirely in the race or entirely out of it. It is invariably the fellow who proves up strongest in this human strength that forges to the front, while weaklings stand aside; it is he also who is in most demand, and most sought after by all classes of his community, simply because he radiates that marvellous magnetic influence which only an abundant vigor and rugged manly health can radiate. I believe any man can hope to completely develop or mature this same vigorous strength, no matter what his past may have been, provided he is willing to REALLY MAKE THE EFFORT, and provided, of course, he is not weighed down by extreme old age or is not incurably diseased. To my mind, the road of the one who wants more vitality is perfectly plain, but it is a road that any man MUST travel if he attains the highest ideals in this respect. See information in my free book.

As to the SANDEN Vitaliser, previously mentioned, will say it is a little mechanical appliance, weighing but a few ounces, which you wear at night. This Vitaliser generates and sends forth a certain soft, penetrating force which I call Vitality. It drives this Vitality into your nerves, blood, muscles, and organs as you sleep. It is quieting to the nervous system—or, at least, so users say. Men write that it takes pain out of the back often at once, and restores vital strength in 90 days. Remember, the general information of the free book is independent of this Vitaliser, and you are not expected to get one of these little appliances unless you want to. You can write me later as to that, if you so desire. With special attachments, my Vitaliser is used by women as well as men for rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc. If you live in or near this city I should be most pleased to have you call in person at my office, where you may see and test the Vitaliser free of charge. Hours—9 to 6. Or if convenient to call, do not fail to write for the free booklet. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case.

TO GET FREE BOOK PLEASE USE COUPON.

If you cannot call, please fill in the coupon below and send it. You will receive free, sealed, by return mail, our 72-page illustrated book, containing 5,000 words, a complete compendium of useful information for man, young or elderly, single or married, who want the truth about the subject of vital strength, its preservation, its possible self-restoration, and its legitimate uses and wanton abuses. You get it all free.

Ontario Pamphlets to Take Place of Home Production.

The pamphlets issued in recent months by the Ontario Resources Committee and similar organizations, of war recipes and canning recipes, are considered much better than those issued in the United Kingdom, according to recent correspondence with the Provincial Government.

Major-General Crozier Will Be Censured For Failure To Get Supplies

Senate Committee of Inquiry to Arraign Ordnance Chief Without Mercy—Useless Cartridges Were Sent to American Troops in France.

WILL LOSE NO TIME

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 31.—"Crozierism" in the War Department—although it may be called by another name—will be arraigned without mercy by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs when it reports the result of its investigation into the causes of delay and other forms of inefficiency in equipping the American armies at home and abroad with guns, ammunition, clothing and other necessary supplies.

From an authoritative source it was learned that the committee is altogether dissatisfied with the excuses given by Major General Sharpe, Quartermaster General, and Major-General William Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, for the failure of their bureaus to meet the war emergency.

The report stands not so much for a personal criticism of General Crozier as for the system under which the War Department has been for many years operating—a system which has prevented it from being read, even after every sign had pointed toward war for months, to provide adequately for the great armies which the United States raised so promptly.

Useless Cartridges Recalled.

The Senate Committee has not forgotten the fact that a few months ago a quantity of small arms ammunition was sent by the War Department to France to supply the American troops there, and that much of it was found to be useless. The cartridges simply would not "go off" when the trigger was pulled. General Crozier at that time explained that this was due to the poor quality of chemicals used, which although they stood the test of the army inspectors, deteriorated after a short time. He said the mistake had been remedied, and the useless ammunition replaced.

But, as a member of the committee expressed it, the wonder is that a system should exist in the War Department under which such a mistake could be possible. The trouble with these cartridges was that the chemicals used in the firing cap were not perfect. What the committee wants to know is how it happened that these cartridges were made at a government arsenal by a formula which had been in use for many years when that formula is now admitted to have been imperfect.

"Explanations Do Not Explain"

"Explanations that do not explain" is likely to be the keynote of the committee's comment on the inefficiency of the War Department.

Members of the committee said that it had been decided to lose no time in bringing to the attention of the War Department conditions justifiable criticism. As soon as defects are uncovered or failures brought to light Secretary Baker will which may be made the occasion for be asked to remedy the situation.

In accordance with this policy it is expected that the committee will have something special to say about the condition of affairs in the Ordnance Division. One member of the committee said to-day that a majority of his colleagues were of the opinion that guns have not been made as rapidly as they should have been made, and the disposition of the committee is to lay the blame at the door of General Crozier. It is possible that the committee might suggest a complete change in the present system in order not to be dominated by a single office with authority to hold up the entire munitions programme.

What suggestions the Senate committee will offer in its report for the renovation of the Ordnance Department have not been determined.

Montreal—Eggs: Market for new-laid specials firm. Storage market strong under increasing demand. Two cars of storage eggs reported received from Winnipeg. Local stocks reported considerably reduced. Receipts for week ending 22nd December were 1,255 cases, as compared with 1,488 for the previous week and 2,845 for same week last year. Receipts since 1st May to date, 298,041 cases, as against 624,826 cases in 1916. Poultry: Receipts of poultry not heavy considering the season. The milder weather the early part of last week affected sales somewhat, though practically all varieties show a slight advance. Sales of choice turkeys were made up to 35c per lb.

Winnipeg—Eggs: Receipts of new laid show slight increase, due to favourable weather. Increased quantities of storage going into consumptive channels, the situation greatly improved. Some of the larger holders now in position to relieve the smaller. Several small lots have changed hands, and it is quite evident the stocks will automatically clear up. Poultry: Business good at unchanged prices.

Regina—Eggs: Practically no eggs coming forward, prices steady. Poultry: Trade brisk, one firm reporting purchases of 7,000 pounds of poultry live and dressed during last week. Prices on live chicken and fowl down 1c.

Vancouver—Eggs: Market slowly declined, due to increased supplies of fresh gathered. Specials jobbing up to 65c, with pullet eggs 50c to 55c; latter form large proportion of receipts. Imports last week included 100 cases States eggs. Poultry: Dressed broilers, fowl, geese, ducks, and turkeys were higher, the latter selling up to 43c. Eleven cases of turkeys reported imported.

Calgary and Edmonton—Eggs: The market practically the same as last week. Storage stocks reported moving satisfactorily. Practically no fresh specials being received. Poultry: Prices holding under somewhat heavier receipts.

New York—Eggs: Market last week fluctuated considerably due largely to supplies being dependent upon the weather. Frost damage is reported in arrivals. Market closed 1c up on fresh gathered and also on storage. Stocks in storage reported reduced by 42,000 cases during first three days of last week. Poultry: Live poultry receipts moderate for a holiday week, which under an active demand sold at advances all round. The dressed poultry market was strong at former prices for most grades.

Chicago—Eggs: This market has ruled steady on storage prices during past week, opening this week (Monday) at 36 1-2c to 37 for extras and 36c to 36 1-2c for firsts. Fresh gathered have declined, extras ruling at 52c to 53c and firsts 42c to 47c, according to quality. Poultry: Market inclined to weakness on most grades, with 2c advance on live turkeys.

Buffalo—Eggs: Demand for fresh laid limited on account of wide spread between fresh and storage. Former quoted at 56c to 64c and the latter 40c. Poultry: With light receipts, market for live poultry strong last week, with prices ruling 1c to 3c over previous week. Receipts of dressed poultry also light, and under active demand market was strong at advances. New Year demand for roasting chickens and ducks reported to give promise of active trade.

Eggs: There is no evidence in the reports coming from country points in Ontario and the Maritime Provinces of any increase in production of eggs. Many of those arriving are stale held stock, which are not wanted, as they are not as good as the average cold storage stock. For really new-laid specials the demand is very keen. On the farmers' markets in Toronto on Saturday 85c and 90c was the retail price. The middle West reports slight increase in new-laid, due to favourable weather conditions. British Columbia shows decided increase in pullets, and the nearby United States points are shipping to Vancouver.

The storage situation is gradually clearing up throughout the East and West. Many of the smaller holders of stocks have sold out during the past week. One dealer reports he sold a few hundred cases he was carrying west of Toronto at 43c f.o.b. There has been no advance in prices, but there is a much firmer undertone. Toronto continues to be higher than Montreal.

The United States markets are about steady at the recent advance in storage, but apparently the edge is off for the present. Consumption is said to be extremely good, and a favourable warehouse report is anticipated for the first of the year. The sentiment in the trade will be greatly influenced by weather conditions as the season advances. On the present basis of cost at Chicago storage eggs cannot be laid down here under 43c.

Poultry: The Christmas poultry market has been good. Very little if any stock will be carried over the holidays. This is a marked contrast with last year, when large blocks went into the freezers rather than take losses on original cost. Prices are exceptionally good. Turkeys were jobbing this week (Monday) at Toronto at 40c. Receipts of turkeys were very light, but otehr varieties were very light, but other varieties had bought some of last year's frozen turkeys to meet the demand which he was unable to fill with fresh killed birds.

A Western Ontario shipper, who shipped live birds to Buffalo, reports receiving the following prices net:

Live.

Chickens	22c to 26c
Fowl	10c to 20c
Cocks	18c
Ducks	25c
Geese	22c
Turkeys	30c

Another Western Ontario shipper, who shipped to Toronto, reports having received the following prices net:

Chickens	17c	25c
Fowl	15c	22c
Cocks	11c	18c to 20c
Geese	—	24c
Turkeys	—	35c
Ducks	17c	27c

Reports from Buffalo this morning say that the market is practically cleaned up.

Export.

Eggs: A few eggs are still moving for export via St. John and Portland, some on previous contracts and others on consignment. The British market is reported to be improving, and it is expected by those shipping on consignment than when they reach the other side the market there will be still better. The latest quotation from Great Britain was around 23s per long hundred. On this basis it is figured they would net the shipper about 43c.

It is not likely many more will go forward this season, as stocks in Canada are now reaching a point where home consumption will require what is left.

Poultry: No business passing.

PERIL THAT RUSSIA MEANS TO ALLIES

Million and Half Teuton Effectives May Be Returned to Fight—Commissioner Stevens, of U. S. Railway Board, Tells of Chaotic Conditions.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA

TOKIO, Thursday, Dec. 31.—John F. Stevens, Chief American Railway Commissioner to Russia, arrived at Nagasaki on Dec. 19, from Vladivostok.

Mr. Stevens regards the Russian situation as one of the most important in the world. He said: "The demand on America by the European war front is important, but the Russian situation is trebly important, as it involves the return of a million and a half German and Austrian effectives and gives unlimited possibilities to the German organization of Russian resources and man-power.

"Russia at present presents a completely chaotic condition, permeated by the most clever German propaganda in every way and everywhere among all classes of the people. Nevertheless, I believe the better judgment of the mass of the people will be asserted and Germany will not succeed in forcing a separate peace. Such a peace cannot be concluded if the allies promptly give their help and suggestions.

Stronger Than Credited.

"The Maximalists now in control are much stronger than generally credited. In any future reorganization or attempts at a stable Government, the Maximalists must be considered and handled rightly.

"The chaos is most evident in the manufactories and railway shops, where the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates are in absolute control. They work or not, as they please, and everywhere may be seen workmen loafing. Women are doing much of the work in the shops, along the railway tracks and in the fields, and even acting as brakemen. Where one woman is working, 500 men are loafing.

"A hundred thousand soldiers are crowding the stations, attempting the management of the trains, and supporting themselves on a small daily allowance, to which they add by thievery and smuggling.

"The railways and all other industries are operating at only 30 per cent. of their effective power. Food is plenty, but is not being distributed. The peasants are holding a three years' stock of wheat and other staples, but refuse to sell, because the ruble has greatly depreciated in value or is regarded by them with suspicion.

Coal Famine Threatens.

"The Government evidently is unable to commandeer food and a famine threatens, for which the peasants largely are responsible. There is also a coal famine, and the production is only one-third of their normal because the miners are refusing to work.

"At Vladivostock the supplies of all kinds are carefully guarded. The port authorities have erected large ware houses, and there is not much deterioration in the supplies. The Bolsheviki are in possession and the soldiers maintain order, but labourers are uneasy at the prospect that the continuation of the good conditions is uncertain.

"Siberia is not so much disturbed as Russia, and it the people's desire to support any Government appearing to be stable. The uncertainty in Russia rests in the vast preponderance of the 130,000,000 persons in the peasant class. If Germany is allowed to finance and advise them the situation is lost."

Well Disposed to America.

Mr. Stevens said that everywhere he found the people well disposed toward America. Even when soldiers stopped his special car and entered it they apologized and withdrew on learning that the passengers were Americans. The American influence is strong, and possibly stronger than that of the other allies, and he thinks it now should be exerted to the utmost, but the application of physical force in any degree is not advisable.

In conclusion Mr. Stevens said: "Not for a moment should the allies relax their sympathy and help but on the contrary should quadruple their efforts. The best sentiment in Russia is with us, but the question is how to give in such a manner as to maintain the sympathy of the intelligent classes and offset the German influence. We should earnestly beg the allies not to punish the Russian people, who love their country, nor to abandon them to the Germans.

"We are going back and will stay there as long as we can be of any assistance to the Russian people."

Germans Made Fierce Assault Near Cambrai

British Trenches Were Entered at Two Points

PARIS, Dec. 31—The Germans made fierce assaults on the British lines near Cambrai. The British trenches were entered at two points, but later the Germans were ejected leaving prisoners in British hands. German artillery was active on Saturday near Hargicourt, south and west of Lens, and east and north-east of Ypres. British aircraft dropped one hundred bombs on enemy airdromes north of Lille Saturday. Our airplanes and anti-aircraft guns brought down eleven enemy aircraft and compelled two others to descend. Three British machines are missing.

Corsica and England.

It is an almost forgotten fact that for a period of a little more than two years during the Napoleonic wars Corsica was a British possession. After the evacuation of Toulon the British government felt it necessary to take the island, and Lord Howe, with Nelson as brigadier, was sent to drive out the French. With the capture of Calvi, July 12, 1794, where Nelson lost his eye, the island fell into British hands, and George III. formally accepted the crown of Corsica, appointing Sir George Elliott as British viceroy and allowing the Corsicans to retain their legislative assembly. In 1796 the activity of the French navy in other parts of the Mediterranean resulted in a sudden decision of the British government to withdraw from the island. The evacuation was completed on Oct. 26 of that year, and Corsica reverted to France.

The Turks Are Falling Back In Palestine

British Troops Dominate the High Ground

LONDON, Dec. 31. — British continue to advance in Palestine. The Turks are unable to counter attack. General Allenby continued driving back the Turks and advanced his line two miles on a front of thirteen miles. This advance gives the British control of the high ground four miles from Jerusalem and north of the Jericho road. The enemy is falling back, but the rough country makes pursuit slow.

The Curious Water Bear.

They say a camel goes eight days without water. The arctisca or water bear goes six months without it sometimes. But he doesn't do so voluntarily. In fact, to every outward appearance he dies during the drought. This little creature, microscopic in size, is an inhabitant of water troughs and similar places where moss is apt to grow. When it rains he is as happy as a clam in high water, but when there is no rain his sacklike body and four pairs of stubby legs dry up, and the closest examination under the microscope fails to show any sign of life. But it must be only an exaggerated form of hibernation, for when the rain comes again he wakes up and starts in enjoying himself.

Which suggests the wonderful power of clinging to life shown by some creatures. The four legs and tail of a salamander, one of the small lizards, have been cut off in experiments, only to grow but perfectly after each operation.

"Rockets and Blue Lights."

Charles M. Schwab, the steel master, owns the famous painting "Rockets and Blue Lights," by Turner, the noted English colorist, for which he is said to have paid a quarter of a million dollars.

The painting represents a storm or heavy weather at sea. The high sea is breaking on a sandy shore, in which the lights are reflected. Two steamers are rolling in the tumultuous ocean and are almost hidden from view by the great waves and showers of mist and spray.

The vessels are warned by rockets of the shoal water from the end of a pier, while beyond at the left the harbor is fairly discernible. In the foreground a group of fishermen appear looking intently out upon the sea.

"Rockets and Blue Lights" is considered one of the artist's masterpieces.

Monkeys Are Fighters.

"Most persons will guess lions or tigers are the most dangerous animals to train," said an animal trainer, "but they're wrong. Give a lion one good licking and he'll remember it. He hits back only when his man is down or has his back turned, but a monkey will fight against any odds, and you never can tell when he'll hit back. Even a medium small monkey can strike a blow that will reach through a coat, vest and two shirts, and he leaves a nasty wound. The most daring thing I ever did was to go into a monkey cage and take a baby from its mother. The ordinary house cat is the most stubborn animal under training, but the monkey is the most dangerous if you work the larger kinds.'

True to His Promise.

"Dearest, will you let me share your every sorrow after we are married?" she whispered as she cuddled her cheek against his.

"Yes, darling," he replied, again plucking a delicious kiss from her sweet lips.

It was the same lady who two years later wearily cried out:

"Oh, Tom, why can't you ever come into the house without bringing a tale of trouble with you? I'm so sick of hearing about how hard you have to work to keep the bills paid."

Closely Connected.

"Your friend Dubwaite seems to know a great deal about army affairs."

"Oh, yes. Mrs. Dubwaite has a cousin who is a first sergeant in the regular army. Naturally that keeps the Dubwaites in close touch with the war department."

Locating the Gurgle.

"I like this poem of yours to a brook. It fairly gurgles. You evidently wrote it by a rippling rill."

"Not exactly," said the poet, "but I did write it with a fountain pen. Maybe that accounts for it.'

We do not nowadays exhibit caged offenders to the gaze of a curious public, but such a form of punishment was at one time more or less common. When the three great Anabaptist leaders were executed in Prussia, in 1536, they were exposed to the public gaze in iron cages hung on the walls of the church of St. Lambert, in Munster-am-Stein.

Catherine II. of Russia had her wigdresser confined to a cage because the bigwigs at court complained that the tonsorial gentleman had big ears, and Edward I. of England caused the Countess of Buchan and the sister of Robert Bruce to be locked up in two large iron cages, which were hung on to the turret of the castle of Berwick, in 1306.

Alexander the Great had Callisthenes, the Greek philosopher, kept for seven months in an iron cage because the latter denied Alexander's divine right to rule, and for eleven long years the French Cardinal Balue had a unique opportunity of studying at first hand what it feels like to be a captive canary, for Louis XI. ordered him to be imprisoned in an iron cage at Loches, on the River Indre, for just that period.

And coming down to more recent times, there was the huge iron cage, mounted on wheels, which the Boers had constructed for the late Cecil Rhodes during the South African war, but which Lord French robbed of its intended occupant by turning up so suddenly at Kimberley.—London Answers.

PRISONERS IN CAGES.

Curious Form of Punishment of the Days of Long Ago.

We do not nowadays exhibit caged offenders to the gaze of a curious public, but such a form of punishment was at one time more or less common. Ye Bad Boyes In Church.

In Salem in 1676 it was ordered by the town that "all ye boyes of ye towne are appointed to sitt upon three paire of stairs in ye meeting house, and William Lord is appointed to look after ye boyes upon ye pulpit stairs." In Stratford the tithing man was ordered to "watch over youths of disorderly carriage and see they behave themselves comelie and use such raps and blows as is in his discretion meet." In Durham any misbehaving boy was punished publicly after the service was over. We would, nowadays scarcely seat twenty or thirty active boys together in church if we wished them to be models of attention and dignified behavior, but after the boys' seats were removed from the pulpit stairs they were all turned in together in a "boys' pew" in the gallery.

Napoleon and St. Raphael.

Two events of great historic interest have written the name of St. Raphael, a little sea bathing and winter resort in France, large in Napoleonic annals. It was here that the future emperor landed on his return from his Egyptian campaign in 1799, and it was from here, just fifteen years later, after causing every throne in Europe to totter and after redrawing the map of the whole continent to suit his imperial will, that he embarked for his brief period of exile on the island of Elba.

Where He Slept.

"Mamma," said small Henry, "I don't believe Solomon was half so rich as they say he was."

"Why not?" queried his mother.

"Because," replied the youthful student, "it says here 'and he slept with his fathers.' If he had been very rich I guess he would have had a bed of his own."

Odious Comparison.

Drill Sergeant—I say, Smith, have you any idea how slow and stupid you are? Private Smith—I don't know. Drill Sergeant—Of course you don't, but let me tell you that an Egyptian mummy is frisky compared with you.

Appearances.

Do not judge by appearances. The man who sings bass at church is not necessarily the boss at home.

Contentment.

Contentment is the sweet satisfaction of knowing that you have more of this world's goods than you can possibly use.

A good dessert can be made by the ordinary corn bread recipe by adding raisins or dates and serve as a hot pudding.

Economical Roasting.

The following will commend itself as an inexpensive way of roasting a small piece of mutton or beef without heating the oven:

Place in a saucepan large enough to hold the meat chosen about a cupful of bacon dripping, lard or margarine. Make this hot, place meat into it and brown well on both sides. Then turn gas jet down very low and allow it to cook until done. Three undivided lamb chops done in this way require one teaspoonful of cold water added to the dripping before the chops are put in or the meat might burn. But beef does not need the addition of water, as it is moist in itself. The chops take about fifteen minutes to cook, one and one-half pounds topside of beef a little longer. When the meat is done put it on the platter, pour away some of the dripping and then make the gravy in the usual way.

Parsnips, onions and other vegetables may be roasted in the same way.

Voltaire's Retort.

That famous politician, orator and man of fashion, the fourth earl of Chesterfield, was on one occasion at a grand assembly in France where Voltaire was one of the guests. Suddenly the French writer accosted his lordship with the words:

"My lord, I know you are a judge. Which are the more beautiful, the English or the French ladies?"

"Upon my word," replied Chesterfield, with his usual presence of mind, "I am no judge of paintings!"

Some time afterward, says a biographer, Voltaire, being in London, happened to be at a nobleman's party with Chesterfield. A lady in the company prodigiously rouged directed her whole discourse to Voltaire and engrossed his conversation. Chesterfield came up, tapped him on the arm and said:

"Sir, take care that you are not captivated."

"My lord," promptly replied the French wit, "I scorn to be taken by an English craft under French colors."

Fighting the Insects.

One hundred million dollars are lost to the United States every year due to the ravages of insects in crops. Half these insects were imported, according to the Popular Science Monthly.

Though insecticides are useful, they are not effective under all conditions. The most satisfactory results have been obtained by introducing other insects which feed upon the undesirable foreign pests.

The threatened destruction of California's orange groves was arrested by the importation from Australia of a certain species of ladybird. The tiny workers were shipped in tin boxes placed on ice. Once released in the atmosphere of southern California they set about their appointed duty with such avidity and multiplied so rapidly that the pests were virtually wiped out in a very short time.

The Two Manilas.

There are two Manilas now. One is the old Spanish city, inclosed by picturesque and massive walls, with narrow and tortuous streets. This Manila seems as old as time itself, and it affords a remarkable contrast to the busy, bustling American city that has grown up beyond its falls. There is nothing like it in the world, save perhaps Algiers, where an African Paris has arisen beside the old Moslem city which was once the headquarters of the Barbary pirates.

The years of American occupation have made Manila the cleanest and healthiest city in the orient, with the possible exception of Hongkong, where British sanitary science has accomplished wonders.

Sea Springs.

In the very hottest districts in the world—the shores of the Persian gulf—there is no rain whatever, nor rivers, nor oases. Yet water is got—from the bottom of the sea. Six miles off the shallow coast there is a long line of bubbling springs of ice cold fresh water. Divers capture it in goatskin bags and retail it inland at very moderate prices. Even in an annual drought, which lasts from January to December, and in a temperature that hardly ever sinks below 90 degrees and often rises to over 110 the natives have no worry about their water supply.

Youth.

There is God's gift of youth, inexpressible, beautiful, glorious, divine. It is for youth that the rest of us live. It is on their motions that we hang. It is for them that we labor, suffer and endure. It is for them that we flout the ills of life. It is for them that we are blind to death. Youth—wonderful youth—so great a gift to possess, so infinitely greater a gift to possess in boys and girls about you!

The Difference.

"Grandma," asked six-year-old Paul, "what makes Helen such a pretty little girl?"

"She is pretty," grandma replied, "because she is such a good little girl."

"But, dear grandma," Paul protested, "you are awful good."

Able to Estimate.

"That fellow has absolutely no idea of the value of time."

"Oh, yes, he has. I've just seen him pawning his watch.

Mean.

First Fair One—How dreadful it is to have a skeleton in the family! Second Fair One—I know, dear. Have you ever tried exercise?

In time of fat prepare for lean.—Jeremy Taylor.

Apples pared, cored, and baked in a dish with a little water and brown sugar make a richer dish than plain baked apples.

Laundry Work In Alaska.

In Alaska and throughout the more or less frozen north laundresses are practically unknown. The miners do their own housekeeping and their own laundering.

A cylinder about thirty inches long and of the same diameter as the head of the churn is first constructed of heavy galvanized iron. One end of this cylinder is left open, and the head of the churn is fastened to the open end. The cylinder is then carefully balanced in the churn, and the churn bearings are fastened on with rivets and solder to make them watertight.

Two meshes of galvanized wire of one inch mesh are then made. One of these is suspended from the movable head by one quarter inch galvanized iron rods and the other fastened to the cylinder, so that the two are about ten inches apart in the middle of the cylinder. The clothes are confined between the two screens. The water surges back and forth through them until they are clean, or as long as the churn is in motion. A large pinwheel attached to the bearings furnished the turning power.

How High Birds Fly.

An officer of the French flying corps has taken exceptional opportunities to record observations on the flight of birds and the height at which they fly, especially when migrating. Some of his notes are published in the Pall Mall Gazette (volume 11, 1916). Swallows, he says, seem to prefer an altitude of 2,000 feet, whereas the wild ducks usually fly at 5,000 feet. They are remarkable also for the marvelous uniformity with which they follow their leader. The turns and twists are taken with such simultaneity that a flock appears to turn and wheel automatically, so extraordinarily together do they move. When climbing they fly at about sixty-five miles an hour and are good for seventy once they have got their height and have spread out to let themselves go. Once he met some plovers at 6,500 feet, which is the highest altitude that he has seen a company of birds.

Possible Origin of Khaki.

There are many versions of the origin of khaki, but one that is new to me comes from a veteran of the Mutineers who followed Nicholson through the breach at Delhi.

During the siege there, he tells me, it was noticed that the white drill uniforms of the regiment, then known as the old "Dirty Shirts," the first European Bengal fusiliers of the old company's service, proved excellent marks in the moonlight for the Sepoy mutineers who held the city.

The men were told, therefore, to darken them by any means they could find. Their method was to boil the uniforms in the "dixies" or regimental kettles in which tea was made, together with bark stripped from the trees in the neighborhood, which made a fairly satisfactory brown dye.

Time does not seem to have brought any improvement on the "Dirty Shirts'" idea, though it may have improved on their methods.

Poverty In China.

A wealthy Chinese money lender in Manchuria was convicted of making false declarations regarding robberies of his caravans by Mongolian bandits. His conscience troubled him to such an extent that he offered to contribute an annual sum of $750 for the relief of the poor. This money was made the basis of a fund for feeding the helpless at Kungchuling.

Manchuria is terribly poor, despite the mineral and agricultural riches extracted from its soil and rocks, all of which products are shipped abroad. There are probably thousands of industrious natives unable by unremitting toil to earn more than a meager living. When to their natural difficulties are added the ravages of bandits and the evils of misgovernment, such as prevail in many parts of China, abject poverty and starvation must be the lot of people who in the best of times are only half fed.

Berry Pickers At Hatzic

WOMEN have played a very important part in the world wide war, and in Canada have demonstrated themselves as being capable of handling practically any kind of work. They have assisted railways, and are at present employed by the C. P. R. in various departments connected with the operation of trains. The women of Canada have helped to save the crops, and done wonderful work on the farms. During the autumn the Hi-yu Hi-ou girls of New Westminster considerably helped to save the berry crop of British Columbia, and the accompanying photograph shows a party of these jolly looking girls about to commence their daily task at High View Ranch, Hatzic.

The party left New Westminster by the S.S. "Skenna," and after a delightful trip arrived at Hatzic late in the evening.

Many new and interesting experiences awaited the girls at their new home, but they had evidently decided to overcome every obstacle with a smile, and their resolutions were nobly carried out.

This particular party was assigned sleeping quarters in the house, and the cellar was divided into dining rooms for all the girls on the ranch, numbering about forty.

Each party of girls, usually six or eight, looked after its own cooking, two girls taking charge of the meals each day.

The system of picking and packing the fruit was always fascinating to the pickers. Each girl, attired in overalls, carried a small tin suspended from her waist by a string, and into it the berries were dropped. Eight tins of berries filled a tray or stand containing eight boxes, and three of these stands formed a crate.

All agreed that the most important person on the ranch in the berry season was the packer who received the berries in the packing shed and gave each girl credit for her work by a system of holes punched on individual cards.

Before leaving the Hi-yu girls gave a most successful concert and dance and about $50 was handed to the Hatzic Patriotic Fund. Altogether the girls were delighted with their experiences.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Blank Marriage Certificate

It Turned Up a Valid One After Twenty Years

By F. A. Mitchel

I.

Every day the readers of fiction demand more and more stories illustrating what is happening among them. Improbable happenings are tabooed. Nevertheless stories written many years ago, based on what was then a more or less common occurrence, are still read. The novel "Jane Eyre," by Charlotte Bronte, is one of these favorites.

This story is based on a mock marriage. A century ago British swells seemed to have no conscience in preying upon women. Mock marriages were by no means uncommon. But today we never hear of a mock marriage. This is due largely to a change in the times. Formerly formal certificates were required in marriage. Now any man and woman can acknowledge before witnesses that they are man and wife and the law recognizes the marriage.

During the early part of the nineteenth century there was a noted case of mock marriage between a British nobleman and an American girl. In those days America was a new country, and Englishmen who came over here were prone to look down on Americans. Nevertheless there were descendants, in the eastern states especially, of the younger sons of foreign noblemen, who settled on the American coast when the country was being occupied from abroad, dispossessing the Indians.

Edith Van Wyck, whose progenitor, Hulleger Van Wyck, came from Holland, where Philip II. of Spain was persecuting the Protestants, was a comely young woman, in excellent standing socially in New York. Lord John Turnbull, a son of the Duke of Averton, visited America, met Miss Van Wyck and fell in love with her. He did not consider a marriage with one who had neither fortune nor title, but, desiring to possess her, resorted to a device which was common at the time—that is, he married her, prearranging that she should not be able to prove herself a legal wife.

In those days the elite of New York lived on the southern extremity of Manhattan Island, the Van Wycks' home fronting on the Battery. Young Lord John courted Edith in the space surrounding the fort that gave the name to its location, for it was called the Battery from the guns mounted on it. He was a charming man in everything except morality, and the young lady fell an easy victim to his wiles.

When they were married the groom handed the officiating clergyman a pen, which he dipped into a gold ink horn that bore the crest of his family, saying that for generations marriage certificates of members of his family had been written with ink from this heirloom. No one thought to ask why the young lord had brought such a relic to America. There was not the slightest doubt that he was acting in good faith.

Lord John remained in America three months after his marriage, when he returned to England without his wife. He told her that there would be great objection on the part of his family to his marriage with an American commoner and he must prepare them for the event. Unless he could win his mother over to his side and through her influence his father the latter, who owned a large, unentailed fortune, would disinherit him.

WOMEN ARE NEEDED TO HELP IN WAR

Women can be usefully employed in nursing the wounded, in making up the soldiers' kits, and a thousand other ways. Many Canadian women are weak, pale or anemic from woman's ills. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical time; nursing mothers and every woman who is "run-down," tired or over-worked—Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a special, safe and certain help. It can now be had in tablet form, procurable at any good drug store, or send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package. Branch office, Bridgeburg, Ont.

St. Catharines, Ont.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription during expectancy when I felt especially in need of a tonic and it benefited me greatly. I always take pleasure in recommending 'Prescription' to young mothers, because I know it will never fail to help them."—Mrs. J. H. Pawcett, 8 Beach St.

Stratford, Ont.—"I do think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription one of the best medicines I have ever known for the ailments of women. I had for quite a long time been all run-down, weak and nervous. I doctored, but nothing seemed to give me relief until I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' This medicine gave me such wonderful relief that I am glad to recommend it to others."—Mrs. A. Goswin, 60 Brant St.

Edith consented to his departing without her, he promising to return to her as soon as he obtained his father's consent to receive her. He set sail in a British ship, and his young wife tearfully watched the vessel from her window as it sailed down the bay.

A month was required to make a voyage to England in those days, and when another month had been added to the first Edith began to look for a letter from her husband. A month more passed and no letter came. Several more passed and still no word from her husband. At last the poor woman began to realize that she was deserted. She believed that her husband had failed to win his father's consent to his marriage and had concluded not to announce it; but, being married to him, she hoped that at some future day she would be acknowledged as his wife.

Meanwhile the Duke of Averton died, and his son, John Turnbull, inherited the title. Then, since his record seemed all right, he was considered a great catch by young women of the nobility.

One day Edith received a shock that blighted her life. A London paper came to America in which there was an announcement of the marriage of her husband to Lady Gladys Armstrong, daughter of the Duke of Milford. That her husband had deserted her was a blow; that he had committed bigamy was crushing.

Her family, not being willing to submit to such treatment, took up the case, intending to prosecute Lord Averton for bigamy. The attorney they employed called for the marriage certificate. Edith took it out of a desk in which it had lain since the marriage and before turning it over to her father looked at it. What was her astonishment, her horror, to see that the paper on which it had been written was a blank!

The poor woman then knew that she had been tricked. She delayed handing the paper over or saying anything about it till she had time to think. A little boy had been born to her, and she dreaded the fact of his standing being known to the world. After deliberation she put the paper back where it had been before removal and refused to produce it, saying that she would not consent to a prosecution of Lord John. She resumed her maiden name and brought up her son as Francis Van Wyck.

II.

Twenty years later a young man stepped into a solicitor's office in London and requested him to demand of the Duke of Averton £20,000. When asked his name and why he made such a demand the stranger declined at present to give either. The solicitor declined to take the case, but when the client said that the amount was demanded for the support of a woman the duke had wronged many years before he consented.

Averton winced at the demand, but put on a bold face. He pronounced the case one of blackmail and declined to consider it. When the matter was announced in the newspapers he said his family gave out that the duke, as Lord John, had shown some attention to an American girl he had met in the United States. After a lapse of years she had concluded to claim that he had married her. There was nothing in it.

The case, notwithstanding this statement, excited a good deal of attention in London society, not because that society looked down with scorn upon the betrayal of women by their aristocracy—for in those days the British people regarded the peccadillos of the nobility with far more leniency than today—but because there was a fear that the family occupying the title and the property might be dispossessed through some unfortunate marriage of the duke when he was sowing his wild oats. When the case came to be tried quite a number of the British aristocracy were present in court.

"We are prepared to prove," said the plaintiff's solicitor, "that about twenty-two years ago, when the Duke of Averton was in America, he married Edith Van Wyck of New York and lived with her as her husband several months, when he deserted her. The couple were married by the Rev. Thomas MacLaren in St. Mark's church, on a street called the Bowery. The officiating clergyman is now dead, but we will furnish a certificate that he was rector of the church at the time of the wedding. We shall also furnish the certificate of marriage written by said MacLaren."

The attorney held up a bit of blank paper. The defendant, who was in court, looked at it with evident solicitous interest.

Stepping to a table, the lawyer placed the paper under a microscope and said to the judge:

"Your honor, I desire you to examine this paper and give a ruling on it. Is it or is it not a valid certificate of marriage?"

The judge stepped down from the bench and critically examined the paper by means of the microscope. He saw indentations made with a pen constituting a certificate of marriage between Lord John Turnbull and Edith Van Wyck and signed by Thomas MacLaren. After the examination the judge returned to the bench. The lawyer continued:

"We claim that when the marriage certificate was made out the clergyman was handed an ink horn and a pen by the groom, who stated that marriage certificates had for hundreds of years been written in ink from the said ink horn. The clergyman therefore made out the certificate with ink taken from said ink horn. We claim that the plaintiff had filled the ink horn with ink that after a short period became invisible.

"I have also a certificate from a prominent London scientist that iodine combined with starch, called iodide of starch, will produce an ink that will in a short time entirely fade away. We charge the Duke of Averton at that time with procuring the writing of the certificate with iodide of starch, which will fade and cannot be reproduced. I therefore ask your honor to accept these pen indentations as a certificate of marriage between the defendant and the plaintiff."

While this address was being spoken Averton turned ghastly pale.

The judge took time for consideration, then ruled that the certificate was a valid document.

Each member of the jury was given an opportunity to examine the paper through a microscope. The foreman read aloud a certificate given by the officiating clergyman that he had married Edith Van Wyck and John Turnbull in the city of New York on a certain date. The reading was effected by the pen indentations on the paper. After all had seen it the judge instructed the jury to accept it as valid testimony.

That settled the case in favor of Edith Van Wyck, Duchess of Averton. She was adjudged such by the court, which made the duke a bigamist and his London family illegitimate.

The young man who prosecuted the case was the son of the defendant. As soon as he had won a verdict in his mother's favor he entered upon negotiations for the payment by the duke of an annuity to his mother, and the case was thus settled. The Duke of Averton was never brought to trial for bigamy owing to his influence with the British cabinet.

His son returned to America, where he continued to live under the name of Van Wyck and became an eminent jurist in New York. His mother after her vindication returned to her social position and became a leader. She died during the war days of 1863.

Since then there has been a notable change in the depredations of the young bloods upon the weaker sex. Mock marriages are no longer perpetrated.

Lessons Learned by Divers.

Experiments made by the British admiralty and the United States navy prove that deep sea diving is feasible. It has been found that the shorter the time a diver takes in getting to the bottom the better, because his body absorbs less nitrogen. Also, the diver must have at least one and one-half cubic feet of air per minute at all depths. Lacing the legs of the diver's suit increases his stability and permits him to come to an erect position with ease. It also lessens the danger of his falling or being suddenly blown to the surface.

Was Too Particular.

A Boonton (N. J.) real estate man was trying to sell a small farm by mail to a possible purchaser in Manhattan, a very precise and particular person. One day a friend asked him how he was making out on the deal.

"Oh, I've quit," he said in a tone of marked pleasure. "You see, he wrote for so many details and kept insisting on having more that I got tired at last and wrote telling him if he would pay the freight both ways I would ship the darn farm down to the city for him to look at, and he never answered my letter."

The Old Order Passeth.

What has become of the old fashioned man who was about to solve the problem of perpetual motion?

And where is the old fashioned woman who wore gloves that reached only halfway to the end of her fingers?

Can anybody furnish information concerning the whereabouts of the old fashioned boy who wore mittens which were fastened to a long string?—Chicago Herald.

THE PLATE ON THE MUMMY.

Curious Story of a Prophesy That Was Fulfilled.

Visitors at museums often comment on the sadness of the present state of the Egyptian mummies who were buried with such great care in hope that their rest might never be disturbed. But such thoughts never enter the minds of natives who pillage their ancestors' graves, nor do they disturb the more civilized explorer. To a superstitious person, however, a story of a mummy that R. Caton Woodville tells in "Random Recollections" might have a sinister meaning.

After the ill fated expedition to relieve Gordon, Walter Ingram brought to London the mummy of an Egyptian high priest that he had bought from an Arab near Assuan. When he unrolled the mummy he found on its chest a gold plate, upon which was inscribed: "He who disturbs my rest and takes me to a distant land shall die a violent death. His bones shall never be found. They shall be scattered to the four points of the world."

Shortly afterward Ingram went to Somaliland on a big game expedition. He had a four bore rifle and when in the elephant region got two good tuskers. So he lent his rifle to one of his companions, who had not so heavy a weapon, to give him a better chance of bagging an elephant. He himself mounted a pony and went off with three Somalis, armed with a .450 express, which shoots bullets of only 200 grains, to bag an antelope or perhaps a panther.

As luck would have it, Ingram came upon a fine old rogue elephant with a magnificent pair of tusks. It was too great a temptation to be resisted. Galloping up to the elephant, the hunter fired both barrels at the beast's forehead from about fifteen yards. The bullets flattened upon the animal's skull and only made him very angry. Ingram galloped out of reach and reloaded, rode up and fired again, with a similar result; again galloped away and reloaded, and so on until he had expended all of the cartridges.

As he was galloping away after his last shot, with the furious brute in pursuit, his pony suddenly stopped stock still, apparently for no reason whatever. The elephant thundered up, whisked the hunter out of the saddle, dashed him to the ground and trampled him to death. The tragedy occurred in the bed of a dry nullah and was witnessed by the three Somalis, who had climbed for safety to the tops of trees. They were armed only with spears, which, of course, were useless weapons against the elephant. After the brute had gone they climbed down, dug a hole with their spears, placed the body of poor Ingram in it and returned to camp with their sad story.

Some time afterward Mrs. Ingram, the hunter's mother, sent out an expedition to find and bring back to England the remains of her son. The spot was found, but two rainy seasons had passed, and the dry nullah had become a roaring river that had washed away the remains to the four points of the earth. Thus was the prophecy fulfilled.

Don't Shut Yourself Up in an Office.

The man who shuts himself up in an office makes a great mistake, thinks Thomas E. Wilson, the Chicago packer. In the American Magazine he says:

"The trouble with the executive who is too inaccessible is that he loses more by the arrangement than anybody else. In shutting others out he shuts himself in—away from the numerous advantages of personal contact and points of view. There's nothing like looking a man in the eye and hearing his story to get at the meat of a situation. Most executives prefer to have everything brought to their attention in writing. That plan may be a time saver, but my own experience has been that it will pay to get all information possible by face to face interviews."

Orchards by the Wayside.

Wayside orchards are quite a feature of the roads in many parts of Herefordshire. Damsons are the trees usually planted for this purpose, and along many of the main roads they have been planted in the hedges at intervals of a few yards for considerable distances.

Great masses of snowy bloom in spring and the purple of ripening fruit in the late summer do much to add to the beauty of one of the most beautiful counties in England.

Some enterprising farmers have planted damson trees in every hedge on the farm, and the damson crop is quite a considerable factor in their agricultural returns. Tons of the fruit are gathered in a half ripe state and used for dyeing purposes.

Da Vinci's Curious Writing.

Although Leonardo da Vinci was a voluminous writer, he never published a single line during his lifetime. After the master's death in France his manuscripts were taken back to Italy. His heirs proved unworthy, and the precious writings were gradually dispersed. Loose pages were often detached and were either given away as relics or stolen. No attempt was made to publish any of his treatises, except that on painting, for more than 300 years after his death. This was partly owing to the great difficulty of deciphering his handwriting. Da Vinci was left handed and always wrote in oriental fashion, from right to left. Besides this, his orthography is peculiar to himself. He abbreviates some words and joins others together and employs neither stops nor accents.

Need Imperial Coinage.

The presence of so much colonial silver in circulation here just now has led to a movement for the establishment of a British Empire coinage, whereby coins minted in England, Canada, or Australia would be negotiable anywhere in the British Empire. The subject is to be taken up at the next meeting of the Imperial Conference.

CUTTING SHADE TREES TO KEEP FIRES GOING

Fuel Shortage Is Acute in Several Ontario Towns.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 29.—Dealers in London and throughout the district are swamped with orders for coal. In an effort to keep everybody warm the coal men are refusing to sell more than a small quantity to anybody. The shortage is acute, and in some of the district towns surplus shade trees will be cut down to help out the fuel supply.

British Counter Attacks On The Cambrai Front Are Successful

Retake Ground on Welsh Ridge Captured by Germans Yesterday---Five German Airplanes Are Brought Down---Britain to Make a Serious and Reasoned Reply to Austro-German Peace Terms ---Bolsheviki Revolt Managed By Germany.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The British, in successful counter attacks on Cambrai front have regained more important territory on the Welsh Ridge, taken by the Germans in yesterday's attack, the War Office reports.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 31.—Artillery actions occurred last night northwest of Rheims, the War Office reports. There were patrol encounters north of the Chemin Des Dames, Aisne front, and near Bezonvaux, Verdun front. Everywhere else the night was calm.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 31.—German troops still clung to a part of the British front trenches in the neighbourhood of Lavacquerie, south of Marcoing, which they gained in a powerful attack Sunday morning, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. As a result of successful counter attacks, however, the British regained the more important part of this section, known as Welsh Ridge. Many prisoners and machine guns were taken by the Tommies.

At Ypres the British Commander-in-Chief reported the British line was advanced a short distance on both sides of the Ypres Staden Railway.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Five German aeroplanes were destroyed or put out of action yesterday by the British, who lost one of their's.

Two hostile machines were brought down in our lines on Saturday, says an official statement given out to-night A third was brought down in the enemy's line. Two other hostile machines were driven out of control. None of our aeroplanes are missing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PEKING, Dec. 30.—Civil war is in progress at Irkutsk, in Eastern Siberia on the Trans-Siberian railroad and in the surrounding districts The town was set on fire by Red Guards after they had murdered the French Consular Agent and three other Frenchmen. Many persons, including women and children are being murdered and street fighting is under way. The Bolsheviki continue to receive reinforcements and ammunition from Krasnovarsk.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The "Manchester Guardian" says it is the intention of the British Government, when the Austro-German terms of peace are presented officially to return a serious and reasoned reply. Premier Lloyd George has arranged to visit France, according to the newspaper, to confer with Premier Clemenceau on this subject.

The Austro-German peace terms referred to are those presented by representatives of the Central Powers at the negotiations with the Russians at Brest Litovsk. These negotitions were interrupted for ten days to give the Entente Allies an opportunity to state whether they would join in them. The principal point in the Austro-German outline of peace terms was the acceptance of the Russian formula of no anexations or indemnities.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Times prints a long letter from its Petrograd correspondent, dated Saturday, which purports to substantiate the view that the Bolsheviki revolt was managed by Germany, and that the movement is essentially anti-national and anti-Russian. The letter says: "It is a notorious fact and has been proved by documents in possession of the Kerensky Government that Germany commissioned Lenine and gave him money to go to Russia to sow disaffection in the Russian army."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Dec. 31.—In the Monte Tomba region on the Northern Front, the French have captured enemy positions between Osteria Dimonferena and Maranzine, the War Office announces. They also captured about 1,400 men and twenty machine guns and seven cannon.

TO THE CENTRE WARD ELECTORS

Although nominated to succeed myself as alderman in the Centre Ward, a position which I have held for the past four years, I will not have time to canvass the electors, and would leave the matter to the judgment of the people. I take this opportunity of submitting several reasons why I feel myself justified in asking for the votes of the electors in the election, Tuesday. In the first place, I am a resident of the Ward in which I seek election.

I have been Chairman of the Finance Commitee, the most important in the Council, for the past three years. I believe I have warrant for saying that I understand the financial affairs of Peterborough better than any member of the Council, present or prospective.

During the next two years the city will be called upon to lay out nearly half a million dollars over and above the ordinary expenditures, on the high level bridge and the sewage disposal plant. If ever care was necessary in the handling of municipal money matters, it will be during the period for which the new aldermen are being elected.

I am one of the largest ratepayers in the city, and as such should be entitled to confidence that I will combine progress and economy in all matters of public interest.

My record as Finance Minister is before you. I have always striven to save the people's money, and that will continue to be my policy if you honour me with a renewal of your confidence.

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—In a judgment given by Mr. Justice Clute to-day, Geo. R. Webb, a merchant of Gananoque, Ont., is awarded five thousand dollars damages in his action against his wife Dora's father and mother, William V. and Mrs. Bullock, of the same town, for alienation of his wife's affections. George was 30 and Dora 22. In her pre-nuptial days she wrote to him as "Dearest George." But after she became Mrs. Webb her letters referred to him as "that pie-faced." They were married in her parent's absence, and afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Bullock took the bride away with them to Manitoba. Later, she secured a divorce in Ohio. In his judgment to-day Justice Clute remarked that the young man had suffered a grievious wrong and was entitled to substantial damages. Webb sued for $20,000.

Motor-Driven Chemical Engine Is Nearly Ready

Peterborough's motor-driven combination chemical engine and hose waggon is expected in the city some time this week. It is some months since the purchase of this piece of apparatus was authorised, and the reason for the delay in delivery is due entirely to the fact that each piece of fire-fighting equipment is made to special order from the wheels up. The decision of the Council to purchase a piece of motor-driven apparatus came after considerable discussion and a Cooke's tour to the United States. Even then some members of the Council were prone to invest in a cheaper engine manufactured by firms whose product was an unknown quantity, and the final decision to purchase the best on the market from a firm which has been manufacturing fire apparatus for over sixty years, was adopted by a narrow margin.

The installation of motor-driven fire apparatus in the Peterborough Fire Department marks a new era in local fire-fighting annals. Peterborough has any number of long runs, with steep grades, and it has been long conceded that the old grey dobbins at the Fire Hall must ultimately give way to faster and more expeditious methods of reaching the scene of the fire.

The Fire, Water, and Light Committee will meet to-night, when Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Committee, will formally release for publication the news of the pending arrival of the motor-driven chemical engine.

Germany In Bad Position Regarding Supply Of Food

Official Data Collected by American Government Experts Show That Hunland is Experiencing the Pinch of Hunger.

MANY FOODS LACKING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 31. — Germany is in a worse position regarding food than this government had believed for some time past.

Official data recently collected by American government experts from reliable sources in touch with the Teuton food problem, show this conclusively to-day though the government is withholding specific facts.

The pinch of hunger may account, in large measure for the persistence of the German peace movement at this time, for despite the discouragement thereof from allied quarters, the effort to make peace talk sink into allied consciousness continues. There are signs that Germany will stick to her manoeuvres indefinitely.

The United Press was informed today by official sources that this government had been led to believe that the German food situation had improved as a result of the last harvests, but had learned, from careful investigation that this was not the case. Under-nutrition is causing a decrease of efficiency and there is a notable lack of many foods upon which tissue and stamina are built. However, officials say the people should bear in mind that Germany is far from starving to death, and far from being "bled white." She is in a position where peace would be advantageous to her, and to her alone, experts declare. Her overtures, voiced through Russia, do not show any disposition to eliminate Hohenzollern militarism, with its threat of future wars.

MAYOR DUFFUS' New Year Greeting

TO ALL THE CITIZENS OF THE CITY OF PETERBORO.

May I be permitted, before the close of the Mayoralty year, to supplement my review of the business of 1917 presented at the last meeting of the Council, by tendering you sincere and hearty thanks for the cordial goodwill which has existed toward me during my term of office.

While the restraints of my private business and domestic affairs have been somewhat of a severe nature during the past two years, I frankly acknowledge that the duties and privileges associated with the Mayor's chair have brought with them a pleasing sense of the honour of the position, but more especially enlarged experience in Municipal and public affairs.

At this festive season, when all are endeavouring to forget the wrongs of the past and trying to remember the blessings of the present, further reference to the City's business would seem out of place.

With renewed thanks for your kindly support, and the hope that the year of 1918 may be a year of victory for the British Empire and her Allies, progress for Canada and Peterboro, and prosperity and happiness for you, individually, believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

GERMANY ABLE TO CONTINUE FOR YEARS SAYS POPE

Letter From Mgr. Ballandier Gives Holy Father's View of the Possible Outcome of the European Conflict

NOT PLEASANT READING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 31. — La Semaine Religieus, the official organ of the Roman Catholic diocese of Montreal, publishes a letter from Mgr. Ballandier, which is far from pleasant reading for the Allies. It purports to give the Pope's view of the possible outcome of the European conflict. It should be said, however, that if the information contained in the letter is of no more value than the affirmation that the United States have a million men at the front, no one need be afarmed.

"They say," writes the clerical correspondent, "that peace may be nearer than people suppose. Russia can no longer be depended on, but a new factor enters upon the scene, for the U. S. have now a million men on the western front and will have two million and a half by spring. Then Germany wants peace, and for the present is disposed to accept the terms proposed by the Sovereign Pontiff.

"I wish to give you," adds the correspondence, "the result of an audience granted by the Pope to Cardinal De Caprieres, His Holiness saying that he was accused of desiring a German peace.

"Nothing is more false," replied the Pope. "I am, however," the Holy Father went on, "quite familiar with the military power of Germany, and I have no reason to disbelieve the claim that she can continue the war three years longer. The prolongation, then, of the war, is the financial and economic ruin of France, which, even if she is victorious, could with difficulty cure her wounded financial credit throughout the world, and it is to avoid this ruin, that I have sought an acceptable basis for peace proposition.

"I believe," added Mgr. Ballandier, "that the Sovereign Pontiff was perfectly right, and that Germany can hold out for three years more. In the TOKIO, Dec. 31.—Fierce fighting is in progress at Irkutsk between the Bolsheviki Red Guards and the Cadet Cossack forces, according to a despatch received to-day by the Kokoai Agency from Harbin.

The Bolsheviki were reported to have murdered a French Consular agent and two other French citizens. The town was said to be in flames. Added to the terrors of the fighting is the almost complete exhaustion of all food. The population is literally starving to death.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. —Director General McAdoo will pay 1,500,000 railroad employees more money.

This was definitely agreed upon between President Wilson and leaders of four great Brotherhoods, and will cover increases for all employees, whether members of the Brotherhoods or not. The Government will not meet the full forty per cent. increase demanded by the men, but an agreement is assured.

At a conference to-day between McAdoo and the U. S. Board of Mediation and Conciliation, a basis of increase was expected to be finally determined.

Motor-Driven Chemical Engine Is Nearly Ready

Peterborough's motor-driven combination chemical engine and hose waggon is expected in the city some time this week. It is some months since the purchase of this piece of apparatus was authorised, and the reason for the delay in delivery is due entirely to the fact that each piece of fire-fighting equipment is made to special order from the wheels up. The decision of the Council to purchase a piece of motor-driven apparatus came after considerable discussion and a Cooke's tour to the United States. Even then some members of the Council were prone to invest in a cheaper engine manufactured by firms whose product was an unknown quantity, and the final decision to purchase the best on the market from a firm which has been manufacturing fire apparatus for over sixty years, was adopted by a narrow margin.

The installation of motor-driven fire apparatus in the Peterborough Fire Department marks a new era in local fire-fighting annals. Peterborough has any number of long runs, with steep grades, and it has been long conceded that the old grey dobbins at the Fire Hall must ultimately give way to faster and more expeditious methods of reaching the scene of the fire.

The Fire, Water, and Light Committee will meet to-night, when Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Committee, will formally release for publication the news of the pending arrival of the motor-driven chemical engine.

Germany In Bad Position Regarding Supply Of Food

Official Data Collected by American Government Experts Show That Hunland Is Experiencing the Pinch of Hunger.

MANY FOODS LACKING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 31. — Germany is in a worse position regarding food than this government had believed for some time past.

Official data recently collected by American government experts from reliable sources in touch with the Teuton food problem, show this conclusively to-day though the government is withholding specific facts.

The pinch of hunger may account, in large measure for the persistence of the German peace movement at this time, for despite the discouragement thereof from allied quarters, the effort to make peace talk sink into allied consciousness continues. There are signs that Germany will stick to her manoeuvres indefinitely.

The United Press was informed today by official sources that this government had been led to believe that the German food situation had improved as a result of the last harvests, but had learned, from careful investigation that this was not the case. Under-nutrition is causing a decrease of efficiency and there is a notable lack of many foods upon which tissue and stamina are built. However, officials say the people should bear in mind that Germany is far from starving to death, and far from being "bled white." She is in a position where peace would be advantageous to her, and to her alone, experts declare. Her overtures, voiced through Russia, do not show any disposition to eliminate Hohenzollern militarism, with its threat of future wars.

MAYOR DUFFUS' New Year Greeting

TO ALL THE CITIZENS OF THE CITY OF PETERBORO.

May I be permitted, before the close of the Mayoralty year, to supplement my review of the business of 1917 presented at the last meeting of the Council, by tendering you sincere and hearty thanks for the cordial goodwill which has existed toward me during my term of office.

While the restraints of my private business and domestic affairs have been somewhat of a severe nature during the past two years, I frankly acknowledge that the duties and privileges associated with the Mayor's chair have brought with them a pleasing sense of the honour of the position, but more especially enlarged experience in Municipal and public affairs.

At this festive season, when all are endeavouring to forget the wrongs of the past and trying to remember the blessings of the present, further reference to the City's business would seem out of place.

With renewed thanks for your kindly support, and the hope that the year of 1918 may be a year of victory for the British Empire and her Allies, progress for Canada and Peterboro, and prosperity and happiness for you, individually, believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

GERMANY ABLE TO CONTINUE FOR YEARS SAYS POPE

Letter From Mgr. Ballandier Gives Holy Father's View of the Possible Outcome of the European Conflict

NOT PLEASANT READING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 31. — La Semaine Religius, the official organ of the Roman Catholic diocese of Montreal, publishes a letter from Mgr. Ballandier, which is far from pleasant reading for the Allies. It purports to give the Pope's view of the possible outcome of the European conflict. It should be said, however, that if the information contained in the letter is of no more value than the affirmation that the United States have a million men at the front, no one need be alarmed.

"They say," writes the clerical correspondent, "that peace may be nearer than people suppose. Russia can no longer be depended on, but a new factor enters upon the scene, for the U. S. have now a million men on the western front and will have two million and a half by spring. That Germany wants peace, and for the present is disposed to accept the terms proposed by the Sovereign Pontiff.

"I wish to give you," adds the correspondence, "the result of an audience granted by the Pope to Cardinal De Caprieres, His Holiness saying that he was accused of desiring a German peace.

"Nothing is more false," replied the Pope. "I am, however," the Holy Father went on, "quite familiar with the military power of Germany, and I have no reason to disbelieve the claim that she can continue the war three years longer. The prolongation, then, of the war, is the financial and economic ruin of France, which, even if she is victorious, could with difficulty cure her wounded financial credit throughout the world, and it is to avoid this ruin, that I have sought an acceptable basis for peace proposition.

"I believe," added Mgr. Ballandier, "that the Sovereign Pontiff was perfectly right, and that Germany can hold out for three years more. In the

Irutsk Said to Be in Flames While Terror of the Situation Is Added to by Almost Complete Exhaustion of Food Supplies

PEOPLE STARVING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ralph Turner.)

TOKIO, Dec. 31.—Fierce fighting is in progress at Irkutsk between the Bolsheviki Red Guards and the Cadet Cossack forces, according to a despatch received to-day by the Kokosi Agency from Harbin.

The Bolsheviki were reported to have murdered a French Consular agent and two other French citizens. The town was said to be in flames. Added to the terrors of the fighting is the almost complete exhaustion of all food. The population is literally starving to death.

Maximalists troops are receiving reinforcements from Krasnojursky.

Increase For U. S. Trainmen

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. —Director General McAdoo will pay 1,500,000 railroad employees more money.

This was definitely agreed upon between President Wilson and leaders of four great Brotherhoods, and will cover increases for all employees, whether members of the Brotherhoods or not. The Government will not meet the full forty per cent. increase demanded by the men, but an agreement is assured.

At a conference to-day between McAdoo and the U. S. Board of Meditation and Conciliation, a basis of increase was expected to be finally determined.

TO-MORROW'S DUTY.

The ratepayers are again reminded of the duty of casting their ballots to-morrow. It's more than duty—it's business. The ratepayers must select the men who are to administer their interests the next year—or some of them two years. To a certain extent the people are to blame if they are badly governed—they select the men to do the governing.

For Aldermen, the people to-morrow have a choice to make amongst the following:

Centre Ward — Messrs. John Edgar and A. H. Stratton.

East Ward — Messrs. T. W. Oke and A. Weir.

South Ward — Messrs. George T. Dryland, Joseph Saunders and John J. Turner.

For membership of the Board of Education, there are five men to be selected from a field of eight. Alphabetically arranged the names are:

G. O. Cameron, E. G. Patterson,
J. M. Greene, W. H. Pretty,
G. B. Munro, Jos. Wearing,
F. C. Neal, M.D. J. W. Worth.

It might be well to remember in selecting School Board members, that the technical and sanitary problems that require attention, demand special qualification and adaptation in the membership of the Board.

Then there is the question to be voted upon as to whether we are hereafter to elect Aldermen by general vote or adhere to the ward system, by which the electors can only vote for two out of the ten aldermen, who, with the Mayor, compose the City Council. In effect, to-morrow, every elector will vote to decide whether he shall next year vote for every alderman or for only two—whether he shall be directly represented in the council by ten aldermen or only two.

Ratepayers should not neglect to vote on this bylaw and for the bylaw to give the DeLaval Company forty feet of the unused street reservation for a site for new buildings for which there is no available space on their present site. The street in question is of no use to the city, and probably never will be of any use, for there is no prospect that it will be ever opened for traffic. But it will be of great use and benefit to the company and to the city, for the city will get the benefit of enlarged manufacturing facilities for the company, which is a very important element in our prosperity.

It is a good policy for Peterborough to help her industries grow. It's a policy worth voting for.

THE FUTURE OF FUEL.

With the thermometer hovering threateningly in the neighbourhood of the thirties, the question of fuel supply takes a stronger grip upon our consideration, and leads to at least some loose thinking and timid resolve to look out more sharply for a fuel supply next winter. We did the same last winter. The authorities wakened up, and this year the fuel situation is some better, but still far from satisfactory.

Events show that anthracite coal is less and less to be depended upon as a certain source of supply; and it is the part of wisdom to dig up Why not try peat? It is not by any means the equal of coal; but half a loaf is better than no bread; and many of us many a time would have been glad of a bin full of peat fuel.

There is an unlimited supply of peat in the immense peat bogs of Ontario. The experimental work of the Dominion Government at Alfred in Eastern Ontario—on the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway—demonstrated that good peat fuel can be made at a cost of $3.50 per ton. Of course, it is not as good fuel as hard coal, but it costs one-third less, and it is, after all, better than no coal at all; and it has come to something very like a toss-up between peat fuel and no fuel at all. When the fuel situation is so uncertain, should not our Governments do something to ease the tension?

We have inexhaustible deposits of peat. But the Dominion Government has its hands full of war work. It is virtually on the "double" now. The Ontario Government, as far as the war work stride is concerned, is merely "marking time." It has some few war problems to solve. But they are more of the future than the present. The pressing need is fuel, and if experiment has shown that the conversion of Ontario peat deposits into a practical article of fuel is a demonstrated possibility—a feasible enterprise—why not take action?

Prompt action, involving energetic organisation, might easily be made to result in a supply of peat fuel for next season.

We have wasted our forest fuel resources; we are faced with a fuel famine; and what better thing, what better statesmanship, than to develop our fuel sources like peat, which, we are told by men who know, like Mr. E. E. Haanil, Chief of the Fuels and Fuel Testing of the Department of Mines, can, with proper utilisation, furnish an immense supply of fuel. It may not and will not be as good as hard coal, but peat fuel that we can get at $3.50 a ton is better than coal that we cannot get at $10 per ton.

We are fighting to down the war lords. We must make an effort to render ourselves a little more independent of the coal barons.

LABOUR AND ITS PLACE.

The Union government has academically conceded the rights of Labour to representation in the Cabinet, and has politically—also academically—promised it. But to come down to facts, why should there be any necessity for special distinction of Labour, as if it were a thing apart from other interests of the nation; as if in a right and proper scheme of things Labour should not be included with Capital as a recognised factor in government and national enterprise.

We are coming to a time when there will be needed in after-war reconstruction and readjustment a new point of view of the functions and relations of national forces. In the national rehabilitation Labour will, if its relative importance and indispensability are recognized—if it is to most effectively play the part it must play, will be called upon to take a large part. As more than once remarked, Labour is fairly well organised for the protection of its material interests; but it is not at all organised for the protection of higher interests. It has no organization to exercise political influences. In this regard Labour in Canada is different from the position it holds in Great Britain. In Britain Labour exercises a powerful and fully organised political influence. The spirit and ambitions of British Labour are generally expressed in the following excerpt from a contribution of Mr. Sidney Webb in the New Republic:

"The British Labour party stands essentially for revolt against the inequality of circumstance that degrades and brutalises and disgraces our civilisation. It abhors and repudiates the unscientific and immoral doctrine that the competitive struggle for the means of life is, in human society, either inevitable or requisite for the survival of the fittest; it declares, indeed, in the full accord of science, that competition produces degradation and death, while it is conscious and deliberate cooperation that is productive of life and progress. It is unreservedly democratic in its conviction—here also fortified by political science—that only by the widest possible participation in power and sciousness of consent, can any civilized community attain either its fullest life or it utmost efficiency. . . .

"And, finally, the British Labour party has faith in internationalism (as distinguished from the characteristically liberal cosmopolitanism.) It repudiates all Imperialism or desire for domination over other races, it pleads for the right of each people to live its own life and make its own specific contribution to the world in its own way, recognising, indeed, no one 'superior race,' but 'reciprocal superiorities' among all races."

DO PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION PROMOTE PRODUCTION EFFICIENCY?

The United States Senate Committee on Military Affairs was not satisfied with way things were going at the Government arsenals conducted under public ownership. They called in an expert, Fred H. Colvin, editor of the technical newspaper, The American Machinist. He gave some very interesting evidence. His evidence created a great sensation, and is leading to a complete reorganisation of the arsenals and the War Office officialdom responsible for conditions.

Workmen in arms manufacturing plants played checkers and slept in the shops during August, while the War Department quibbled over non-essential details of rifle designs.

A super-preciseness of requirement in rifle making, going even to the extent of 1-2000th exactness in bayonets is holding down production 40 per cent., he said.

Mr. Colvin declared the Government arsenals at Springfield, Mass., and Rock Island, Ill., do not understand manufacturing principles and have antiquated machinery. Some of the machinery at the Springfield arsenal is fifty years old.

He charged that "an excessive nicety of requirement" in unimportant parts of rifles held up rifle production "tremendously."

"The bayonet is only a butcher knife and a sixteenth of an inch would not make any difference," he said, "yet a variation of 1-2000th is sufficient cause for rejection."

"I have photographs taken of men in the Winchester factory playing checkers last August," he said further. "Details of manufacturing had not been decided upon by the War Department. The one great weakness was that everyone hesitated to take the responsibility in deciding these details."

"Were all the men playing checkers?" asked Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska.

"No; some were sleeping," Mr. Colvin answered.

That the dilatory tactics of the Ordnance Department will prevent first delivery of the Browning machine guns until a full year after the entrance of the United States into the war was again emphasised by the next witness.

General Crozier, the United States Chief of Ordnance, gave orders that Mr. Colvin should be barred from inspecting arsenals because he insisted that expert machinists and not army officers should be in charge.

This experience shows wha happens under public ownership. It also exposes the stupid antipathy that prevails among public officials against business and technical papers. Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade, voted to put Canadian technical newspapers out of business, Hon. Mr. Burrell, late Minister of Agriculture, supported a movement that would tax farm papers out of business. Even Mr. Murray, the Secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, after recommending every medium of publicity for Canadian manufacturers, from buttons to billboards, deliberately eliminated all reference to the business press.

When the manufacturers wanted to know how to make munitions it was not to the buttons or billboards but to the technical newspapers they applied. The Trade and Commerce Department was helpless. The Manufacturers' Association did absolutely nothing for them. Not only did the newspaper Canadian Machinery show in a series of illustrated articles, how to adapt Canadian plants for munitions, but they secured blue prints and specifications for French and Russian shells so that their readers could and did tender on them.—Financial Post.

$300 YEARLY WILL DRESS WOMAN, SAYS DESIGNER, OVERLOOKED PETTICOATS

The Chicago Designers' Association says any woman can dress on $300 a year. Thus:

Three or four pairs of shoes, $20; three or four hats, $25; ten pairs of stockings, $10; one corset, $5; one year's underclothing, $25; one year's hairpins, buttons, ribbons, etc., $5; spring suit, $30; two summer dresses, $10; sport suit, $10; three or four shirt waists, $20; winter suit, $35; coat, $25; three pairs of gloves, $10; party dress, $30; furs, $30; miscellaneous, $10.

Alexander Weiss, who furnished the list, was reminded that he had left out petticoats.

"Petticoats?" he echoed; "what are they?"

Ottawa Won From Wanderers

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—Ottawa moved up to within one game of the champion Canadiens Saturday night when they defeated the Wanderers of Montreals nine goals to two in a fast and brilliantly played game. The spectators shivered in the bitter cold waiting for the arrival of the Montreal team, whose trains was two hours late.

The score does not at all represent the progress of the play as for two periods the visitors were strongly in evidence, poor shooting alone depriving them of an equal division during the early portions of the contest. The score at the end of the second period was Ottawa 4, Wanderers 1. In the final period however the Red Bands showed the result of the diversified tactics of the Senators, and a total of five goals were notched, while the invaders only bulged the nets once.

Ottawa were without the services of Frank Nighbor, who has not yet received his transfer from the Royal Flying Corps, Toronto, but Crawford, who played for more than half the time, was in fine form, and the team was not weakened. The Wanderers were strengthened by the addition of Jack Marks and Billy Bell, but the latter had his foot badly cut in the second period, and his retirement had the effect of badly demoralising the Red Bands.

The players suffered greatly from the cold and nearly every player had his toes frost-bitten.

To the Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—Ald. Stratton is evidently trying to mislead the people by telling them he is a resident of Centre Ward. His house is situated on Park Street, which is in the West Ward. Both candidates live outside the Centre Ward, and both have their business interests in the Centre Ward. Let us support and elect the man who does not try to mislead us.

Vote for Mr. Edgar.

Centre Ward Elector.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—There is an exceptionally good field of strong men for the Board of Education, but Mr. E. G. Patterson, who has spent a lifetime in business affairs of a very high and responsible order should receive one vote from each of the electors to-morrow, because he is a man of business ability and standing who will assist very largely in administering the city's affairs.

The public should remember that the Board of Education spends $100,000 per year, and this large amount needs careful, shrewd, business men to properly watch the city's interests.—Yours truly, Electrician.

AGED BLIND MEN FIGHT OVER THE WAR.

German and Russian in Home Come to Blows During Argument.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Two blind men, inmates of the Home of Aged and Infirm on Blackwell's Island became enraged yesterday during an argument concerning the war, and fought to a finish. Gustav Sailor, who came from Germany, took the German end of the discussion against Alexander Bugdn, who is 69, and a former subject of Russia.

Sailor had a cane near his cot. He seized the weapon and belaboured the Russian until he was unconscious.

Magistrate McQuade, in the Yorkville Court, held Sailor without bail to await the report of the physicians who are attending the blind Russian.

Miss E. V. Galvin's Services Appreciated In Medicine Hat

The following from the Medicine Hat Daily News will be read with interest here:

Yesterday afternoon the pupils of St. Louis school held their closing concert, consisting of readings, recitations, songs and instrumental selections. Master Leonard McKinnon filled the presiding chair most acceptably, while Mrs. B. Scanlan acted as accompanist of the children. Fathers McCoy and Osborne honoured the occasion wtih their presence, and addressed the children at the close of the concert A novel feature of the closing exercises was an old-time spelling match—all too few in schools to-day—between the four higher grades. This proved most interesting and instructive, and the principal, Miss V. E. Galvin, found it somewhat difficult to send the children to their seats The best speller in each of the four grades was presented with a richly bound volume of Scott, Dickens, Irvine or Longfellow—the gift of Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick. The winners are Mildred Degon, Lily Stacey, Harry Winters and Anna Birosh. Master Lavole won first in recitation in his able rendition of "Bruce and the Spider" and recived a beautiful prise as a reward. At the close of the exercises, the presiding boy read the following address to Miss V. E. Galvin, principal, while Master Harry Winters presented their teacher with a beautiful set of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" and a morocco bound volume of Longfellow. Miss Galvin responded in terms most appreciative of the kindness and generosity of her pupils—spoke most encouragingly of the future success of St. Louis school and the necessity of honest, personal work in every class of the school.

Every pupil received a Christmas gift of books, candy, oranges, etc., the gift of the school board. Mrs. Scanlan was also presented with a nicely bound volume of Stephen Leacock's "Arcadian Adventures with the Idle Rich."

Following is the address presented to Miss V. E. Galvin, principal of St. Louis School:

Dear Teacher,—As the happy season of Christmas is already upon us, we, the pupils of St. Louis school, wish to give you some expression of our appreciation of your faithful and energetic services during the term now drawing to a close, and, at the same time, to assure you that your many acts of kindness, generosity and patient forbearance towards us have not gone unnoticed, even by the youngest members of your class.

Though often thoughtless negligent and apparently indifferent we could not fail to see your anxious care for our success, and your willingness at all times, to make sacrifices in our behalf.

We feel confident that under your skilful teaching, wise guidance and generous sympathy, our school days will be made brighter, our tasks easier and our success in the future surer.

If we have been careless in our work, or in any way disobedient during the past term, we ask your forgiveness to-day, and we promise, for the year to come, more diligence in our study and more faithful compliance to your expressed wishes and a greater pride in the daily advancement we are making in all our work. As a proof of our sincerity and as a slight token of the love and esteem with which we regard you, we ask you to accept this small gift, and with it our very best wishes for a happy Christmas and a successful New Year as our valued teacher and principal. Signed on behalf of school: Marie Bosley, Irene Fitzpatrick, Helen Fitzpatrick, Mabel Costello, Anna Birosh, Dennis Bosley, Leonard McKinnon, Joseph Noveski, Thos. Cooper, Jas. Costello, Wm. Cooper, Nelson Barreau, Albert Beauregard, Michael Maloney, Edward Murphy.

THE QUESTION OF SUGAR

What the Food Controller Says

The production of beet sugar in France this year has been estimated at only 207,000 tons, as compared with an average annual production during the five years before the war (1902-3) of 752,542. Normal consumption in France is 704,830 tons. The beet sugar production of Italy has also been reduced from a pre-war average of 211,000 tons to 75,000 tons. The pre-war annual consumption of sugar in the United Kingdom was 2,056,000 tons, all of which had to be imported. About 70 per cent. of the supply of the United Kingdom came from countries from which it is now cut off by the war, Great Britain, France and Italy would require to import about 2,700,000 tons before the next crop—and most of it from new sources—if they were to maintain their normal consumption.

But the necessity of conserving supplies of sugar, which was emphasized by the shortage of shipping, has resulted in stern economies among the Allies. Before the war, England had the largest per capita consumption of sugar of any nation—93 1-3 pounds per person per year. This has now been reduced to 26 pounds per person per year, or about one ounce per day per person. In Great Britain prices have now been fixed for jams and jellies. There is no sugar for the home-made product. In France the people are on rations of 1.1 pounds per person per month, which the Government distributes at about 25 cents per pound. In Italy, because of the shortage of sugar supplies, the Government has set a retail price of $1.25 for a box containing 2.2 pounds. In Germany the present sugar ration is only .77 pounds per person per month. In the United States and Canada the per capita monthly consumption of sugar is about 7.4 pounds.

The Food Controller has asked Canadians to reduce their consumption of sugar by at least 7 ounces per week per person and, in order to provide larger supplies to meet the necessary requirements of the Allies, a further reduction of 3 pounds per person per month may be urged. Steps have already been taken to curtail the use of cane sugar in candy-making and the use of sugar or molasses in distillation of petable liquors has been prohibited.

About 50 per cent. of the sugar consumed in North America is imported from Cuba so that the Cuban product is the dominating market factor. The International Sugar Commission, representing the Allied countries as well as the United States Food Administration and the Food Controller for Canada, is endeavouring to secure the Cuban production at a reasonable price. By curtailing consumption in this country so that the necessity of securing the Cuban crop is not so urgent, the people of Canada will be assisting the Sugar Commission, the Allied countries and themselves in obtaining supplies for spring and summer at lower prices than would otherwise be possible.

BRITISH WAR WEDDINGS ESTIMATED AT 200,000.

United Kingdom Suffers Far Less than Germany from Decrease in Births.

London, December 28. — "Crudely stated the war has resulted in 200,000 persons in the United Kingdom being married between August, 1914, and June, 1917, who in the ordinary course would not have married," says Sir Bernard Mallet, president of the Statistical Society.

The loss of potential lives to the belligerent countries by the decrease in the number of children born was perhaps the most important effect upon vital statistics produced by the war, he said. In births the United Kingdom had suffered far less than Germany and Hungary, the United Kingdom having lost 10,000 to a million of the population, Germany 40,000 and Hungary 70,000.

The infant mortality in the Summer of 1915 appeared to have been very high in several German cities, and the German rate remained some 50 per cent. higher than in England.

An alteration in the sex ratio of births appeared to be established by the figures of the United Kingdom, the proportion of males having notorably increased. Contrary to expectations, the war had produced no effect on illegitimate births.

FIELD MOUSE AS ENGINEER.

We had dug holes for the poles of our new transmission line extending between the power house and a new pumping plant. A field mouse trotting around tumbled into one of them and was imprisoned during the night. Making my usual morning inspection of the work I noticed the little fellow running around the bottom of the hole trying to find some means of escape. When I came back from my tour he had settled to business. He was digging steadily a spiral groove round and round the inner surface of the hole with a uniformly ascending grade.

At the end of two weeks the little fellow struck a rock too big for him to move. For nearly a day he tried to get around it, but without success. Then with wonderful patience and unflinching courage, he dug another pocket, reversed his spiral, and went on tunnelling his way in the opposite direction. At the end of hree weeks he was coming near the top. Morning came, the mouse had sped away, his spiral road completed.—Louis B. Lawrence in January Popular Mechanics Magazine.

MEN SHIED AT LIBERTY

Washington, D. C. — Echoes of the American struggle for liberty in 1776 have been found by War Department officials in their search of the records of Harfords county, Md., in connection with perfecting title to the new army proving ground. A detached document in the clerk's files dated 1776 sets forth the names of fifteen citsens of the region who refused to sign a declaration of independence said to have been among the first moves in that direction by the American colonists. The reasons given for refusing to sign present a vivid picture of the perturbed state of mind of the colonists. The document reads:

"Benjamin Herbert, Jr., refuses to sign through religious principles.

"Richard T. Hargrove refuses to sign through religious principles.

"William Wilson, son of John, refuses to sign through religious principles.

"Benjamin Harboard refuses to sign through religious principles.

"Michael Boser don't sign by reason he has signed before.

"Thomas Gilbert don't sign by reason that he don't choose.

"Thomas West don't sign by reason it is a mystery to him.

"Philip Cummins don't sign by reason he don't understand the matter.

"John Ward don't sign by reason the Congress don't sign and by reason he thinks that if the English gain the day then the Congress and the great people will turn the scale and say the commonality of people forced them to stand in opposition to the English.

"John Clark don't sign by no reason he can give.

"Ephraim Arnold don't sign for feat it would fetch him into a scrape.

"Isaac Penrose don't sign for reason he don't choose to fight for liberty, and never ill.

"Benjamin Fleetwood refuses to sign. He says he will go in a vessel; will not fight by land.

"Samuel Gallion says if he should sign he may fetch on himself that he cannot go through.

"Richard Spencer says he cannot write or read, and shall not sign any paper."

"MOST GRATEFUL WOMAN IN TOWN"

"The Way Tanlac Helped Me Is Simply Wonderful," Says Mrs. Edwards

"I feel so happy over what Tanlac did for me I just want to tell everbody about it," said Mrs. Florence Edwards, a resident of Buttonwood avenue, Mt. Dennis, Toronto.

"Several weeks ago," continued Mrs. Edwards, "I contracted a severe pain that settled in my side. In a little while my left side, arm and shoulder began to throb and ache till I suffered agonies from rheumatism. The trouble got worse and worse till finally my arm and shoulder were so stiff it almost killed me to bend over and I actually was unable to put on my shoes. My shoulder hurt so I couldn't rest and sometimes for two whole nights I wasn't able to sleep a wink. My side felt like a sharp knife was sticking in it and I was so weak and helpless I just had to give up my housework, for hardly an hour passed over my head that I wasn't miserable the whole time.

"Just as soon as I started taking Tanlac I began to feel better and the pain seemed to be leaving me. I am now on my second bottle and already that awful pain in my side is entirely gone and I am feeling better all over. My arm and shoulder are entirely free from rheumatism and I can now do all my housework as well as lieved me of that awful rheumatism is loved me of thta awful rheumatism is simply wonderful and it has made me the most grateful woman in town.

Rheumatism is not only one of the most prevalent, but one of the most painful and difficult to treat of all present day diseases. When the digestive organs and bowels are not working properly, and the kidneys become clogged up, the whole system becomes deranged and saturated with uric acid poisons and other impurities, which accumulate in the joints and other parts of the body and produce the condition known as rheumatism.

Tanlac is a powerful reconstructive tonic and quickly overcomes this condition by acting directly on the vital organs, toning them up and enabling them to perform their proper functions, so that the impurities are soon eliminated from the system in a natural way. Liniments and external applications as a general thing only afford temporary relief. Tanlac is a constitutional treatment and gets right at the root of the trouble by removing the cause.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

COST OF THE WAR

If the war came to an end this winter its cost would have reached $145,000,000,000. This is the estimate of Mr. F. W. Hirst, a well-known English economist. He places the cost of the war to date to Great Britain and the Dominions at $30,000,000,000, and a similar amount for Germany. Russia's war costs are put at $27,500,000,000 and those of France at $25,000,000,000. His opinion is that the portent of the war expenditure figures is still concealed by "curtains woven out of war loans and embroidered with high wages, huge profits, fine words and all the paraphernalia of fictitious prosperity," and he predicts a greater social and economic revolution, a more sweeping change of properties than has been witnessed in Great Britain since the Norman Conquest.

One of the most pleasing features of war finance is that the method of paying for the war by printing paper money has been adopted in Great Britain for the war bycl,rCu etaoin hr tain only to a small extent. Enumerating the methods of paying for war, namely: (1) Out of income by taxation; (2) by loans on which posterity pays the interest; (3) by issues of paper money; or (4) by forced labour or conscription, Mr. Hirst says that every student of finance is puzzled to understand how, after three years of war, the British are able to spend £8,000,000 a day, the Germans £6,000,000 and the French £4,000,000 or £5,000,000. He thinks it is a case of "vanishing assets"—the gradual consumption of stocks accumulated before the war. He quoted a government official to the effect that after the war every worker will have to put in about a quarter of the working day in helping to wipe off the cost of the war.

To The Electors

141 Hunter Street, E,
Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 25th, /17.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the City of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "general" education and "technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous boards of education, and will endeavour, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the City of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,

GOVERNMENT AID NEEDED TO INCREASE FOOD PRODUCTION

Grain Wanted Instead of Grass and Weeds--Not One Move Has Yet Been Made By the Government to Stimulate Production

"That the Government should, without delay, endeavour to encourage "the breaking of a large acreage of wide lands in order that such new soil "may be ready for cultivation next year and our productive capacity there-"by increased."

"That the shortage of farm labour must be met and the method of "meeting it must be prompt and decisive if our production of wheat and "other cereals is to be maintained, let alone increased."

Such were the resolutions that were placed before the Dominion Senate last session and supported by two of the ablest and most far-seeing business men in the Dominion of Canada. They are both Conservatives and both of them possess widely extended knowledge.

One of them is Hon. Edward Nicholls, the head of the Canadian General Electric, and the other is Hon. H. W. Richardson of Kingston. Both of them are in daily touch with world-wide conditions, and their opinions are worthy of the highest respect.

But what became of their resolutions last session? They were unheeded and thrown into the waste-paper basket by a Government that was more concerned in winning the then coming election, than in serving the people of Canada and winning the war.

Yes. Both resolutions should have been acted upon and especially so, when it was then well known that our Allies in Europe were face to face with a food shortage that was, and is, nothing short of appalling.

Not one move has been made by Sir Robert Borden to lend Government aid to stimulate increased food production.

Sir Robert Borden and his "new-fledged and unhatched comrades" know full well that thousands of people in Belgium have died, and are dying, of starvation and that "hundreds of thousands of people in Italy are on the verge of starvation," and that the bread line in England is many miles longer than a Sabbath day's journey.

Still no action is being taken to prepare to make our fertile lands in the West produce grain instead of grass during this coming year.

Sir Robert Borden and his Government seem to be charmed into inaction and find music in the doleful song of the many thousands who hourly chant "This is a meatless day."

These are some of the reasons why I opposed Sir Robert Borden and his "do nothing Government."

He and his Government won in the recent election by deceit and by the basest appeals that could be made to passion, prejudice and interest, and many people in Canada are now realizing that hunger and cold can not be kept away by distrusting and hating Quebec.

The reports that come to us from the British Government clearly show that unless we in Canada can make up the food shortage of our Allies "that victory may slip from our united grasp."

I would suggest that every man and woman who voted for Mr. J. H. Burnham write him a letter demanding that Sir Robert Borden at once take action to give Government aid to increase food production during this coming year and the year that is to come. That may produce results. The election is over. Let us unite to do something to grow grain instead of grass and weeds.

Miss Gladys Lewis Wins Pathephone

Champion Girl Bread Baker of Six Counties

The bread baking contest of the Campbell Flour Mills which was conducted during the fall has had a winner in this district. Miss Gladys Lewis, of Verulam, won a fine Pathephone, valued at $150.00 with a good selection of records.

The district over which she won embraced Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterborough, Northumberland, Victoria and Durham Counties. Miss Lewis is sixteen years old.

NEW YORK BANKER PREDICTS LONG WAR

Mr. Thos. W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan and Company, who has just returned to New York from a trip to England and France, has issued the following statement:

"On the other side there is great satisfaction at the vigour with which America has taken hold. But even so some doubt is expressed whether we yet fully realize the gigantic nature of the task ahead of us. Many here seem to have had the impression that by the mere fact of our coming into the war the early defeat of Germany became assured. One does not have to cross the ocean to realize that that is a delusion. No one can maintain that victory is close at hand. But it will soon be in sight if we realize that now we must prepare, not only for 1918, but for the campaigns of 1919 and 1920. Great Britain and France have had three-and-a-half years of cruel, grinding war. They have welcomed America's entry, not simply because of her great resources in men, food and munitions, but also because of the fresh viewpoint she is likely to bring to bear in the whole continuance of the war."

"Team Work" Needed In Coal Delivery

KEEP CHECK ON THE DEALERS.

Communication to Heads of Municipalities by Federal Administrator.

Ottawa, December 30. — With the object of ensuring a fair distribution of coal among consumers, C. A. Magrath, Dominion Fuel Controller, has written to the mayors of all cities and towns throughout the Dominion, suggesting the appointment of an official to look after the interests of those who have been refused coal by dealers.

"I would suggest," says Mr. Magrath in his letter, that you should appoint some one in your municipality, preferably one of your civic officials, whose business it will be to look into every application for coal by any householder which is refused by dealers, and if it appears to be a case of actual need, and your office is aware that there is available stock of coal in the hands of any such dealer, such dealer shall forthwith be ordered to meet emergency, irrespective of whether the applicant in question is a regular customer or not.

"This is the time when 'team work' is absolutely essential, and I am in hopes that if the situation is put squarely before the dealers in your town they will be willing to voluntarily co-operate with you in order to relieve any such cases of emergency that may arise. I shall be obliged if you will indicate the name of any dealer who shows a disposition to disregard the public interest, and I will communicate with him direct from here."

Willard Quits; Circus A Failure

HEAVY WEIGHT CHAMPION FAILED TO MAKE SAWDUST RING PAY.

New York, December 29. — Jess Willard has very good reason for declaring that his circus is for sale, and that never again will he tread the sawdust rings. Jess has not told anybody just why he is through but everybody guessed that he was not a premium on a Buffalo Bill, and there he could not get away with it.

Jack Curley, who used to draw down a piece of Jess' money after he became the heavy-weight champion of the world, provides a very good cause for Jess' withdrawal from the summer Show business. It is not denied that the champion is going to corroborate Jack because the two boys don't get along any more, and because Jess is the sole caretaker of the wallet.

Anyway Jack says that Willard lost nothing short of $100,000 since he parted company with the hero of Havana, to say nothing of $62,000 the fellow forked over for the proprietorship of of the tent amusement. That's reason enough, isn't it?

"He has nothing to worry about, until he wants to," concluded the well-known promoter. "He must have somewhere from a quarter of a million to $300,000 left, and that ought to take care of him. As for fighting, he is not the giant many believe. He weighs fifteen or twenty pounds less than he did in Havana it's all fat."

LINDSAY PLANT TO RESUME MILLING OPERATIONS

LINDSAY, Dec. 31.—On Thursday, Messrs. MacLeod, general manager of the Canadian Cereal and Flour Mills, Limited, and W. McIver, another official of the company, came down from Toronto and made a thorough inspection of the local plant with the object of resuming operations at an early date.

The two men spent some time at the mill carefully ascertaining what was required to thoroughly equip it for immediate operation.

They gave out the information that the opening of the mill was imperative, as the firm's output of flour did not begin to meet the demand.

General Manager MacLeod will return to Lindsay in the course of a fortnight, when it is expected that the company's plans will have fully matured, and steps taken to have the plant running as soon as it can be put in shape.

Death loves a shining mark. That's why most men do not fear it.

Strange to say a woman is not afraid of the man with the spirit of a mouse.

LINDSAY FIREMAN HAS RESIGNED

LINDSAY, Dec. 31.—Fireman W. H. Bell, a veteran member of the Lindsay Fire Brigade, tendered his resignation to the Council, coupled with his best wishes to the members for a happy New Year.

The Council, in accepting the resignation, expressed their great appreciation of the excellent manner in which he discharged his duties over a long period of years.

"WHICH ONE SHALL I MARRY"?

"Which One Shall I Marry?" is a new idea in the drama. Written originally in one-act form, it prospered in the variety houses of this country and Europe because of its orginality. Its author, Ralph T. Kettering, has done that which most playwrights have sought to perform—created a new and original idea. The story of the play begins in allegorical form. The young girl around whom the story revolves is discovered at the "crossroads of life," where the mysterious character of "Advice" comes to her to point to a successful future. She is sought in marriage by a rich man and a poor man. The former offers her everything that money can buy, while the other can offer her love only. It is then that she propounds the question, "Which One Shall I Marry?" The scene then changes to the back yard of her home, where the story begins. At the end of this scene she prays upon bended knees that she may be shown her future life with both men. No sooner said than she is transported to the "grey forest of doubt," and there she is lost. It is the rich man who meets her and takes her to his home. As the wife of the rich man she is discontented and commits suicide. Her soul is wafted to the "land of sham," in which purgatory she prays for deliverance. She then finds herself in the "realms of reality," where the waters are blue, grass is green, and the sunshine everywhere. Here the poor man comes to her and leads her to his humble home. She is happy there, but has none of the things that money can buy. Again she wonders whether she has chosen wrongly, and finds herself again in the "grey forest of doubt." Then reaching a decision, she is discovered back in her own home—and if we told you what her final decision really was you would not enjoy the play half so much.

"Which One Shall I Marry?" will be seen at The Grand on Saturday next, 5th January, for 2 performances.

$100 BLAZE IN BED ROOM

Damage to the extent of about $100 was done to the home of Mr. Thomas Quinlan, 718 Water street, when a fire from some unknown cause broke out in a bed room of his house at 6.50 p. m. The fire, which had evidently been smouldering for some hours, had gained rapid headway and destroyed all the contents of the room. Chief Grange extinguished the blaze with 1 chemical and 600 feet of hose.

FOOD SHORTAGE IN CUBA.

Natives Working in Sugar Fields Cannot Produce Other Staples.

HAVANA, Dec. 29.—The food shortage here is acute. Even the American Minister is unable to buy lard or butter. The last lard he bought was at 80 cents a pound. New York grocers have been unable to fill his order for staples because of the United States' regulations.

Flour here is $20 a barrel and the supply is practically exhausted. Other staples are in a similar situation.

The small Cuban population cannot produce $300 or $400 worth of sugar per capita, and at the same time produce their own food. The United States needs sugar and it ought to feed the producers.

Centre Ward Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In appealing for your votes in my behalf as candidate for alderman for Centre Ward, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I am a firm believer in Municipal Government by Commission, recognizing the fact that better results are to be obtained under this system, and if elected will do all I can to have the system fully explained and an opportunity given to the ratepayers to decide the question for themselves.

The foot bridge at the C.P.R. speaks for itself as the result of my work when in Council. I take credit for this, as Councils in previous years tried to secure this bridge and were unsuccessful. This bridge is very convenient and useful to the general public.

There are several important matters coming before next year's Council requiring careful consideration, and I assure you if elected will have my careful consideration.

Trusting you will see to it that I am elected as your representative in Centre Ward.

The Concluding Year has proven a most gratifying success

FUEL SITUATION ACUTE BUT ALL URGENT NEEDS ARE BEING SUPPLIED BY THE DEALERS

Five cars of "run of mine" coal have been received by the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, Mayor Duffus stated this morning, and is being sold at $11.00 a ton. This arrival is most opportune for, according to Mr. Hicks, the fuel situation has reached an acute stage, as the result of the prolonged spell of zero weather. The police handled about twenty-five urgent appeals this morning and with one single exception they were from homes that were in actual need of immediate relief. The exception was a family that had about three hundred pounds of coal on hand—a fairly fortunate condition in contrast with the many who applied for fuel.

Although the situation is acute and, to a certain extent, serious, it is not alarming. If the dealers who have supplies apportion them on the plan of providing consumers with sufficient quantities to carry them through the present crisis there should be no actual distress. Only the provident ones will be able to join the diminishing chorus: "There'll be a hot time in the old town." The continued co-operation of the dealers and the public is regarded as the only solution of the problem, which may be exemplified by one man's experience this morning. When he asked for a half ton of coal he was asked how long his supply would last.

"It will likely do me till Wednesday," he replied.

"Well, you come around on Wednesday and we'll see that you get coal was the dealer's response.

The City has two cars somewhere on the rails, and the Mayor has telegraphed their numbers to Sir Henry Drayton, begging him to use his influence in speeding them to Peterborough.

Wood is selling at $12.00 a cord, although $11 is the quoted price per cord. The fact that deliveries are mostly in small lots, especially in quarter-cord, at $3.00, brings the actual cost per cord up to $12.00. The citizens, in their extremity, are glad to get fuel at any price, but several of them recently bemoaned their neglect in not bringing in a car load when they had the opportunity, last summer. They stated that they could have got a car load from the north country at less than $6 a cord, f.o.b., Peterborough. In the same district local dealers bought up all they could obtain, and the citizens who passed up their chance allege that the profits on this wood must be netting the dealers a comfortable gain if they are retailing it at $12.

A farmer offered a load of dry mixed birch, tamarac and maple at $9.00 on the market this morning. A quantity of dead poplar in the under layers stripped the price of its bargain aspect. Other farmers were besieging the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company for both coal and wood. One man offered to load the coal, help cut the wood, and, of course, draw it home.

In the meantime it is is now commonplace to see children with their handsleighs loaded with bags of coal. But after all, this city is evidently in better fuel circumstances than many other Ontario towns whose dealers and municipal leaders failed to estimate the winter market conditions and are now in dire straits.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—The British have recovered part of their lost territory on the Cambrai front, near La Vacquerie. The losses of the British aresaid to have been heavy.

(By Jos. Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 31.—Several Allied diplomats here to-day recommended to their respective governments that they participate in a conference here which would proclaim a concrete general peace policy of the Allies. The United Press learned from authoritative sources that this recommendation was made in the belief that such a move is the only thing that can stay the separate peace madness of the Bolsheviki.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The Kaiser agred that the Chancelor Hertling should participate in the selection of representatives to Brest Litovsk Peace conference, according to a State Department despatch from Copenhagen, made public to-day.

This step—the first recent move even remotely resembling stronger democratic representation in the German Government—was regarded here, however, as insincere. "The Kaiser probably had his hand in very strongly," said a high official, contradicting the impression that this might be a real movement toward democratization.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 31. — Many miners are reported killed by a gas explosion in the Underwood mine of the Pennsylvania Coal Company, near Throop, about six miles from this city. Germany Able To Continue For, etc.

Pope's peace proposition there were the questions of Alsace and Lorraine and the return of the African colonies to Germany. The question of Alsace and Lorraine is in a good way of settlement. In spite of the official talk of the Reichstag, Germany could not directly return the lost provinces, even under pressure from England, which has just declared that she was with France in this matter. Germany, however, will turn the question.

"There is a question of making Alsace and Lorraine an independent country, with a German prince at its head, and, later on, being independent, the State could hand itself to France. Germany could not object and the Catholics would be satisfied with a like arrangement.

"The second question is more delicate, viz., the German African colonies, which should be returned to their former country. On this point, however, I have an absolutely no data except to indicate grosso modo, how this question will be solved."

The correspondent also tells of an interesting event whereby the Pope was able to render a very valuable service to the German Catholics.

"There was, for instance, a complete lack of olive oil in Germany, this being the one authorized for the administration of Baptism and Confirmation. His Holiness, with the consent of the Italian government, purchased a great quantity of olive oil in Italy and had the same forwarded to the Bishops of Germany, who were, of course, very grateful to the Holy Father.

Another Water Front Exploded

A Simple Precaution to Prevent Real Happenings—Don't Start Fire If Water Pipes Frozen

This morning the members of a Gilmour Street family, while quietly taking breakfast, were startled by the noise of a loud explosion, with the accompaniment of stove lids flying over their heads and other articles on the range driven broadcast. Fortunately no personal injury was suffered.

The water pipes had been frozen, and the fire caused the confined steam in the water front to explode.

If the precaution had been taken to see if the water pipes had been sealed by frost, and kindling the fire had been delayed till the pipes were thawed out, the explosion would have been avoided.

The Lowest Since August

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec. 31.— Britain's casualties for December were the lowest reported in any month since August, according to compilations made of the month's lists. They showed a total of 80,034 officers and men announced as killed, wounded and missing during the last month of the year.

The figures for recent months have been:

July— 71,000 killed, wounded and missing, officers and men.
August—60,373
September—105,430.
October—83,558.
November—120,679.

The monthly lists do not necessarily mean killed and wounded and missing in that month alone. They cover all casualty lists issued during a period of the month. Some of these often refer to casualties several weeks past.

Big Red Blooded War Drama At The Royal

The programme at the Royal Theatre for to-night and New Year's afternoon and evening should not be missed by lovers of high class moving pictures. In addition to the every-day show, the management has secured at considerable expense the latest Vitagraph Blue Ribbon special, "The Girl Philippa," in which the people's favourite actress, Anita Stewart, is featured. This picture gives the story of a French cabaret girl who was forced to spy on all who frequented her little cafe. She held the fate of nations in her hands. "The Girl Philippa" smashed the world's box office record for tickets sold, and hundreds were turned away at each performance in New York. In order to relieve the rush at the Royal to-night and to-morrow, this picture, with an ordinary programme, will be shown, and the price of admission will be 25c.

The De Laval Coy's Calendar For 1918

Speaking of calendars for 1918, the De Laval Company's mammoth memory and office chronological reminder "takes the cake." It is over [illegible] feet long by about [illegible] inches wide — a reflex of the big things this big company accomplishes every twelve months every year.

In addition to the excellent monthly pad register, printed in bold, legible figures, a striking feature of the calendar is a bewitching snapshot of a lovers' tete-a-tete around a De Laval Cream Separator. It must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated, as it pumps the artist with a temperament and a genius that must class him among the best admirers of the genial manager of the separator department of the Peterborough office.

POLLING SUB-DIVISIONS WHERE ELECTORS MAY VOTE TO-MORROW

Between Five and Six Thousand Citizens Are Eligible to Vote--De Laval By-law Will Require a Two-third Majority--A Chance For Women Voters

Between five and six thousand voters will have an opportunity of electing candidates for the City Council, the Board of Education and incidentally voting on the De Laval by-law and the general vote by-law. One alderman is to be elected in each of the East, South and Centre Wards. The other two wards of the city permitted their representatives to be elected by acclamation. Every person who is on the voters' list is entitled to vote for their choice of the aldermanic candidates in the ward in which the voter resides.

Five members are to be elected for the Board of Education. All Public school supporters on the voters list are entitled to vote for school board candidates.

All persons whose names are on the voters' lists may vote for the De Laval and General Vote By-laws. Two-thirds of the total vote polled is required to carry the De Laval by-law, while a majority vote will be sufficient to ensure the adoption of the General Vote By-law.

Women Voters.

The following are the qualifications necessary for women voters:

(1) A woman voter must be a British subject, over twenty-one years of age, and have her name on the voters' list.

(2) A woman voter must be a ratepayer, that is, either own her own property, assessed for $400 or over.

(3) Any woman earning $400 a year and paying taxes thereon may vote.

The time for filing complaints concerning names left off the voters' lists is now over, and there is no chance of getting any name on the list which is not already there.

In a case where property is in the wife's name, and the husband is living, the wife has a vote as a property owner and the husband as a tenant. The tenant in this case cannot vote on by-laws where money is concerned.

PERCY NEILL IS KILLED

A Well Known Peterboro Boy Meets His Death in France.

Another well-known Peterborough boy has made the supreme sacrifice in France in the person of Gunner Percy Neill, of the 2nd Canadian Heavy Battery. His sister, Mrs. J. M. Gemmell, East City, received official word from Ottawa this morning that Gunner Neill had been killed in action on 12th December, after having been in France for over two years.

Gunner Neill enlisted early in the war in Winnipeg with an infantry regiment, and was transferred to the Canadian Heavy Artillery.

He was born in this city and lived here practically all his life until about four years ago, when he went West. At the time he joined the Colours he was employed in the Winnipeg branch of the Bank of Commerce. He was a member of the old Marlborough Club, and of St. Luke's Church, and was well known in sporting circles.

His host of friends in the city will be shocked to learn of his death.

Canada's Prosperity Reflected

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Dec. 31.— General prosperity from one end of Canada to the other, with a cheerful optimism for the future, is the epitome of the annual New Year's articles contributed to the Monetary Times by the premiers of all the provinces of the Dominion. Hon. W. H. Hearst, of Ontario, emphasized the more than ordinary activity of Ontario's three great branches of production, agriculture, mining and lumbering, and expressed the hope that in its prosperity this province will not forget the conditions prevailing elsewhere or fail fully to realize how solemn and binding is the obligation in the great struggle through which the world is pasing. The Monetary Times-Review says that the value of the production in Canada during the year ending to-day from field crops, forests and mines and fisheries was approximately $1,507,687,000 as compared with $1,275,734,812 in 1916. In 1908, the value of Canada's production was $703,590,000. For the first time on record in 1917 the value of Canada's field crops was over one billion dollars.

WAY RESTRICTIONS IN GERMANY

...in which railway travelling has been restricted by exigencies illustrating the suffering which recently appeared in the Frankfurter Zeitung.

"Hitherto the traffic of civilians on German railways has already been restricted to about 54 per cent. of the mileage of peace traffic. Owing to the extensive activity in the occupied zones, on September 1st there were 155,000 railway trucks in Belgium, Poland, Courland, Rumania and Serbia to the large increase in the armaments industry at home and to increase wear and tear, further restrictions have become necessary in order to make it possible to maintain the efficiency of the railways for military objects.

The number of railway trucks, which in July, 1914, was about 2,000,000, has been increased by about 1,000,000, and there are now 4,153 locomotives. But their requisitions are still greater. Transport of coal can no longer take place via the Baltic and forth Sea up the Rhine, but is carried on by the railways straight across Germany. While up to the war their average was 4.2. million potatoes were transported annually, 1916 1.5. million were forwarded. As against the previous in August this year 45,000 trucks, and in September 65,000 were used for carrying potatoes. How greatly the goods traffic has grown is shown by the fact that the increased takings in September are against the same month last year amounted to 10.71 per cent.

Since then any reduction of goods traffic is impossible, and since savings by improved regulations of traffic could no more be increased to any considerable extent, while the demand for such transport is continuously growing, the German railway administration find themselves compelled to introduce further restrictions on passenger traffic. All admonitions as to voluntary limitations of passenger traffic have hitherto remained fruitless. Last year an appeal was made before Christmas to the public to curtail travelling. The result was that fifty per cent. more railway tickets were sold than in the previous year. During the last few months, too, passenger traffic has continuously grown. The takings proves this, and the total receipts from passenger traffic have reached the same level as in the peace year—1913. With the idea of facilitating goods traffic and influenced by the desire to save coal, rolling stock and, above all, personnel, a considerable curtailment of fast and express trains is to be brought into force. A number of express trains are to be withdrawn altogether, while others are to be reduced in length. But as to the most important means of checking the traffic, an increase of fares by about 100 per cent. is to come into force. These supplementary charges are to hold good for all classes. They are to be merely a temporary measure, as are the curtailments of fast and express trains.

Since nearly 70 per cent. of the space in fast trains is occupied by soldiers, the military authorities has determined in view of the large autumn traffic to curtail furloughs. Before adopting the plan of increasing the fares, the railway administration discussed the introduction of travelling permits, but for practical reasons this method was found unfeasible. The Prussian railway administration alone issues some 1 1-2 million railway tickets a day. To examine all tickets issued,, with a view to establishing their necessity would have led to injustice, and would have necessitated the employment of a large staff.

Measures have been taken also with a view to obtaining a punctual service. For example, at individual stations, where passenger trains are continuously overcrowded the sale of tickets is to be limited to the number of persons which the train for which they are issued can hold. Luggage is to be reduced in quantity by introducing a maximum weight. One piece of luggage is not to weigh more than Kg. 50, while the whole luggage of any person may not exceed this weight. This measure is chiefly aimed at the checkmating the food hogs, and preventing the strength of women being overtaxed when unloading luggage. In future when connecting trains are late, trains will not wait for the luggage to be unloaded, to avoid becoming late themselves. Finally, the traffic is to be reduced on Sundays. The object of this measure is not only economy in coal, but the release of the staff. Negotiations are proceeding between the German railway administration as to whether it is possible to check Sunday travelling by charging extra fares, but in this case regard would be paid to those large towns whose inhabitants are unable to obtain fresh air on Sundays, except by travelling. Finally, heating in the trains is to be reduced to the extent that the degrees of heat in the compartments will be from ten to twelve C., instead of twelve to fifteen C., as obtaining hitherto, while trains running short journeys only will not be heated.

SAYS ALLIES MUST WEAR DOWN TEUTONS

...RES ANOTHER YEAR OF WAR.

Soldiers Realize this, he Says, but are Cheerful and Confident of Victory.

New York. — Captain Russell F. ...ray of the British army, who served with the Mesopotamia forces, including the first relief expedition to Kut-el-Amara in 1915, and was afterwards with the tank corps up till the recent Cambrai affair, arrived yesterday at the Hotel Knickerbocker on his way to Singapore. He has six months sick leave and is going to look after his tea plantations in the Malay Federated States.

"When I left France a month ago," Captain said, "the French and Britains were cheery and confident of beating the enemy, although they realized that at least one or more years of mud and blood have to be endured before victory can be won. They are determined to see it through, and thought they were a fine-looking lot of men.

"The great thing that has to be acquired by young soldiers is discipline, and after a time on active service they learn its value. It means not only a greater striking force against the enemy, but it saves the lives of both the officers and men. The value of discipline was demonstrated in the Mesopotamia campaign by the difference in the death rate in the regiments of well trained regulars compared with those newly organized at home and sent out.

"The work of breaking through the German lines of defense on the western front is a gigantic task, and the object of the allies now is to wear down the enemy's man power by killing as many Germans as possible. The artillery of the allies is now in a high state of efficiency, and the air service also is good and is steadily improving all the time.

"The German artillery is by no means lacking in efficiency and marksmanship. Their officers have luck, too, in getting the location of camps when they are changed by the allies, and drop shells in a most unpleasant manner, especially about meal time. The Germans got the range on the fourth day and banged away at a rate that made every one take a bright look out.

"The American engineers are doing great work with the Chinese coolies building new railroads in France, with four tracks direct to the chief centres, which will relieve the congestion in getting supplies from the coast ports when they are completed."

The captain said that the fighting would be kept up by the allies on the western front all through the winter, but he did not expect that the tanks would be able to do much on account of the deep mud until the spring. He said that he expected to be back at the front in time for the big drive.

Captain Gray was in General Maude's division in Mesopotamia, and spoke in high terms of the ability of the late British commander under the most difficult conditions.

"Nothing that has been printed about the hardships of that ill-fated expedition," he continued, "came up to the conditions the men had to contend with. After all the men had undergone it was heart-breaking to arrive within five miles of Kut, and see the place all on fire in every direction without being able to go any further. The water was thick with mud and unfit to drink, but it was impossible to keep some of the men from slaking their thirst, which resulted in their death by cholera.

"When I was down with fever the heat in my tent was 117 degrees, and there was nothing to eat with stodgy porridge. No medicines or medical comforts of any kind.

"The Turks behaved well and never fired at our men when the white flag was hoisted to bring in the wounded. For hundreds of men there was not a blade of grass and no chance to get cover from the scorching sun or the enemy's guns.

"The Arabs gave us a lot of trouble and killed the wounded every time they got a chance. They were especially bitter against the Sikhs, part of our Indian troops, who were Mohammedans, but have a different kind of religion to the Arabs.

"Flies gave us the most trouble in Mesopotamia where they are worse than in any part of the eastern countries. They settled so thickly on the face and arms of the men that it looked as if they were wearing armor.

Captain Gray is accompanied by his wife who has experienced twelve air raids in London and several in Dover, where she said the Germans frequently used to come and drop their bombs, which always fell in the poorer quarters of the town.

They both expressed their gratitude for the manner in which they were directed in the streets of New York. The captain, who is in uniform, said that whenever he and his wife would stop in the street and hesitate which road to take some polite stranger would come up and put them on the right track.

Nation's Alien Census To List Fingerprints In The United States

Every German in Country Must Register During Week of February 4 —Cards Needed to Save From Arrest—Police to Receive Data in Large Cities and Postmasters in Smaller Towns.

PHOTOGRAPHS REQUIRED

Washington, D. C., January 2. — Every German enemy alien in the United States must register during the week of February 4, according to an order, with regulations, issued by the Department of Justice.

After that week every one of the half million such enemy aliens in the country must have a registration card bearing his finger prints, his photograph, his signature, and full information concerning himself, otherwise he will be subject to arrest and internment for the duration of the war.

Austro-Hungarian enemy aliens, German women and German enemy aliens under 14 years will not be required to register. Under the existing law women are not considered as enemy aliens.

In all cities of 5,000 population and above the police authorities will be the registering officials. Postmasters in smaller places will be the registering officials, with the postmaster of the largest town in each judicial district throughout the country as the chief registrar for all the other postmasters in the district.

In large cities such as New York, the Police Commissioner will be the chief registrar and the enemy aliens must register at the police stations of the precincts in which they reside.

Attorney General Gregory had believed it advisable, until the last few days, to register the enemy aliens in the larger cities of the East first and then gradually extend the registration to other cities and later to the rural districts. But he found there was danger of the enemy aliens avoiding registration by moving from one places to another and therefore he decided to have the registration held throughout the country at the same time.

In registering the enemy aliens must make three copies of an affidavit before the registrar, giving full information about self. He must tell where in Germany and when he was born, how long he has been in the United States, all the places where he has lived since Jan. 1, 1914, all the occupations he has engaged in, what his occupation now is, whether married and names and ages of his children.

On each affidavit registrant must make his finger prints of each hand. No trouble is expected in the finger printing process in the cities, but in the smaller places postmasters are advised to borrow ink and a roller from the town printer and, after rolling the ink out flat on a piece of glass, have the registrant press his fingers on the ink covered glass, and then on the proper spaces on the affidavits and cards.

The registrant also must supply four photographs of himself "on thin paper with a light background," with his signature on each and in such a manner as not to obscure the features. One of these photographs will be attached to each of the affidavits and the fourth will be pasted to a registration card which the registrant must carry with him at all times and must show to any officer who demands to see it.

Of great importance in the regulations is the order that no enemy alien after registering, may move from one address to another without the approval of the police or postmaster. Policemen will be informed of the enemy aliens on their posts and will be expected to see that they do not move without permission from the registrar.

If a registrant does move without such permission he is subject to arrest and imprisonment for the duration of the war.

In announcing the regulations today the Department of Justice took care to avoid creating the impression that the government looks on each German with suspicion.

"Registrants are not to be treated as persons of evil disposition," said the instructions to registrars, "and the registration officers are urged to deal with them in a courteous and friendly manner."

Police, federal marshals and agents and postal authorities are expected to co-operate in the round-up during registration week and to investigate and check up each fact reported by the registrants. Certificate cards will be issued only after a complete verification is made.

One of the triplicate records is to be kept by the registration agents, one sent to the United States marshal and one sent to the Department of Justice at Washington.

Germans not at their place of residence during the week of February 4, may be registered in the district in which they happen to be.

Lively Contest For The North Monaghan Council Indicated By Monday's Nominations

The Monaghan electors take their municipal nominations and the general affairs of the township seriously. In fact to their credit it should be said that they invariably manifest a degree of public spirit the citizens of Peterborough might profitably emulate. Monday's nominations in May's school house were largely attended, and resulted in the following slate for next Monday's elections:

For Reeve—

Harold B. Rye, proposed by J. D. Manley and seconded by Walter Byers.

John McIntosh, proposed by Robt. Fowler and seconded by F. J. Starkes.

For Deputy-Reeve—

Joseph H. Bell, proposed by Herb. J. Forster and seconded by A. Patterson.

Robert A. Dobbin, proposed by Thos. Henry and seconded by W. Byers.

For Council—

R. A. Dobbin, proposed by M. H. Johnston and seconded by George Bidgood.

John Williams, proposed by K. M. Denoon, seconded by J. H. Forster.

Thos. Henry, proposed by Walter Byers, seconded by J. D. Manley.

Herb. J. Forster, proposed by J. H. Bell, seconded by A. Hogg.

Andrew Kent, proposed by J. D. Manley, seconded by John Rutherford.

Fred E. Wilson, proposed by T. M. Hunter, seconded by Robert Fowler.

The only change in these nominations reported to the township clerk, Mr. Bruce Johnston, yesterday, was Mr. Robert Dobbin's withdrawal of his candidature as councillor to qualify for the deputy-reeveship. The result is an election for every office in the Council, with two candidates for reeve, two for deputy-reeve, five for councillors, of whom three are to be chosen.

The cleavage between the rural element of the township and that section which fringes the city is again in evidence in this election. Fred Wilson lives at Springville, and Andrew Kent is a resident of Lansdowne street, the entire municipality separating them. Mr. Forster lives in the hinterland between the two sections. Mr. McIntosh and Mr. Dobbin are from the rural district. Mr. Bell's farm is fairly close to the city and Mr. Rye, John Williams and Thomas Henry are suburbanites.

It may be stated that the disrupting differences between the two groups of the township seem to have been dulled since the war began. Monaghan has really been busier helping to fight the Germans than to waste its efforts in carrying on a family squabble which has apparently been suspended until peace returns.

At any rate, this year's nominations were harmonious. All the candidates discussed the township's financial and other conditions, and separated about five o'clock to line up for the elections.

Reeve McKee Had Splendid Record On Smith Council

In the retirement of Reeve Fred McKee from municipal life, the township of Smith is deprived of the services of a faithful and a capable administrator. He had been a member of the township council for ten years, during the past three years of which he sounded out his experience by serving as Reeve. Mr. McKee enjoys the esteem of many friends in the county and city. He received the full confidence of the township council and of the ratepayers of Smith, and in the County Council, where he was regarded as one of the strong members, he shared the confidence and the respect of the entire Board.

Reeve McKee was looked upon as safe. His conclusions were never hasty, and his judgment was sound. In the county committees and chairmanships he assumed a full measure of responsibility down to the smallest details. In parting with the friends and the affairs of municipal life he has every reason to feel proud of his record, and in passing the reins to other hands he may look back with satisfaction upon the successful work he has accomplished. He has given Smith an efficient administration, and on the County Council has proved himself a worthy representative, one whose ability and personality were at all times in keeping with the township's position among the County's municipalities.

The Elections in Peterboro'

The School Board members elected were Dr. F. C. Neal, E. G. Patterson, J. M. Greene, G. O. Cameron and J. W. Worth.

The two by-laws carried by a substantial majority.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Labour Supply Department of the Ministry of Munitions announces that a comparison of women's output in this country on certain sizes of shells, fuses, and other munition work with the output of some of the best firms in the United States shows that not only did the women do as well, but sometimes best the trans-atlantic workers."

The statement adds, "The way in which British women, the majority of them unused to factory life, have adapted themselves to labour conditions and submitted to intensive training is being increasingly demonstrated as one of the outstanding features of the war."

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

MOTHER'S LOVE.

An exchange truthfully says that father spends his days down town at his regular work. He is usually where he can talk with some other people. When lunch time comes he eats at the club with some friends.

Sister doesn't work down town but she is away from her home enough to meet a lot of friends and to discuss events of different kinds. Evenings she may go out to her card club session.

Brother of course works hard. All young men, if we would believe them, work very hard. But his work is such as to keep his mind busy and it offers enough of change to drive dull care away.

But how about mother?

She usually works as hard as father, sister and brother combined. If she goes away from home during the afternoon or evening it is an exception. She rarely has time to play cards with her friends. When she is not doing housework she is knitting for the soldiers. Theatres would starve to death if they had to depend upon mothers for patrons. Clubs would cease to exist over night if mothers were the only ones to keep them up.

Why not give mother a chance to enjoy herself? Why not demand of her that she go to the theatre occasionally or that she attend some other entertainment? Of course mother will never ask to be taken out to a show. Mothers never do.

Give mother a real chance.

She deserves it.

And there will be the rarest kind of a smile on her wrinkled face when the rest of the family pays some real attention to her.

MANNERS AT HOME.

The presence of good manners is nowhere more needed or effective than in the household, and perhaps nowhere more rare. Whenever the familiarity exists there is a tendency to loosen the check upon selfish conduct which the presence of strangers involuntarily produces. Many persons who are kind and courteous in company, are rude and careless with those whom they love best. Emerson says: "Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices," and certainly nothing can more secure the harmony and peace of the family circle than the habit of making small sacrifices for one another. Children thus learn good manners in the best and most natural way, and habits thus acquired will never leave them. Courtesy and kindness will never lose their power or their charm while all spurious imitations of them are to be despised.

Christmas stimulates the most beautiful of all the graces that live in the hearts of man. To give, to give something that expresses your knowledge of another, your love of another, is a graceful and an inspiring thing to do. To give what expresses money alone, something purchased without affection, is to degrade the giver and to insult the spirit of Christmas. But no child's gift was ever presented in this spirit. They give because they love and because they wish to express their love in concrete form.

A WORD FOR THE BOY.

A boy at fifteen years of age, is, in our opinion, at the most important period of his life. He is at the forks of the road. What he needs more than anything else is sympathy and advice. It would be strange, indeed, if boys did not build castles in Spain at that age, and what they need is the practical suggestion of some one who is himself a success in life to guide them. Most people think that boys do not need either sympathy or advice. It is a great mistake. They need it as much as the girls. We have never known one of them to refuse to take advice if it were tendered at the right time, in the right place, in the right spirit. The mistake most people make in talking to boys is that they lecture them in season and out, persecute them with all sorts of foolish suggestions, and expect more from them than they would from a man. If we had any word of counsel to give it would be: "Don't lecture a boy. Don't nag him. Don't prosecute him if he has done wrong. Don't laugh at him if he has failed, perhaps in some over-ambitious boyish schemes. Don't crush him. Don't break his spirit. Give the boy a chance. Show him his mistake, and then show him what he should do. When you crush the boy's spirit you have ruined the boy

You Eat too Much Meat—We didn't need a war to teach us, that meat eating is largely a habit founded upon dietetic ignorance. The best substitute for meat or eggs is the whole wheat grain; in fact, it is a more complete food—a better balanced ration. Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains the entire wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat boiled in steam, drawn into porous, filmy shreds and baked crisp and brown. Two of these crisp little loaves of baked whole wheat with milk make a nourishing, satisfying meal. Made in Canada.

How few of us reveal the love we feel for our own. Our relations with those who are nearest and dearest are so intimate that it seems unnecessary to express in words the depth of our affection. But there is no man or woman who does not feel happier when the words "I love you," fall from the lips of the best beloved. The sharing of daily troubles and annoyances, butchers' bills, the state of the coal bin, the repairs on the barn, worries with turkeys, chickens, sewing and all the innumerable things that father and mother must discuss together, leave little time for the loving words that constitued the charm of courtship and the honeymoon. We must take so much for granted that it is well to have birthdays and Christmas set apart as days when we shall express in many delightful ways our love for our own.

Our gifts should be useful to those who are in need, beautiful without reference to utility to those whose wants are well supplied. They should be purchased with the thought of giving pleasure. To the hungry man nothing is pleasanter than food; to the girl with the shabby clothes nothing is more desired than a new gown. The scholar loves books; Blue Eyes longs for a baby doll; Tom wants a bicycle. We should offer to each something that is associated with his character, and so what is doubly acceptable as a proof of the thoughtfulness and the love of the giver.

AMERICAN PEOPLE TO THANK GENERAL ALLENBY.

Graification Over the Capture of Jerusalem Expressed in Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—A resolution expressing the gratification of the American people to General Allenby, commander of the British forces that captured Jerusalem, for wresting the Holy City from the Turks, was adopted at the meeting at the Belasco Theatre yesterday.

A copy of the resolution, which was prepared by Arthur E. Randle, chairman of the meeting, is to be sent to General Allenby.

The resolution is to be accompanied by the prayer with which Mgr. Thomas, rector of St. Patrick's Church, opened the meeting; by a copy of a letter received from Cardinal Gibbons by Mr. Randle, and read by Mgr. Thomas, and by copies of the addresses of Bishop Hardin, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, Rabbi Abram Simon, Senator James E. Watson, and Gifford Pinchot.

Buddhism.

Buddhism started with Gautama Buddha about 600 years before the Christian era, and it numbers among its adherents more than a third of the human race. Buddhism is confined mainly to Asia—Manchuria, Mongolia, Korea, Tibet, China, Japan and the large islands off the Asiatic coast. Though born in India, Buddhism is not strong in that country today, being driven out by the old Hinduism of which it is the offshoot.

"TAPPED" GERMAN MESSAGES.

How Eiffel Tower Did Its Bit in the War.

General Clergerie, who was chief of staff to General Gallieni at the battle of the Marne, has recalled some crucial events that turned the tide of the war, says a Paris correspondent of The London Telegraph. To begin with, the Eiffel Tower played a useful part, and those who never admired the 300-meter iron monument are now reconciled to it.

The German commanders, apparently under the delusion that the French were too stupid to know anything about wireless, used the latter constantly in communication among themselves. All these messages were tapped by the Eiffel Tower and when necessary, decoded, but half the time the Germans did not even take the trouble to use cypher. Thus among other interesting pieces of information General Clergerie learned that General von Maewitz, commanding the cavalry in von Kluck's army, informed von Kluck that his men and horses were spent and could not ... asleep with exhaustion on their saddles, and that nearly all the horses wanted reshoeing.

Another useful message tapped by the Eiffel Tower was one, September 8, from von Kluck himself, saying that he was retiring with his first army, and in fact telling the other army commanders bluntly, "You must hurry up; I am clearing out."

General Clergerie also gives the first authentic account of the historic taxicab day of September 7. A new division arrived that day to join the Paris army, but how to get it out to the front, nearly forty miles away in time? Railway transport, it was found, could carry only 6,000 men. How are the remaining 6,000 to be got out?

Clergerie had an inspiration, and decided to risk using taxicabs. Gallieni approved. Clergerie had 100 taxis permanently at his disposal, but wanted 600. Each taxi could carry five men, and thus in two journeys 600 could bring 6,000 men to the front. They must be ready by 6 o'clock. A requisition order was sent out at 1 o'clock. The news spread like wildfire in the taxicab depots, and, as Clergerie says, it was a curious sight to see many chauffeurs driving fares in the Paris streets suddenly stop on hearing the order, turn the fare out and start off at once "to go into battle," and by 6 o'clock the 600 taxis stood ready at Gagny, just outside Paris. They were inspected by Gallieni.

Two routes, going and coming for the double journey, were mapped out, relief cars with tires and petrol drove at intervals in the procession, and stores were also placed at points along the road. The taxis, each carrying five men, started 20 yards behind one another, and in two journeys the 600 taxis had brought 6,000 men by daybreak, ready to go into the battle of the Ourcq, and win it, which they did.

Germans to Seize Brass.

All pleas of German landlords and sighs of German housewives notwithstanding, the War Ministry in Berlin declares that the requisitioning of brass and bronze door and window handles and fittings in dwelling houses and other buildings is inevitable. The measure will be carried out in three to four months' time.

The Association of Berlin Houseowners' Societies had sent a deputation to wait on the chief of the particular section of the War Office concerned, but all in vain. In place of the brightly shining brass and bronze articles in which she takes so much pride the German housewife will have to content herself as best she can with black "ersatz" (substitute) door and window handles and fittings.

At least the State proposes to supply such uniform substitutes, and even to see to the affixing of same directly after the removal of the original articles. If this be not to the taste of those concerned they must bear the expense of replacement themselves.

Under still another official decree expected very shortly all brass and bronze ornaments, grates, fenders, etc., are to be seized for the metal-devouring war, while the provisional exemption of requisitioned copper, brass, and nickel objects, particularly domestic articles, has been already withdrawn.

Cleaning a Water Bottle

To clean the inside of a water bottle or any glass that is too small to insert the hand into put into the bottle a small quantity of tea leaves, pour in about one-third of a teacupful of vinegar, shake well, empty and rinse with cold water. A perfectly clear glass will result.

Must Be Paid.

"Dad, I want to be a musician."

"Then I'd be either a piper or a fiddler."

"Why?"

"When there is any paying to be done I notice they are always preferred creditors."

The Home Table

PARSNIPS and turnips will soon be with us in full force. Every housewife realizes their nutritive value, but not every one knows how really palatable these "heavy" vegetables may be made. Try these recipes.

Parsnip Stew.

Allow for one pound of fresh parsnips one pound of fat salt pork and one pound of potatoes; chop the pork fine, pare the potatoes and slice thin; scrape the parsnips and cut in thin slices; put a layer of pork in a stewpan, follow with a layer of potatoes, then one of parsnips.

Repeat with pork, potatoes and parsnips until all have been used. Cover with cold water, season with salt, pepper and celery salt, thicken with a little cracker rolled fine, and set on the back of the stove, where it can cook gently for three-quarters of an hour. Serve from a large tureen or bowl or from the kettle in which cooked.

Turnips au Gratin.

Peel and cut into cubes. Cover with cold water, cook five minutes, then drain and cover with boiling salted water or white stock and simmer gently until tender. Make a cup of good white sauce, using a tablespoonful each of butter and flour. Melt the butter, add the flour; as soon as blended, without browning, add a tablespoonful of grated cheese.

When it has melted pour in a cupful of milk, stirring until smooth and creamy. Season with salt and pepper and pour over turnips. Put into a well buttered gratin dish and, if too dry, add a little milk. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown in a quick oven.

Cauliflower in Batter.

Wash and cleanse the cauliflower and half boil it in salted water. Drain, divide the branches and dishe in a quarter of a pint of vinegar seasoned with salt and pepper. Then fry in a batter. To make the batter, beat up one egg and sift in one cupful of flour; add half a cupful of milk, a pinch of salt and a tablespoonful of olive oil.

Mix smooth and stand the mixture in a cool place for one hour. Dip the branches of cauliflower separately, deep into smoking hot fat and fry to a golden brown. Drain, serve hot, garnished with parsley.

Surprise Potatoes.

Take mashed potatoes, add salt, pepper, one teaspoonful onion juice, one tablespoonful chopped parsley and milk enough to make smooth. Take a spoonful of potatoes, flatten out, lay a teaspoonful of cold chopped meat, well seasoned, in centre, then shape potatoes around meat, making a roll about three inches long, being sure the meat is well covered.

Roll in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs again. Fry in deep, hot fat. A small frankfurter or sausage, boiled till tender, then browned, is fine to use for the filling.

Rice Waffles.

Heat one cupful of milk; add one tablespoonful and a half of butter substitute and the beaten yolk of one egg; then add one cupful and a half of flour and beat well.

Now add the beaten white of the egg, half a cupful of cooked rice and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat the batter for two minutes and cook on a hot, well greased waffle iron. When the waffles are done serve them hot with maple syrup, honey, powdered sugar or jelly.

Talks With Mothers

MANY mothers make the mistake of training much that is best out of their children, and, albeit with the best intentions in the world, this is a mistake that cannot be corrected in after life.

Most of us have certain standards of our own which we come at last to feel cannot be changed in any way, and either we are too apt to curb much that should be allowed to develop, or we are prone to be too lenient in our demands.

If we could only reach a middle ground, where we are neither too strict or too indulgent, it would be best for both mother and children, but as we are all of us human we usually err on one side or the other.

The mother who usually accomplishes the best results is she who makes a companion of her children. If she does this, and is the right kind of mother, she will find that they may stray away, but that they are very sure to come back to the fold.

So many mothers fail to remember their own childhood and expect so much more of their children than they have any right to do.

When you were a child going to school did you not find many problems that no one could solve but your mother or your father? In later life, did you not often feel that you must have their sympathy in your small affairs? Or, if you did not receive this sympathy and help, did you not feel that, in some way, you were defrauded?

Every child has the right to the companionship of his parents, as well as to their guidance. Most parents seem to think that their duties are only disciplinary, when, on the contrary, they do not pay half of their obligations to their children unless they are their playmates as well as their mentors.

One of the most successful women of the day has always been a companion to her three sons. In spite of the fact that not only did the usual duties of the mother fall to her lot, but that a large part of each day was given over to the grind of earning money devoted to their comfort and education.

She never let a day pass that she did not play as well as work with them. There were certain hours given to earning their bread and butter, and after that she devoted herself wholly to their other needs.

Children, even more than grown people, need sympathy. The world to them is a strange place, and many things that we of an older growth know not only to be harmless, but beneficial, are to them objects of terror and fear.

No child should ever go to his father or mother with a problem and be thrust aside. If you cannot help him in any material way, you can at least give to him the comfort of understanding.

And it should be remembered that if your children are to develop in any natural way they are going to have wills of their own, which you may find it hard to control.

The best way to control children is to teach them to control themselves. The child who is put on his honor must develop honor.

The boy or girl who is given to understand that he is trusted will seldom betray that trust.

If you do not play with your "kiddies" you will miss some of the happiest moments that life has to give you. Play time is the training time of the young, so the hours that you spend with them on the tennis court or on the ball ground, in the woods or on the water, over the library table in the evening, or before the fire engrossed in some indoor game—these are not wasted hours, but perhaps the most valuable that your children may ever know.

Besides the value to your children you will find that the hours spent with them are broadening to yourself in many ways. Grown persons as well as children need their play time, when the cares of the day are put aside and the mind is allowed to relax, or else concentrates itself in some entirely new and interesting problem.

At first you may find that you do not like the games your boys and girls like, but as you throw yourself into their interests you will find that your own interest will develop.

One woman spends the summers with her sons camping in the woods. At first she did not like these jauntings at all. She was somewhat frail and nervous of temperament, and at night she used to lie awake and imagine all kinds of terrors. But at the end of her first camping season she found that her appetite was as keen as a child's, that she no longer tired so easily and that she slept nine hours each night without turning over.

Now she says she would not miss these summers in the woods any more than her sons would, and not only have they drawn her into closer companionship with her children, but they have made her a strong and healthy mother instead of one who was anaemic and nervous and more or less of an invalid.

When You Appear in Public

DID you ever go into a tea room where everything was very restful and pleasing and suddenly become conscious of a loud voice which seemed to jar on the delightful surroundings as rudely as if some one had thrown a hard missile into the room?

Or have you ever gone into such a public place and disturbed the others present by your own uncouth manners? For it is certainly most uncouth to go into any public place and make yourself conspicuous by being noisy or calling special attention to yourself in any way.

Public Manners.

On the whole, it is really remarkable what good manners prevail in most public places in our cities. For the most part those who frequent the tea rooms, cafeterias and restaurants of the city are quiet and inconspicuous in manner—so much so that those who are loud in manner attract an undue amount of attention.

In a restaurant which is very popular with girls because the prices are reasonable and the service excellent a girl and her older woman attracted a great deal of attention the other day, and, if they had only known it, were commented upon by many present for their lack of good manners.

The girl sat across the table from her mother, and the entire twenty minutes or more which was spent at lunch were punctuated by a running fire of conversation carried on at the top of her voice.

It seemed as if her mother must have been deaf, to be able to endure a voice so highly pitched, but she evidently was not, and even if she had been it was hardly necessary to carry on a personal conversation in a public place in such a way as to make herself a perfect nuisance.

Before they had left the restaurant every one in hearing distance knew that the girl very much disliked a woman with whom she was associated in her work; that she considered a cheque she had recently received entirely too small for the work she had done and that she had been offered work far more remunerative, which she expected to take.

As she rattled on about her importance to the firm by whom she was employed, the meagre salary they paid her, the large responsibilities which were hers and the fine salary she was to get with the new job, one could but feel that she had much to learn in the business world before she would be fitted for any position of importance.

No one in the restaurant was in the least interested in her affairs. But they were forced to hear about them, for she talked of them so continuously and so loudly that there was nothing to do but listen.

As a usual thing, when one goes out to luncheon it is as much for the change from the routine of the office as it is for the food which is conferred.

Often one has a friend with whom one may like to [illegible] over things of mutual interest, or a [illegible] may be some problem must be thought [illegible], better still, the mind given a [illegible] am while.

No one [illegible] to hear about the affairs of a [illegible] acquaint[illegible] is whom they have not the slightest concern. Men have an expression which, if vulgar, is rather to the point: "If you want to talk about yourself, go hire a hall." Like many expressions of the street, it has a basis in good, common sense.

In all probability the mother of the girl who insisted on forcing her affairs on the attention of those around her was very much interested. But she must have been very much embarrassed at the method her daughter took to give her the information.

You may be very sure that your real friends and your family, if they are worth while, are interested in all your small successes or your difficulties, if they are real. But outside of those who are closest there is little interest in what you are doing unless you are a celebrity.

Your Own Affairs.

And if you have done something that is really of interest to the public you do not need to go into a restaurant to tell about it, for the papers and magazines will exploit it. That is their business.

Be very sure that if you do anything that has a wide public appeal it will get to the public. News purveyors are constantly on the lookout for celebrities, and the difficulty that a person of real importance has is to keep the public out of his affairs.

Don't make the mistake of advertising your ignorance of accepted standards of the day by going into a public place and talking about yourself or your affairs, or those of your friends in such a way as to attract the attention of others who are in no way interested in you.

Women Who Worked for Liberty Loan

No 1—Mrs. James F. Curtis. No. 2—Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman.

WOMEN prominent in philanthropic, social, political, professional and artistic circles have done their bit, and have done it well, for the Liberty Loan. The committee, of which Mrs. John T. Pratt is chairman, was one of the best organized bodies women have formed together for the furtherance of any cause. Nearly all are practical workers, and their team work has caused the men's committee to realize that a good deal of the success of floating both the first and second bond issues has depended not a little on the activities of the members of the Woman's Committee of the Liberty Loan. With the idea of having the committee representative of not one class or opinion, but of woman's citizenship, Mrs. Pratt has had interested in the work women of widely different activities. The following list of some of the most prominent and active workers shows the tremendous field the group covered. Mrs. James F. Curtis was an ardent worker in behalf of the Liberty Loan. Her husband, who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, is now the secretary of the Second Federal Reserve Bank. Mrs. Henry P. Davison, wife of the head of the Red Cross, is assisting her husband in that special branch of war work. Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim is the wife of the "copper king" and was one of the most active members of the last Liberty Loan Committee. She raised several hundred thousand dollars last spring at a Liberty Loan meeting held at her home, in Great Neck, L. I., and obtained signatures for bonds amounting to $107,000 for the second Liberty Loan. Mrs. Guggenheim is on the board of many Jewish as well as non-sectarian philanthropies. Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman is the president of the National Organization of Catholic Women. She was appointed by Cardinal Farley as president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the National Catholic War Council. She is a woman of unusual executive ability and capacity for finance. She raised half a millions dollars in the first Liberty Loan campaign.

SOLDIERS' COMFORT BAG

Comfort bags for soldiers are being made by women engaged in war relief work. This is the time to make them in order that they may be ready when needed.

For a comfort bag it is well to use khaki cloth to correspond with the uniform. The most important thing is the equipment. Soldiers do not want a lot of useless articles to remember you by, but there are a number of things they do need.

For instance, if you wish to have your soldier write to you, place a pocket in the bag filled with stamped envelopes, not loose stamps, as they stick together and are easily lost. Writing paper could be in the form of a pad, or sheets could be slipped in each envelope, so as to be ready for use when needed.

Of course soldiers need sewing kits, which can be purchased in a 5 and 10-cent store for 10 cents each. The sewing kit may be a folder containing a thimble, needles, many black and white safety pins, buttons and other things of the kind. These folders can be made at home.

Safety matches, tooth brushes, washcloths, medicated cotton, bandages to be used for small scratches, darning cotton, darning needles, stomach bands, knitted of gray wool, post cards and lead pencils are good things for the comfort bag.

Naturally individual needs and tastes will be consulted.

The bag may be 13 by 16 inches. The initials of the owner, his State and the number of his regiment may be outlined on the outside.

PANTRY POINTERS.

Save the round pasteboard boxes, such as cornmeal and rolled oats come in. The smaller ones are fine to keep sugar in. In getting a ten pound bag, empty at once and there will be less waste than if used from the bag, besides being much neater in the pantry. Also, it is easy to determine how much sugar is being used.

The larger ones may hold potatoes and other small vegetables. One may be kept for twine. They do not take up much room on the floor and are neater than bags.

A SHOE SHINE.

Rub your brown shoes with castor oil. Use it as you would a shoe polish and shine with an old stocking or soft cloth. The stocking is best if it will remove spots and make them spot proof as well as [illegible] leather and giving a [illegible] Lilry.

THE USES OF TURPENTINE

Turpentine and soapsuds will remove ink stains from muslin.

A few drops added tto the water in which clothes are boiled will whiten them.

It will exterminate cockroaches if sprinkled in their haunts.

Moths will leave if it is sprinkled about, as they dislike it.

A few drops of turpentine on a woollen cloth will clean tar shoes very nicely.

Clean gilt frames with a sponge moistened with turpentine.

When blackening the stove add a few drops of turpentine.

Pitch, wheel grease and tar stains can be quickly removed if the spot is first covered with lard and then soaked with turpentine. Scrape off all the loose dirt, sponge clean with turpentine and rub gently till dry.

Varnish and paint stains in coarse linen can be removed by first saturating with turpentine and then washing.

Ivory knife handles that have become yellow can be restored to their former whiteness by rubbing with turpentine.

Carpets can be cleaned and the colors restored by going over occasionally with a broom dipped into warm water to which has been added a little turpentine.

An equal mixture of turpentine and [illegible] will remove white marks on furniture caused by water.

Don't Lose Faith in Your Friends

PEOPLE who have lost all faith in humankind only feel that they are justified in taking such a stand. These people will argue that there is nothing like sincerity in humankind, but to judge all by the indifferent attitude of a few is neither fair nor reasonable.

One's tried and trusted friends do indeed often prove faithless. They go their way caring nothing about the trials or difficulties that may come to us, but granting all this we should not become embittered—should not steel our hearts against others around us.

FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT.

The woman who loses faith in her relatives or friends even though she may feel she has good grounds for so doing, can hardly be expected to see any redeeming feature in the persons whom she meets in a social or business way. Such a woman may declare her attitude is justified, but the person who becomes wary of people in general—who is as it were, suspicious of them—makes a grave mistake always.

There is a wise middle course that the over-sensitive or over-impulsive woman should follow. We all know that familiarity breeds contempt. On the other hand if we "love many, trust few and always paddle our own canoe," as an old adage advises, we shall, without doubt, continue in the good graces of all around us.

But if we wear our hearts upon our sleeves, tell them the ins and outs of our hopes or disappointments, thus intruding upon their good nature and their time, we will soon have the fact brought home to us that these tried and trusted friends are not what we fondly believed them to be.

Girls and women who hope to retain the esteem and respect of their relatives or friends must learn to keep at a "safe distance" from those persons. One can be agreeable without overdoing it, and if we have any common sense at all we should not harass these good souls with our woes, real or other.

No matter how close friendship's ties may be, it is a mistake to become overconfiding or over-believing. Humanity in general is busied with its own affairs, and even though we feel we should receive attention or consideration from this relative or that friend, if we hope to give ourselves a worthwhile reason we will not look for any such concession.

Keeping at a "safe distance" from persons in general is a pretty sure sign that we shall get along all right with them. The tactful woman knows this, and as a result she does not lose faith in humanity.

The too familiar girl or woman quickly wears out her welcome. As a rule she receives scant ceremony from even her closest friends. Then she goes her way misunderstanding people in general, and declaring all the world fetters and insincere.

LEARN TO GIVE AND TAKE.

Very often one's efforts and good intentions are not appreciated, but even so we should not lose faith in those around us. The human heart craves company, and a few good friends are golden treasures, especially to the woman alone, or getting along in years, but she must respect their rights and privileges. She should not make herself obtrusive or over-familiar, for even those nearest and dearest to us soon demonstrate the irritation they feel if we infringe upon their interests or good nature.

Keep at a safe distance the woman who does not see lots of redeeming features in others. Over-familiar persons bore their closest friends, and those tactless people are the very ones who declare that all humankind is heartless.

Keep Out of a 'Rut' When You Work

ARE you one of the persons who cannot work in a crowd? If you are, you are a most unfortunate person, for it is a fact that in this world we must learn to work where we may happen to be. It is seldom that we find it possible to work in seclusion, shut away from the noise and rush of business.

Most large business concerns are beehives of activity. Unless one can find it possible to concentrate on the work in hand, even in the midst of confusion, it is plain to see that much time will be lost and much energy wasted in this rushing world, where each one faces many duties in many lines of activity.

POWER OF CONCENTRATION.

Edna Ferber, one of the most successful writers of the day, wrote her first successful novel, "The Man Who Came Back," while her family was in the throes of house moving. Louisa M. Alcott, one of the most beloved of American authors, wrote many of her books for girls at the bedside of her invalid mother.

Most of the successful women of both America and England have had many other duties added to those of breadwinning.

Now that woman has had to enter the business world and to give her every effort to various avenues of commerce, unless she has the power of concentration on what-ever work is before her she will find herself sadly at a loss.

All business is carried on along certain well defined lines, just as every household is conducted according to certain rules and regulations. But there comes a time in every business when the usual order is disturbed, and unless each part of the concern is adjusted in such a way as to cope with the other part it is true that things will be always in a state of more or less confusion.

Most women do their work either in a haphazard way, which is destructive of any kind of settled routine, or else they get into such a rut that it is impossible to pull them out to face any emergency which may arise. Everything goes very well as long as the usual procedure is not disturbed, but let the least thing unexpected happen and at once the whole world seems to be turned upside down.

Now that women are entering the avenues of business which were once entirely given over to men, it behooves them to acquire poise and to learn to concentrate upon whatever is in hand if they are to make any very real success.

There is no reason in the world why one should not be able to do the daily task set before one in the company of other people if the other personalities are not allowed to obtrude themselves upon one's attention. But, on the other hand, it is the easiest thing in the world to fritter away one's time with those around one, if you will allow it. A moment here and a moment there and the next thing one knows the work of the day is way behind and the work of the morrow piles on to that of to-day.

Men have a way of concentrating on the work before them which to a woman of inexperience is quite wonderful. When they play they play, and when they work they work. That is their secret.

It is very seldom you see two men together during business hours that they are not transacting business in one way or another.

They may be talking over their lunch, or smoking together, or walking downtown together, but if it is in business hours you may feel very sure that when they are engaged in conversation it has to do with some work they have in hand.

But maybe in the afternoon on the golf links or in the evening at the theatre they will apparently have forgotten that there is such a thing as business and will be all the better for thus forgetting.

It may seem to you that it is hardly fair to compare you in any way with the man or woman of large affairs even though you have just started out in business. But this is not true. Every one is a machine is of vast importance, else it would not be given a place in the machinery.

Never forget, if you are a part of the business world, that it makes no difference what your duties may be, they are of the utmost importance. But do not make the mistake of thinking that you yourself are of any great importance taken separately from the organization you represent.

FATAL SELF-INTEREST.

That is one mistake that so many women just entering the business world make—they forget their work in their interest in themselves.

The fact of the matter is that in the business world you are of no importance whatever except in connection with the work that it is your duty to accomplish each day. There is only one way you can do this work properly, and that is by concentrating upon it every minute of your working time.

Banish the Unessentials

ONE of the restful things about visiting is that one takes with one only the things that one needs in the way of clothes and personal appointments. At home our own room is generally filled with things that we do not need at the moment.

"We open our bureau drawers and are confronted by a mass of things from which we have to select those we want. It is the same way with the home closet. Most of us live at home surrounded by the unessential for present use. Our rooms are us. This should not be so," said the woman who likes to find ways to make living easier.

"Personal rooms should be restful places. They can be made so by banishing from them all superfluous articles in ornament, furnishings and apparel.

"Bureau drawers and closets should hold only clothes that will surely be worn in the present season. Bits of ribbon and [illegible] the collar that doesn't go with [illegible] thing we use at the moment, worthless [illegible] clothes, should be exiled into boxes or trunks far from our living room. Not a single article of wardrobe should be permitted to stay there that is not in present use.

Comfort of Uncluttered Rooms.

"I can think of few things that work for greater restfulness and comfort than strict adherence to this rule. It is not an easy rule to follow. Bureaus and closets seem to have an inborn zeal all their own for accumulation of the unnecessary.

"Once every week I have a cleaning-out hour in my room, for with all my resolves never to let my room get littered I find a fixed time for regulating the matter imperative. They will get filled in spite of all I can do.

"I have made a rule to keep nothing that I may use in evidence in bureau or closet—unless [illegible] I know I shall use. What I may use I lay away under cover, if possible, out of my room. It is easy to get [illegible] needed.

So on, than to worry myself with the care and the clutter of them through the weeks, perhaps the months, that I shall not use them. Then, too, they do not have the needless wear that they are subject to hanging or lying about in my bureau and closet.

"A bedroom should be a most restful place. It cannot be this if it gives the impression of being choked with things. A bureau top should not be a catch-all. Its effect is spoiled by many cluttering objects. It is advised to have a toilet set and a few pretty ornaments, nothing more.

"When one's eyes open in the morning they should meet calm, refreshing surfaces—no clutter.

"The fact that most bedrooms are half sitting rooms makes it difficult to guard a restful simplicity of atmosphere in them. But it can be done by a little well directed energy, and is put in practice to one's own room the calming quality of a friend's guest room gives to one's

REGULAR HABITS.

They Go a Long Way Toward Building Up Good Health.

Regular habits for retiring must be considered as one of the best methods for securing good sleep.

The human body has a wonderful periodicity in all its spontaneous actions, and by studying these much of the machinery of health may be made to work smoothly.

Witness one habit of waking at a certain hour to which we have been accustomed.

Regularity in eating is most important for health. The digestive tract will respond at regular times just as other habits will repeat themselves.

Proper food properly digested will do much for one's health and happiness.

It is a mistake to eat too much.

We should try and enjoy our meals by paying attention to the taste of food. Do not gulp it down. It should be masticated and tasted so as to stimulate those nerves which reflect their sense on the other nerves controlling the glands of digestion.

When you feel indigestion after eating a meal note the ingredients eaten and should it repeat itself try to convict the guilty food and dismiss it from your dietary.

Don't make eating a task, but make it a pleasure, so that the food will digest and be assimilated and applied to the different necessities of the activities of life.

Youth demands a greater variety and quantity of food than does old age and especially does it require more protein and meat.

Learning what foodstuffs best suit is one of the great educational tasks man has before him, for he no longer has the intuition of the lower animals. The latter seem to inherit a sense that directs them what is best for their body wants. The vast majority of animals can differentiate between poisonous and nonpoisonous foodstuffs.—Commissioner of Health Dr. Samuel G. Dixon of Pennsylvania.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Amateur Detective

He Found No Clew, but Had Good Luck.

By AMBROSE HALL

Being directed by the chief of the detective bureau with which I was connected to report to Oliver Ainsworth to investigate a case for him, I did so, and this was Mr. Ainsworth's statement:

"I live in a suburban town. My family consists of my wife, my son, Albert, twenty-two years old, and my daughter, Edith, aged twenty. Other persons come in from time to time, remaining temporarily. There are also the servants, consisting of a cook, housemaid and butler.

"For some time past we have been missing small articles, principally jewels. Only yesterday a brooch set with diamonds and worth $100 disappeared. I suppose in all $1,500 worth of property has been taken. I wish you to come into my house for a long enough stay to discover the thief. Your chief has recommended you as a person who would not be likely to be taken for a detective, you having been well brought up. He has told me also that you are very musical and play on several instruments. My daughter wishes to learn to play on the mandolin, and you can give her lessons. I shall introduce you as the son of an old and very dear friend of mine, giving out that you have met with bad luck and that I have taken you in for awhile until you can get on your feet again."

There was truth in the latter part of this statement. I had recently come from England to seek my fortune in America like others of my countrymen who are ready to do abroad what they would be too proud to do at home. I tried music, for which I have a considerable taste, but after starving awhile in that field fell in with a detective, who secured me a position in the bureau with which he was connected. I think my chief recommendation was that, being a gentleman, I could play parts that would be impossible for an unpolished man.

This assignment with Mr. Ainsworth was my first in my new business, and I knew nothing about how to trap a thief. Persons who are ignorant of an important work they are expected to do are prone to look very wise and appear to be thinking very hard. I put on the semblance of the wisdom of Solomon, and when Mr. Ainsworth was about to tell me of any suspicions that were entertained I stopped him, saying that I always worked by method, pursuing my investigations step by step, and wished to avoid any preconceived notions that might lead me astray. This inspired the gentleman with great faith in me. I must trust to luck or my wits to bear out his confidence.

The story of my supposed impoverishment, which, as I have said, was in the main true, brought a very sympathetic reception from Miss Edith Ainsworth, and the fact that I was to teach her music foreshadowed that I would pass a season in clover. Under the influence of her beautiful eyes I felt that I could be a thief hunter for the rest of my days. I commenced the music lessons at once and was supposed to enter upon my investigations at the same time. Alas, I knew not where to begin! That part of my work which consisted in leading the family to think that I was the unfortunate son of a dear friend of its head I performed with great ease since it was natural to me. I was first cousin to an earl, and my father, having been born to the courtesy title of honorable, had never done a stroke of work in his life except garrison work, for he had been colonel of a regiment in the British army.

I spent a fortnight as a member of Mr. Ainsworth's family, and since I had not secured the slightest clew to the thief I felt it necessary to put on all the appearance of pursuing a deep laid plan of which I was capable. Mr. Ainsworth refrained from questioning me, which was lucky. Indeed, so engrossed was I with my lovely pupil that had a dozen clews been under my nose I would not have detected one of them. I wondered that he did not notice how matters were going between me and Edith, but if there is one thing I observed in my career of detective it is the stupidity of parents in failing to notice the incipient love affairs of their children.

After spending nearly three weeks pretending to be following a deep laid plan of investigation I began to be not only conscience stricken, but fearful that the humbug I was practicing would be discovered. To add to my worry I began to realize that the farce could not last forever and I must soon be separated from Edith. My cup of misery was filling up rapidly when luck came to me. I hit upon a clew.

Lying awake at night when all was still, I heard the distant sound of a chime. I wondered that I had never heard it before, but it was so faint that I would be likely to detect it only under the most favorable circumstances. There were two strokes, followed at an interval by three more. Then all was still again. Presently I heard it again. This time it was three strokes. While the chime was striking I lifted my head from the pillow to hear better and was surprised that I could not hear it at all.

Since the sound seemed periodical I listened for it again, and in a quarter of an hour it was repeated, three strokes followed by one. Struck by a thought, I reached out to a table beside me, lighted a match and looked at my watch. It was a quarter past 3. The sound I had heard was not a distant chime, but one very near, and it was in a watch. When the next time for it to strike came around I was lying on my back and did not hear it, but when it struck 3:45 my ear was on my pillow, and I heard every stroke.

"That," I said, "is a watch that may be made to strike the hour. It is in this house and possibly in this room."

In order to make it appear that I was investigating I had requested such change of rooms as was convenient. I had slept in this room two nights before I heard the chime, but each night there had been a strong wind. Besides, I had proved that unless my ear was connected with the watch by solids the chime was inaudible. Believing the watch to be in the room with me, a few minutes before it should strike again I got up and, pressing my ear against the wall, heard it distinctly. During the next hour I made several such experiments with a view to locating the sound, but without success.

Then it occurred to me that a watch must tick and if I could get near enough to it I might hear it. I walked slowly around the room, stopping at intervals to listen, and, drawing near a fireplace, the ticking grew more distinct. Thrusting my head up the chimney, I heard a watch tick near my ear. I was about to reach up to grasp it when a chime rang out fine, clear, melodious strokes.

I put my hand upon a narrow coping and took down what I could feel to be a brooch. Then I grasped other articles and finally a watch.

"Eureka!" I exclaimed, delighted.

Leaving the articles where I found them, I went back to bed, but not to sleep. Day soon came, and, rising, I examined the fireplace and found quite a lot of jewelry. I compared the pieces with a list of the lost articles and found that about two-thirds of them were on the coping.

What should be my next step? I had found the plunder—or most of it—but not the thief. And in this second part of my work I was as much at a loss how to proceed as I had been in the first place. But I felt comparatively easy. I had evidence that I was not another kind of thief in palming myself off as an investigator when I was really simply falling in love. I called Mr. Ainsworth into the library after breakfast and told him that I had made important headway in the case, having located a number of the missing articles. I intended to say no more; but, fearing that if left where they were the thief would remove them, I added that during the morning I would turn them over.

That morning when the postman delivered the mail I received a letter from England that obviated the necessity of my remaining in the detective business. The missive had been following me for some time and was covered with "Try this and try that place," indorsed by different postal officials. It announced that the cousin mentioned earlier in my narrative, a vigorous man of thirty, had broken his neck following the hounds, and since his wife had not presented him with an heir I was Earl of Barrowfield.

I called up my chief, reported the case so far as I had followed it and offered my resignation from his force on the ground that I had business of my own that demanded attention. Before Mr. Ainsworth went out for the day I told him where he would find the plunder I had discovered and made a clean breast of the fact that I had learned where it was, not by a deep laid and methodical process, but by accident and declined to receive any pay for my services or to permit any charge to be made by the bureau I represented.

Mr. Ainsworth declined to accept my services either as a detective or as his daughter's music teacher. After arguing with him for awhile I showed him the letter I had received that morning changing my condition from a detective to a nobleman.

"While I am not the son of an old friend of yours," I said, "I am or at least have been in forlorn circumstances. I am your debtor, not you mine, since I have received every kindness at the hands of your family."

It was agreed between us that it would be better to inform the members of his family that I was not the son of his old friend, but that in considering me a gentleman they had not been deceived. Mrs. Ainsworth was informed first that the bulk of her lost property had been recovered; that I had come to the house as a detective and was going out a nobleman. From her the news spread to the other members of the family.

Miss Edith did not seem to know whether to be glad or sorry at the turn events had taken. I saw sincerity in her eyes when she expressed her regret that her music lessons must cease and said that she supposed the episode of my being there must end and she would never see me again. I assured her that an acquaintance so pleasantly formed would not be suffered by me to come to an end.

I went to Europe and discovered that the estate to which I had fallen heir needed attention. Nevertheless I found my thoughts constantly wandering back to America. And what drew them most forcibly was the young lady whom I had taught music while playing detective.

I never took sufficient interest to inquire whether the balance of the jewelry was discovered or the thief run down. Later I returned from England and took back Edith Ainsworth for my wife. As a wedding memento her father presented me with the striking watch that led to the recovery of the plunder, and I had engraved upon it an appropriate inscription.

A Fight for Life

It has been fight or die for many of us in the past and the lucky people are those who have suffered, but who are now well because they heeded nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called "An-u-ric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Anuric (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of Anuric.

Hamilton, Ont.—"For kidney ailments I have never known any medicine to equal Anuric. When I started to take it I was very miserable with lame back, pains in the cords of my neck and shoulders and all over my body. The water was high colored and offensive. All of these conditions left me after one week's use of Anuric and I consider it to be the greatest of all kidney medicines."—Mrs. Jennie Clark, 79 Queen St. S.

Toronto, Ont.—"My husband suffered severely with pains in his back for three or four weeks. He commenced to take Anuric and in three or four days he not only looked better, but remarked that his back felt much better, and now he says that his pain has all gone. It is with pleasure that we recommend Anuric."—Mrs. Mary Ryan, 54 Seaton St.

HIDING THE WARSHIP.

Smoke Screens and How They Are Used In Naval Engagements.

The manner in which the density of the smoke screens is regulated during a battle is interesting. By partly shutting off the draft to her boilers a battleship is made to emit clouds of smoke which screen her from the enemy. But how can the stokers, who are far below deck, see the stacks so that they can regulate the smoke clouds to the proper density? By an electric "eye," says Popular Science Monthly. The eye is placed near the top of the smokestack, and it records the exact density on electric meters conveniently located in the boiler room.

This remarkable electric eye is simply a wire coil of selenium which is carried in a housing on the inside of the smokestack walls. An electric light, in another housing directly opposite, plays its beams of light squarely upon the wire. Now, selenium, as is well known, has the peculiar property of changing its resistance to an electric current when the light falling upon it changes. The weaker the light the greater the resistance, and vice versa.

Evidently, then, the denser the smoke emitted through the stack the weaker the light that gets through the smoke from the electric lamp and falls upon the selenium. By connecting the selenium with an electric meter and the ship's lighting mains the electric current going through the meter will be lowered by the increased resistance. The meter is very sensitive and shows the slightest change in smoke density. Moreover, it is calibrated to indicate exactly what the actual smoke density is, so that the stokers can regulate the cutoff of the draft to a nicety.

Glass plates are placed in front of the lamp and of the selenium coil to protect them from soot. The plates are kept clean by streams of compressed air directed against them.

Piet ---- From Africa

PIET was a South African, who came away from the fighting in that hot country to fight in a country where the climate was cooler and where the fighting was, if anything, hotter, says Patrick MacGill, author of "The Great Push," etc. Piet was a dried up, wrinkled, elderly man with a heavy moustache and gray piercing eyes. He had come from Africa in a draft and this draft was transferred into the London regiment when it arrived in England. When Piet came to his new company he was asked for details of his life, and this was the conversation which took place between Piet and the orderly sergeant:

Orderly Sergeant—What is your age?

Piet—Thirty-nine.

O. S.—You must have been that in the South African war.

Piet—I was only 38 then.

O. S.—Who are your next of kin?

Piet—Haven't got any.

A few days afterwards Piet was taken to the miniature range for instruction in musketry. The South African was handed a rifle and told to lie down and fire at the target 25 yards away. A look of disgust came into the man's eyes. He turned to the musketry instructor. "This is the first time I was ever allowed to press the muzzle of the rifle against the target when firing," he said. Then he fired five rounds rapid and only one hole showed in the bull's eye. The five bullets had gone through the one hole.

The men liked Piet and called him grandfather. He was a very silent man and seldom spoke to anybody, but now and again on a very hot summer day when out marching he would turn to his mates and say: "How cool it is here. It is so different from down under in South Africa."

The C. O. heard about Piet, and being in need of a groom he sent for the South African. The old man was taken to battalion headquarters.

"Well, my man, I have been hearing about you," said the C. O. to Piet, when the latter was taken before him. "I've been told that you are a very efficient soldier, so seeing that you are a little past military age, I can give you an easy job here in England."

"I'm down as thirty-nine, sir," said the South African.

"I'll grant you that and also grant that you have the spirit of a man of twenty-one," said the C. O. "But still—"

"If I wanted an easy job I could get one in South Africa and at a better wage than I can get here," said Piet. "But sir, I would prefer to go out and fight if I'm allowed. I haven't come here to groom horses."

"Very well, then," said the C. O. "I can't prevent you from going."

Piet, the South African, was in France two weeks later.

It was there that the old man's troubles began afresh. The draft of men with which he went to the seat of war arrived in a village near the firing line to find that the battalion for which they were bound was in the firing line. Piet and his mates went up there and arrived in the trenches one early morning in summer. They were then sent to the company which needed men, and the company officer set eyes on Piet the moment he arrived. He called the man aside.

"Surely, we're not so badly off as all this," the company officer muttered to himself. Then, to Piet: "Why have you been sent out here?"

"Because I wanted to come," was the simple explanation of the South African.

"But you don't realize what it is like here," said the company officer. "Fatigues day and night, long marches and heavy packs. You'll not be able to stick it."

"I'll do my best, sir," said Piet.

"Ah, but it's a job for the young," said the company commander. "And even the young find it hard enough at times."

"Could I not become a sniper?" asked Piet with a smile. "I'm supposed to be a fair shot."

"You'll need to be recommended for that," said the company commander. "And I don't know what you can do in that way. For myself I would advise that you take up a job as batman at brigade headquarters. There's an opening there, I believe."

"I would prefer to have a job as a sniper, sir," said Piet in a slow calm voice. "I'll show you what I can do if you like, sir. Threw your water bottle up in the air and I'll fire a shot at it. I'll put the bullet right through the neck of the bottle, sir. I would give you mine to throw up if I wasn't sure of what I say."

"I'll throw mine up," said the officer, with a smile. He did not believe that the strange old man could perform the feat he boasted of. Some old men are very conceited.

The officer unloosened his water bottle from its belt and leaning backwards until his right hand almost touched the ground he sent the bottle flying into the air over the trench.

Piet put his rifle to his shoulder, glanced sharply along the barrel, and fired. The bottle fell back into the trench, a hole in the neck and water spurting from the hole.

The officer lifted the bottle and looked at it. Then he turned to the old man.

"You're wasting your time here," he said. "I'll see and get you transferred to the snipers as soon as possible."

Piet is in the snipers' company to this present day. His officer, speaking about him recently, said that Piet had confessed to him that his age was 68 years, and that he had fought against the British in the South African War.

Three Servian Words.

Dobra is the general word of assent in Servia. If a doughnut is good—and Serbs make delectable doughnuts in tin pans over camp fires—it is dobra. A good looking girl is dobra, and if she is very good looking she is dobra-dobra. A good speech or a lucky general or a pleasant summer or the word to charge are all dobra.

One can go anywhere in Servia if one is but letter perfect in dobra and naimo, which latter is the general negative. One should also be able to say "Hydy!" with great force and conviction. That is the slang for "hurry." And it is needed, for these Balkan peoples do not like to hurry unless killing is somewhere involved. One's conversation might lack continuity perhaps, but if supplemented by assorted rubs and pattings one need never miss a bed or a meal where a Serb camp fire shines.—Herbert Corey in Saturday Evening Post.

Cheap and Good Foods.

Some of the best foods are the cheapest. There are carrots, salsify, parsnips, lettuce and such stuff. Carrots have the rarest combination of food qualities of anything that grows. It is so healthful that it is said a steady diet of it will cure many distempers. Parsnips are cheap, good, wholesome. Anybody who doesn't like the taste of a parsnip has his palate put in wrong. Lettuce is cheap, and a lettuce sandwich is royal food. Any one who starves while these things are on the market, to be bought for a few cents, has not much of a claim on life. There is more health in them than in porterhouse steaks or oyster cocktails. Some people affect to think they are a low brow food, but it might be said in retort that they are low browed people who think so.—Columbus (O.) State Journal.

Bright Idea.

Motorist (after smash)—Wind shield broken, mud guard bent, lamps smashed!

Wife—But you've lost the three teeth that you were to have gold crowned. That saving will cover all the damage.

Still Worse.

Penelope—It's dreadful! Papa wants me to marry a man I have never seen.

Perdita—That's nothing. My father wants me to marry a man I have seen.

You will never get on the sunny side by waiting for the world to turn round.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE HAS BROKEN UP

DRAFTEES LEAVE FOR KINGSTON TO-NIGHT

Russian Delegates Taunt Germans About Junkerdom

Peace Conference at Brest Livotsk Breaks Up ---Germany Refuses to Withdraw From Riga or Other Large Cities---Will Announce Modified Peace Conditions---Bolsheviki Wanted Political Prisoners Released.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 2.—The Litovsk Peace Conference broke up with the Russian delegates taunting their German confreres on the demands of Junkerdom, according to the returning Bolsheviki members to-day.

The Germans, it was said, expressed their willingness to evacuate all of "White Russia," but announced a flat refusal to withdraw from Riga, Libau or other big cities, except in event of a general peace.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 2.—Russian delegates to the conference here between Russian and German Commissioners on exchange of war prisoners are demanding that Germany release all her own political and Socialist prisoners. Ambassador Mirbach, head of the German mission, protested against the demand as being entirely political. The Russian delegates reiterated their demand and Mirbach finally promised to communicate with Berlin on the matter.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The peace negotiations at Brest Litovsk have been broken off by the Bolshevik Government owing to the German attitude in regard to Poland and Lithuania and the enemy's proposal that the garrisons be retained at Libau, Riga and elsewhere, according to a telegram from a Petrograd correspondent of the Daily News, appearing in the late edition of that paper to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 2.—The Bolshevik News Agency announces that the Council of People's Commissioners have decided to recommend to the Council of Workmen and Soldiers' delegates the recognition of the political independence of the Republic of Finland. A special Commission has been appointed to take measures for the separation of Finland from Russia.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERNE, Jan. 2.—Within ten days the Central Powers will a new declaration of modified peace conditions, "owing to the Entente attitude," according to a quotation from Munich, Nachrichten, received here to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

DUBLIN, Jan. 2.—A party of men wearing disguises raided farmhouses at Galway, confiscating arms and ammunition, according ot reports received.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Six German aeroplanes were put out of action yesterday by the French, it is announced officially. Artillery fighting continues at various points on the Butno front. Large infantry actions are reported.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The German reports of a large reorganized army under the command of Gen. Von Falkenhayn, preparing to block the British advance in Palestine are discredited by the continuance of Gen. Allenby's forward movement north of Jerusalem. It is becoming apparent that the Kaiser is being driven to making extravagant promises to the Turks which he cannot carry out. Gen. Allenby's procedure since the capture of Jerusalem has shown a large degree of caution, but at the same time the uninterrupted activity of the British army demonstrates that there is no intention of the Allies' Palestine offensive being halted. The necessity for making some display of military vigor in Palestine, however, is becoming increasingly insistent for the Kaiser if the Pan-Germans are to retain any part in the war influence at Constantinople. Nevertheless the need for strengthening the German lines in France and Belgium is even more imperative in view of America's rapidly looming power along the Western line.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Several raids were made by German forces on the British defences on the Arras and Belgian fronts last night. British guns caused the repulse of all such efforts, with heavy losses.

ECONOMIC UNION IS GERMAN AIM IN PEACE MANOEUVRES

Huns Will Demand the Handing Over of Mesopotamia, Arabia and Palestine in Return For Evacuation of France and Belgium

THE ROUMANIAN CRISIS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 2.— Germany will not consider the Brest-Litovsk declarations binding on her unless the allies accept the invitation to negotiate a general peace, according to M. Pavlovitsh, a non-Bolsheviki delegate who returned from the conference today.

"Germany's fundamental aim in the negotiations," he said, "is to establish an economic union from Hamburg to the Persian gulf.

"In return for the evacuation of Belgium and France, Germany will demand the freeing of Mesopotamia, Arabia and Palestine as well as the return of Tripoli in case of further success against Italy."

At the Breaking Point.

The Bolsheviki and Roumanians are at the breaking point today. Minister Tsherbatscheff is refusing to send provisions to the Roumanian troops, causing much suffering.

Heavy Snow Blocks Trains In S. France

(Canadian Press)

PARIS, Jan. 2. — Another heavy fall of snow in Eastern and Central France and in the Vosges has greatly increased the transportation difficulties. With the thermometer standing at zero, Fahrenheit—a degree of cold almost unheard of.

The Lyons Mediterranean line has cancelled a considerable number of trains and the few still running are hours behind their schedule. St. Etienne, in the heart of the great iron-working district of Central France, is under three feet of snow and the railroads in this region are completely blocked. Paris and Northern France curiously enough, are far more favoured, as regards the temperature, and snow, than Central and Southern France, and transportation for the armies is going on without interruption.

Simcoe Is Given Up

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—The Government steamer Simcoe, which was reported in a sinking condition off the Magdalene Islands some time back, is now given as lost with all of her forty-six hands. Efforts to locate the missing vessel have been futile.

SIX MEN INJURED

Cement Finishers at Quaker Oats Plant Badly Burned and Bruised When Oil Heater Was Upset and Caught Fire

NOW IN HOSPITAL

George Woodward, Rogers street, Ed. Pyke, Mike Karnan, Albion Hotel; Joseph Tolille; L. Muskrat, Brock street, and Tony Farroll, Rogers street, six cement finishers, were severely burned this morning at 9.30 when a coal oil stove in the workhouse, the cement building, at the Quaker Oats building, fell over, and set the oil blazing. Three, of the men who were on the scaffold, fell to the cement floor, a distance of about 16 feet, and sustained severe bruises. The burns were dressed at the Leonard Construction building, after which the men were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Used Benzine In Mistake For Coal Oil To Speed Fire

Mr. Benjamin J. Weart, a street car conductor, was badly burned about the face and hands last night, when in lighting a fire in the car barn stove, he applied a can of benzine in mistake for kerosene. The two cans were together nearby, it was stated, and were of similar appearance. The benzine ignited when it was used to speed up the fire, and exploded almost at once. Both ends of the can were blown off, and the sides twisted into a knot. Mr. Weart received a rather severe burn on the face and hands.

A Storm of Protest In From the West

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, One., Jan. 2.—The Cabinet will be able to summon to Council a goodly number of its members this week. With the exception of Sir Robert Borden, Sir George Foster and probably Hon. Frank Cochrane, practically all the members of the Government will be here by the end of the week. One of the first matters to be considered will be the recent order of the Dominion Railway Board increasing the freight rates. The order has brought a storm of protest from all parts of the west, and Premier Norris of Manitoba, has served notice that it is the intention of his government, backed by the Winnipeg, Regina and other Boards of Trade, to appeal the finding to the Supreme Court. An appeal on facts may be taken against an order of the Railway Commission to the Governor-in-Council, in which case the Cabinet has to decide. On a question of law, leave to appeal is granted by the Supreme Court and appeal is heard by that body. On a question of jurisdiction leave to appeal must be secured from the Board itself. Telegrams from the Government of Manitoba, from the Grain Growers and from Boards of Trade have already been received here and handed to the Railway Board. No definite action has yet been taken. It is certain that discussion which will take place in Cabinet Council, over the representations made, will raise again the whole problem of the Canadian railway system.

Late Despatches

LONDON, Jan. 2.— Cossack troops have occupied the town of Alexandrovsk without opposition, and the Bolsheviki garrison was disarmed, according to reports received here from Petrograd regarding the civil war in Russia. Other Bolsheviki regiments are said to have been disarmed by the Orenburg Cossack leader, Kazatin, who returned the arms after the Bolsheviki swore never to fight against the Ukrainians and Cossacks. The Bolsheviki authorities, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd, have received information that the situation on the Roumanian front is very serious.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—New declarations regarding German peace terms will be issued within ten days, according to a Munich, Bavaria newspaper. It is said the attitude of the Entente Powers, presumably toward the terms expressed at Brest-Litovsk may bring about some changes.

PETERBORO' DRAFTEES LEAVE TO-NIGHT TO JOIN COLOURS

First Draft Off to Report to the Depot Battalion at Kingston—Men Will Be Called as Fast as District Headquarters Can Handle and Equip Them.

THE KING'S PROCLAMATION

Our King has proclaimed next Sunday, January 6th, a day of Special Prayer for all his realm in view of war conditions.

The Ministerial Association is endeavouring to have every citizen, young and old, regard this Proclamation by attending Church Service both morning and evening of that day. The days following complete the annual week of Prayer.

Services will be held as follows:

Monday—Trinity Methodist Church.
Tuesday—Park Street Baptist Church.
Wednesday—St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.
Thursday—St. John's Anglican Church.
Friday—St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Jonah III.-5.—"And the people of Nineveh believed God and the proclaimed a fast and put on sackcloth from the greatest of them even to the least of them."

EXPERIENCED OFFICERS

Peterborough men called to the colours under the Military Service Act leave via G.T.R. to-night for Kingston. They are ordered to report at the headquarters of the Depot Battalion before noon to-morrow, and in order to be in on time must leave to-night. Other local men have been ordered to report on Friday and some on Monday next.

OTTAWA, Jan. 1.— The first draft under the Military Service Act joins the colours on Thursday. Every man called up has received from his district registrar notification to report to his depot battalion As rapidly as district headquarters can handle and equip the men the balance of the first draft will be called up day by day.

Final preparations have been made for giving the draft its preliminary training. Commissioned and non-commissioned officers with actual war experience have been secured, and the men will thus be familiarized from the outset with warfare under modern conditions. It is expected, however, that the greater part of the training will be effected overseas. Transportation difficulties are being rapidly met. The first batch of men is expected to be on its way over with brief delay.

Absentee Detachments.

Stringent regulations have been passed to meet the case of deserters and absentees without leave. Special instructions have been issued and chiefs of police circularized. To save the travelling expenses of prisoners and escorts and to provide facilities for men who desire to surrender the creation has been authorized of absentee detachments. The detachments will receive and provide for the temporary accommodation of absentees. Such a detachment may be stationed in some particular locality for a period, or may be specially formed to proceed to some place for the purpose only of dealing with such absentees as may then be in custody.

An absentee detachment will consist of an officer already on the strength and such other ranks as may be necessary to maintain discipline and provide escorts. No absentee detachment is to be formed unless the expense to be incurred is likely to be substantially less than it would be if the absentees were brought in under escort to the depot battalion.

Regulations as to Defaulters.

Special regulations meet the case of defaulters under the Military Service Act, men who failed to register under the proclamation calling out the first class. If "without reasonable excuse" they are liable to five years' imprisonment, and subject to arrest by either civil or military authorities. A defaulter who comes into the custody of the civil police and is not punished by a civil magistrate will be delivered up to a military escort and conveyed to a depot battalion or absentee detachment.

Defaulters who surrender will be handled leniently. Unless the circumstances of the case warrant it, probably nothing more than a normal punishment will be imposed. Where it appears also that a man should be granted exemption, facilities are provided for the hearing of his case before a tribunal.

RATEPAYERS FAVOUR CITY RETURNING TO THE GENERAL SYSTEM

Both By-laws Were Carried Yesterday—Messrs. Joseph Saunders, John Edgar and A. Weir Were the Aldermen Elected—The Vote Was Not Large.

One of the biggest surprises of the local municipal election was the defeat of the Ward system of voting and the decision of the electors to revert to the general vote system which entitles a voter in any part of the city to vote for twelve aldermanic candidatesc, irespective of wards. An alderman and a couple of returning officers who congregated in the city hall last evening were inclined to the opinion that the electors did not know what they were voting for, and that some of them actually voted contrary to what they intended doing. This is an indictment an intelligent electorate will scarcely appreciate. It is a safe bet that few, if any, of the electors voted under any such misapprehension. This will mean that next year the ratepayers will have an opportunity of voting for twelve aldermen instead of ten, and that each ratepayer will have as many votes as there are aldermen. The general vote system does away with such fixtures as two-year terms. The whole Council and two extra aldermen will have to run next year and if the ratepayers do not secure the kind of a Council they want they will have themselves to blame. Another desk will have to be added to the furniture in the City Council Chamber, as the present equipment only provides for seating accommodation for ten aldermen and the mayor.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 2, 1918

ANOTHER FARADAY WANTED.

We press a button or move a lever and the electric current puts the wheels of great fatcories into working motion; we press a button and the electric current floods our streets with lights, or sets ablaze our churches and halls. We press a button and the white flood of electric lights fills our homes. We press a button and our breakfast toast, browned to a turn, is ready for the butter and honey or mermalade or jam.

We owe all this marvellous convenience, undreamed of and unbelievable a century ago, to the advance of electrical science, and the development and coordination of sources of supply that bring the electric current within the reach of all. This wondrous development that has subdued one of the most mysterious and most mighty of natural elements to the use of man, is but the work of a generation. Considering the achievements in the adaptation of electricity to human, personal and economic uses of so short a time, it is not unreasonable to assume that with skilled research and inventive application, the day is not far distant when electricity will add another to our conveniences; and that electricity applied to domestic heating and culinary purposes, will become as relatively feasible, accessible and cheap as its application to domestic lighting and power purposes. This is all the more desirable since our sources of fuel seem to be failing, and the problem of keeping warm in winter is one of the most puzzling problems of the time.

If we could devise some means of making electricity commercially possible as a heating agent, another tremendously important boon will have been provided. If only a twentieth century Faraday would arise—one with the spirit and faculty of research and accomplishment of the Farady of the nineteenth century, we should have such progress in the application of electricity that we should be able to afford to use it for warming our houses and cooking our food. Before Michael Faraday's researches and discoveries, electricity was largely a scientific theory. His discoveries made it a servant of man to an extent that it has become one of the chief agencies of human welfare and "changed the whole aspect of civilization."

Britain doesn't believe in confiscation. In 1833 Britain paid twenty millions in compensation to abolish slavery; now it is proposed to spend three or four hundred millions in compensation to secure the abolition of a worse form of slavery— strong drink.

NUMBERING THE PEOPLE.

The religions, or perhaps, more corectly, the denominational census of the city of Peterborough, to be taken on Friday next, does not seem to be a matter of secular and general interest; but, in the highest sense, it concerns every citizen of the city. We plume ourselves upon being a Christian community. We have a score or so of splendid church buildings. The fact that few of them are overcrowded with worshipping congregations shows that the public at large is not being reached by the churches; that there are many wandering sheep that are not gathered into any fold; and that the essence of religion is not expressed to the fullest through public worship, in accordance with the divinely formed mission of the Church.

On the very lowest grounds the Church census is justified. It will be the satisfaction of a legitimate curiosity to be informed into how many sects, the Church, intended to be one, is divided; how many adhere to this or the other communion; so that we each may see for ourselves, according to our denominational standpoint, how many righteous there are in Peterborough.

Far more important than that, is the information that will be given the shepherds of the several flocks—the priests, clergymen and ministers—as to the distribution of the people for whose spirtual oversight and guidance they are responsible. A registration by age, sex and estate, street and number, will give pastors exact information and reveal to them many objects of their spirtual solicitude that have escaped their notice, no matter how zealously they have discharged their pastoral duties. If a score or two of wandering and spiritually careless and possibly spiritually neglected, in each congregation is brought to specific knowledge, and brought within reach of higher influences the total of possibility of moral influence being beneficially brought to bear will be incalculable, and have possible results that the limitations of human calculation cannot forecast.

Then the very fact of different religious denominations associated in the work of taking the census and the working out of its results will be another influence in the direction of greater community harmony, through the bond of a common aim, and in the name of a common Christianity that is one of the greatest desiderata of the time. Everything that tends to bring us closer together in the bonds of harmonious Christian citizenship, apart from its moral, social and citizen value, is a step in the direction of the consummation of the Divine yearning and purpose—"one fold and one shepherd."

One good thing about the first draft of conscripts is that being unmarried men, the total needed for "separation alowance" will not be increased.

AN EMPIRE ON ITS KNEES.

The Mussulman's call to prayer comes from the minaret of his mosque, the Christian's call to prayer, at this hour in the crisis of Empire and civilization, comes, in words, from the throne of the King; and in spirit from the throne of the King of Kings. His Majestry King George, becomingly, as the ruler of a Christian Empire, has addressed this message to his people:

"To my people: The world-wide struggle for the triumph of right and liberty is entering upon its last and most difficult phase. The enemy is striving by desperate assault and subtle intrigue to perpetuate the wrongs lready committed and stem the tide of a free civilization. We have yet to complete the great task to which more than three years ago we dedicated ourselves. At such a time I would call upon you to devote a special day of prayer that we may have the clear-sightedness and strength necesary to the victory of our cause. This victory will be gained only if we steadfastly remember the responsibility which rests upon us, and in a spirit of reverent obedience ask the blessing of Almighty God upon our endeavours. With hearts grateful for the divine guidance which has led us so far towards our goal, let us seek to be enlightened in our understanding, and fortified in our courage in facing the sacrifices we may yet have to make before our work is done. I therefore hereby appoint January 6, the first Sunday of the year, to be set aside as a special day of prayer and thanksgiving in all the churches throughout my Dominions, and require that this letter be read at the services held on that day."

In conformity with royal recognition of the Divine Overlordship, the Government has by proclamation set apart Sunday, January 6th, as a special day of prayer and supplication throughout the Dominion as it will be throughout the Empire.

We who are inclined to trust too much to the arm of flesh and to human agencies, especially need to heed the call. The divine conjunction of effectiveness is faith and works. If we have anything more than a mere intellectual grasp of Christianity—if religion is as real a thing in our hearts as in our minds, we shall recognize the efficacy and power of prayer. If we do not believe in prayer, then we should close our churches and put our whole trust in "horses and chariots" instead of "the living God." We are figthing this terrible war in the name of Christianity, and shall we think it a vain thing to earnestly and unitedly invoke the guidance and help of the Divine Author of Christianity, and acknowledge His place in our lives and in the affairs of men?

The day set apart by our King and Government, is very meetly Epiphany Sunday—the festival of the "Manifestation" of Christ to the world. Can we do better than unite in supplication for a new Epiphany, a new manifestation of the divine power, to "make the wrath of men to praise him"; to bring good out of evil, peace out of discord, and the triumph of right over might.

If drunk with sight of power we loose
Wild tongues that have not thee in awe,
Such boastings as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the law;
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget; lest we forget.

Scene from the big Scenic Comedy Drama "Which one shall I Marry?" at The Grand, next Saturday, January 5, for two performances.

Would you marry for love or money? This question is asked, and the riddle is solved in the surprising mystery play, "Which One Shall I Marry?" which comes to "The Grand" next Saturday, January 5th. The play is a throbbing drama of love and there is a strong vein of comedy in it also. The theme is of a modern young girl, who is sought in marriage by two men, one rich and the other poor. She has a preference for the poor man, but her family all urge her to marry the rich one. In her perplexity she prays that she may be allowed to know what the future would be to her as the wife of each. The second act is the allegory in which this information is made clear to her. By the knowledge thus gained she is able to make her choice wisely. The play is in eleven stirring scenes, and is interpreted by a cast of great ability. The play is presented by Messrs. Rowland and Howard, and was staged under the personal direction of Lorin J. Howard.

Splendid Rally Of Methodist Sunday Schools Of The City

An event of more than usual significance was the enthusiastic and representative rally of all the Methodist Sunday Schools of Peterborough on New Year's morning in George Street Church. The movement had been thoroughly planned and well organised, so that the arrangements worked out splendidly. The St. James' and Grace Schools came from the south and north respectively on the street cars, and Mark Street, Trinity, and George Street Schools marched to meet them at the corner of Hunter and George Streets. From there, headed by the Salvation Army Band, they marched, about one thousand strong, with music and banners, to George Street Church. There a most inspiring service was held, the programme being as follows:

Doxology.
Lord's Prayer.
Chairman's Greeting.
Hymn 150: "Sound the battle-cry!"
Prayer, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., D.D.
Selection: St. James' School.
Scripture reading: Psalm 1.
Hymn 344: "I love to tell the story."
Offering. Music by Orchestra.
Minute Addresses by Superintendents.
Selection: Mark Street School.
Address: His Honour Judge Huycke.
Hymn 145: "A call for loyal soldiers."
Selection: Grace School.
Greetings from Rallies in Other Cities.
Selection: George Street School.
Hymn 429: "I am so glad that our Father in heaven."
National Anthem.
Benediction.

Rev. B. Greatrix, chairman of the Peterborough District, ably presided, and the pastor of George Street Church, Rev. A. J. Thomas, led the singing. Mr. J. H. Renwick presided at the organ.

Great credit is due Rev. Mr. Thomas for initiating the enterprise, also to Mr. W. A. Cunningham for assembling and organising the splendid orchestra from the city Sunday Schools for the occasion.

His Honour Judge Huycke, who has given many years of his life to Sunday School work, delivered an informing and helpful address.

The service was unique in the history of the city, and will likely become an annual event.

FOR SELF INTEREST.

Our Progressive Merchants Deserve Your Patronage—Trade at Home.

Admitting that a man has the right to spend the money he has earned with whom and where he pleases, we contend that the question of buying where one wills has something besides the question of right. There is the future to think of. Are we as a community going to aid a few men, strangers, who do not give a rap for you or your children, to get rich at the expense of our home merchants, which can only mean to the detriment of our home town? Are you so indifferent and disloyal to the fate of your fellow citizen and to yourself as to patronise strangers to strangle your beautiful city? We maintain that there is a duty that men owe their communities, and that is their co-operation and loyal support to every enterprise and movement which has for its purpose the upbuilding and betterment of the community. Our merchants and other business firms are a big part of this community and their flourishing and prosperous condition helps make times better for the wage earner, the day labourer, and right up the line to the banker and the retired capitalist.

All the people of Peterborough are called upon to conserve the best interests of our town. You can not do this if you persist in patronising merchants of the big cities and the mail order houses. Just so long as you spend your dollar at home, just so long will that dollar be doing good in the community in which you live—including yourself. But the minute you get so thoughtless as to send it away for the payment of some article which you could have bought right here in Peterborough, then, and only then, has your dollar gone beyond recall — it is not a carrier pigeon; it will not return.

Just sit down and think about this "buy-at-home" proposition. Ask yourself some pointed questions; be honest with yourself, and the next time you have that feeling of sending your money out of town, BE LOYAL AND DON'T DO IT.—George W. McDonnell, Cal.

MAJOR DAVIDSON ARRIVES HOME

Former Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion Reaches the City

Major J. C. Davidson, Rector of St. John's church, and former Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, arrived home on the midnight C.P.R. train last night. Major Davidson was met at the station by Mr. Dobie and Messrs. R. J. and Cyril Devey, and taken to the home of Mrs. Mulhall, and whose guest he will be for the present. He will likely officiate at St. John's on Sunday.

His hosts of friends will be glad to welcome Major Davidson home. After going overseas with the 93rd as Chaplain, he was detached for duty with the Ontario Military Hospital at Orpington, and later went to France as Chaplain with a British Hospital, doing good work there.

Major Davidson's first question was about the latest news of the Peterboro boys overseas.

DISCOURAGING 'GODMOTHERS.'

Army Hopes Practice of Adopting Soldiers Will Stop.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE.—The American expeditionary force wishes to discourage the budding practice of American women in "adopting" individual soldiers in France for the period of the war. The practice already threatens to choke the congested mail service and result in delay in the transmission of important matter. Moreover, the censorship regulations forbid the men to correspond with strangers, and, as this rule is being enforced rigidly, it is desired that the people at home refrain from putting men here in an embarrassing position, as they feel under obligations to answer such communications.

An example of the interest certain women at home are taking in "adoptions" is an advertisement which has reached headquarters showing the picture of a pretty girl and urging soldiers without godmothers to write to a given address.

MEN ARE SCARCE ON 4TH CONCESSION OF MONAGHAN

Twenty-four Men on 3,355 Acres of Land—Cases Before the Appeal Tribunal

At the appeal tribunal on Monday afternoon, Mr. W. McAllister, who resides on the fourth concession of South Monaghan, stated that there was only twenty-four men on three thousand three hundred and fifty-five acres of land, on the fourth concession. When asked by Judge Huycke if there were many boys in that particular neighborhood, Mr. McAllister replied that he knew of only one boy over twelve years of age who might be able to assist on the farm. Mr. McAllister appeared for Fred Wood, son of Mr. George A. Wood.

Wood resides on an adjoining farm, and is said to be of valuable assistance to his neighbours. Another brother is also at the disposal of the neighbors, but latterly has moved away from that particular locality.

"We could take at least twenty more men," said Mr. McAllister, who claimed that the shortage of help tends to decrease production. Judgment was deferred.

CASE DEFERRED.

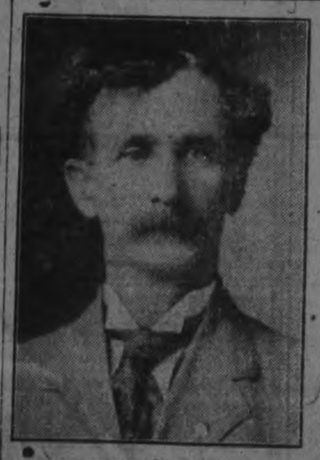
Mr. Victor Richardson, general superintendent of the Henry Hope Manufacturing Company, appeared before the tribunal on behalf of four employees, namely, Jefferson, Hopkins, Lowe and McIntosh. One of the four is a draughtsman and the remaining three are classified as mechanics. Mr. Richardson said that he would not make an application for John A. Storey, shell inspector, as he said shell inspectors can be replaced.

Judge Huycke reminded Mr. Richardson that two of the largest manufacturing establishments in the city did not make one single application for the exemption of employees.

Mr. Richardson stated that it was the company's intention to ask for the exemption of a larger number of men but owing to the change in the local labor market a number of men ineligible for the present draft had been secured. "These four men are skilled workmen with seven and eight years' training," said Mr. Richardson.

The case was deferred until the company supplies the tribunal with a written statement of facts concerning the application in accordance with the Act. The four men in question were originally granted conditional exemption.

Storey who was exempted until February, had his time extended until March the first, in order to enable him to dispose of some reality and make a trip home.



MR. FRED McKEE,
Reeve of Smith during past three years, who is retiring from municipal activities.

Coal Men Warned To Co-operate

Bradford — Two local coal dealers who refused to cooperate with the city in the civic coal distribution centre, have been notified by the Fuel Controller's Department that unless they cooperate to the fullest extent their licenses will be cut off.

This will mean that every coal dealer in the city will be in line with the civic plan, which provides for the issuance of tickets by the city, the coal dealers honouring no orders for coal unless accompanied by a civic ticket. The result during the past week has been to divide small quantities of coal which arrived here fairly and equally, but the pinch of shortage is being felt, there being none on hand to-day. The cold weather has continued the need while the car shortage has made the cold weather severely felt.

Miss Marian Gorman has returned from a short visit with her parents in Toronto.

Mr. Garnet Tovey, Calgary, is the guest of friends in the city.

LETTERS FROM PETERBORO' SOLDIER

Former Member of 93rd Battalion is Convalescent

Mrs. A. M. Playford, 371 Burnham Street, has received the following interesting letters from her husband, Pte. J. Playford:

My Dear Ada: Just a few lines, hoping to find you and the kiddies in the best of health. I have not had a letter from you for six weeks. They must be at my Battalion, but but they will not send them on to me. I have written to the battalion asking them to send them on to me, but apparently they don't care whether a man hears from his wife and family or not. They know that a man is anxious to know how they are getting on but still they don't trouble themselves about you when they get away from the battalion. I expect that I shall soon be out of here now as my wound is healed up, so you had better address my letters to the battalion as I expect I shall be there by the time you get this letters. All the Canadians had a vote here last week so we ought to get some of the cold-footed conscripts out soon and also some of the "born Canadians," as there are very few of them in the Canadian army; only 7% per cent. of us being Englishmen. It will be a great day for us when we see a few of those "mothers' darlings" out here. Perhaps they won't run the English down so much after this. Of course they will still say that Canada won the war, the same as they did the South African war. Mother has never heard from Charlie. She thinks he must be taken prisoner.

Now I must bring this to a close with my fondest love to you and the kiddies. I remdain, your loving husband. Jack.

My Dear: Just a few lines, in hopes to find you quite well and to wish you a merry Christmas, for mine won't be a very merry one as I am leaving the convalescent camp at the end of this week, and will be in the trenches again by Christmas—worse luck. I am sending some Xmas cards in this letter. I am also going to send home a German cap and some German money. I have never received a letter from you while I was in the hospital, or since I have been in this camp, so I want you to put it in The Examiner how the 2nd Battalion uses its men when they go away wounded. They could have sent them on to me if you wrote every week, but they don't care a jot about you. I wish I could get a transfer out of them to some other Battalion. I am beginning to think that I shall never see you again. I can tell you it is rotten looking for a letter every day and then get disappointed. It is the only thing that a man has to look forward to—a letter from home—and to think there are a lot of cold-footed sons of guns in Canada who won't enlist, and come out and give us a chance, instead of us having to go up the line almost before our wounds are better, it makes my blood boil that I should be fighting for them, and this will be my third winter out here.

Now I must close with all my love and wishing you and the kiddies a Merry Christmas, I remain your loving husband, Jack.

President W. D. Campbell Won The Annual New Year's Games

President W. D. Campbell's colorts won the Kerner-Fitzgerald trophy yesterday, from Vice-President J. W. McDermid, in the first curling feature of the season, running up a score of 159 to 142. It was a big day's curling, from 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. Practically all the skips were out and the new members were given a cordial reception. Incidentally it might be suggested to some of the skips, if it is not lese majeste to do so, that they give the new members a few minutes rehearsal at the turns. Probably the novices would prefer the slower process of learning by observation, but it has been intimated that a brief preliminary instruction might be acceptable to the beginners.

SCHEDULED GAMES.

The scheduled games open to-night with the following draw:

Archibald vs. Best.
Boucher vs. Bowes.
Campbell vs. J. H. Ferguson.
Benor vs. Brightman.
Davidson vs. Dela Fosse.
Denham vs. Eason.

It is expected that all the members of these rinks will be present in order that the games may get away to a good start. The ice is in fine condition, and the curlers are playing in good form, although as shown by some of the New Year's scores, some of them have not been getting the "breaks."

GIRL DROPS CHARGE AGAINST AVIATOR

Niagara Falls, Ont. — Yesterday afternoon, Eldreda Brennan, the 18-year old Rochester girl, formerly of St. Catharines, who had Cadet Frederick Kenneth Thomas, of the Royal Flying Corps arrested on a charge of bigamy, he having married her in this city last July when, she alleged, he had a wife in Fishkill, N.Y., sent a message to Chief of Police Welch not to hold Thomas any longer, as she had decided not to go on with the prosecution, but to allow Thomas to go overseas and serve the Empire. The girl reached this decision after a long conference at police headquarters late Friday night, between herself, the prisoner and her mother. Thomas agreed to reform, and Magistrate Fraser discharged him.

FOUR NEW FACES ON THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Cameron, Worth and Wearing Provide An Exciting Finish For Fifth Place---Dr. F. C. Neal Heads the Poll--Revised Figures Give Standing

Th Board of Education contest was not without its feaures. With a strong field of eight candidates and five to be elected, it fell to the lot of Worth and Wearing to provide a spectacular finish. Not until noon to-day, when the records were revised at the City Hall, was the issue between the two candidates determined. As it is, Worth is elected to fifth place by the narrow margin of two votes. Polling Sub-Division Number Seventeen was not heard from until near eight o'clock, and up until that hour the issue was in doubt. Dr. F. C. Neal headed the poll with J. M. Greene a good second. Up until the last poll was in, it was a close fight between Cameron, Worth, and Wearing for fifth place.

First Coal Commandeered By Chief Thompson To-day And This Emergent Measure May Be Extended

The first move in the commandeering of coal was made by Chief Thompson this morning, and to all fuel dealers of the city it may be interpreted as an intimation that the same measures will be applied to them. Chief Thompson telephoned the Robert Hicks Company and asked Mr. Hicks to fill four urgent orders for coal that had been received at the police station. Mr. Hicks replied that his desk was piled with orders, all of which demanded immediate attention. He was prepared to give whatever assistance he could in distributing coal among the homes that needed it most. Chief Thompson has stated that in the fuel crisis, through which Peterborough, with the rest of the northern zone of the continent is passing, he has received the complete co-operation of Mr. Hicks. Hence the Chief sent out P. C. Blade to go the limit in filling the orders that had come through his department. P. C. Blade found every wheel and sleigh of the Hicks Company's equipment moving coal to all parts of the city. He then secured Mr. Hicks' automobile, took the coal needed for the four orders he was armed with, and delivered them himself. P. C. Blade's experience with his own car served him well in this emergency duty. He distributed the coal with the expediencey of any of Mr. Hicks' staff, and incidentally qualified as a coal driver. This assistance from the police, who were actually commandeering the Hicks Company's supply, was appreciated by Mr. Hicks, who was so inundated by orders this morning that the telephone to the Charlotte street office was temporarily silenced until the present demands have been supplied.

It is likely that other coal offices will be called upon by the authorities for the reason that for some time Mr. Hick' problem has been that of delivery.

Ontario General Election Date

It was announced yesterday that the general election for the Province of Ontario is to be held next June, probably on Monday, June 24.

Another interesting rumour yesterday was that Mr. Charles McCrea, M.P.P. for Sudbury, is to be taken into the Cabinet, succeeding the Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, who has not been enjoying good health for some time.

It is stated that Sir William Hearst will continue to act as Minister of Agriculture until after the coming session of the Legislature, when Mr. George S. Henry, M.P.P. for East York, or one of the other farmers on the Government side of the House, will be appointed to the portfolio. It is understood the Government is hesitating about giving the position to a man living so near to Toronto as Mr. Henry.

The Liberals of Ontario are to have a meeting on Thursday next to consider the appointment of a man to succeed Hon. Newton Rowell as Provincial leader, and many believe that Mr. William Proudfoot, M.P.P. for Centre Huron, will be the choice.

MYSTERY CLOUDS DEATH

Dragged Unconscious from a Motor Car, he is Shot in Street.

Kansas City. — Mystery surrounds the murder of a man carrying a registration card bearing the name of Eddie Eckert.

According to eye-witnesses a large man got out of an automobile at a down town street corner, dragging an apparently unconscious man from the rear seat, pleaced him on the sidewalk and drew a revolver and shot him. He then got into the car and drove off before anyone could stop him. He is said to have returned later to the scene of the shooting and looked at his victim.

Eckert was formerly a circus clown with Barnum & Bailey. He is said to have been drugged before the shooting.

To The Electors Of North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentlemen, — Having been asked to remain a candidate for another year by the ratepayers, I take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. If elected I will endeavour to pay strict attention to the interests of your township.

Music & Drama

"THE LILAC DOMINO"

With its haunting music, charmingly interpreted by principals and chorus, its clever comedy, its wealth of scenic investiture, and its graceful dance specialties, "The Lilac Domino" at the Grand Opera House yesterday proved one of the most enjoyable comic operas that Peterborough audiences have seen in a long time.

"The Lilac Domino" has been compared to "The Chocolate Soldier" and "The Merry Widow," and the joyous lilting nature of its musical numbers certainly justifies the comparison. Charle Cuvillier was responsible for the score, and he succeeded in producing a series of delightful melodies.

The cast was a thoroughly adequate one. Mr. J. H. Duffy, who sang the part Count Andre, exhibited a most pleasing tenor voice, strong, clear, and well controlled, that was shown to great advantage in his musical numbers. His voice was of a calibre that is all too rarely heard in the musical comedies of to-day. Miss Marjorie Dunbar Pringle as the Lilac Domino, combined a winsome personality and clever histrionic ability, with a refreshingly sweet and pure soprano voice that made her vocal numbers a delight.

Sidney De Gray as Prosper, and Teddy Wilde as Casimer were responsible for most of the comedy, and they proved a decidedly clever pair, their topical song "But Still We Smile," and their eccentric dance that followed scored heavily. They were assisted in their funmaking by Joseph Standish, who was very funny as the leader of a gipsy orchestra. Doris Paine was delightful as Leonie.

The funniest hit of the night was the burlesque in the second act, when Leonie gave an imitation of a dog trainer with the assistance of four of the male members of the cast. The dog and monkey imitations by the latter convulsed the audience.

Where all the songs were pleasing, it was difficult to select the favourite. Probably "The Lilac Domino" was first choice, but "What is Done You Cannot Undo," "When Love is Waiting," "Let the Music Play," and "Song of the Chimes," all were delightful.

Clever dance specialties were introduced by Helen Namur and Teddy Wilde.

Arizona Mine Boss Lay Helpless When Wife Got Tanlac

Was Six Feet Tall and Got Down to Where He Only Weighed 116 Pounds

"I lay helpless when my wife ordered our first bottle of Tanlac from El Paso, Tex.," writes Harry E. Scott, of Dragoon, Ariz., under date of Nov. 15th, in telling of his remarkable recovery from an illness that had defied the skill of the best physicians for over two years, to say nothing of the failure to find relief at leading health resorts.

Mr. Scott's voluntary statement has the true ring of sincerity and gratitude, and is unquestionably one of the most remarkable ever given in connection with a proprietary medicine.

Mr. Scott's letter was addressed to C. F. Moss, a well-known druggist of Benson, Ariz., who has the Tanlac agency for that town, and was forwarded by Mr. Moss to the Tanlac offices in Atlanta. His letter follows:

Dragoon, Ariz., Nov. 15, 1917.

Mr. C. F. Moss,
Benson, Ariz.

Dear Sir,—As you expressed a desire to hear more about my case, I will try and tell you part of it. I was down and out nearly all the time for two years with rheumatism and stomach trouble, and went to eight doctors, two of whom were osteopaths. Three of them refused to take my case, saying it was incurable, and the others might as well have done so, as they did me no good. I guess I have taken a barrel of medicines internally and externally. I also went to Hot Springs, and out of all that was ever done I never got over one week's relief at a time.

After going down to one hundred and sixteen pounds—which is very light for a six-footer—I kept getting worse, until I couldn't move, even to feed myself, had no desire to eat, and couldn't sleep more than two hours a night. Some of the officials of the mine, of which I am foreman, would call to see me, then go out and say, 'Poor old Scott has fired his last man.' My wife thought I would never get out of bed alive, and she knew my condition better than anybody else.

At last, when I lay helpless, my wife ordered a bottle of Tanlac from the druggist at El Paso, Texas, which was the nearest place we could get it at that time. One evening, about four days after I began taking Tanlac, I ate a fair meal and enjoyed it, the first in many months. By the time I had taken half of first bottle I thought I had a good appetite, but when I finished my second bottle I could scarcely o[hevtlvau yLDayh could hardly eat enough to satisfy me. Well, I have just finished my ninth bottle, have gained 18 pounds, and am back on he job every day.

I have converted lots of sufferers to the 'Tanlac route,' and it affects them all about like it did me—their stomach trouble, nervousness, and rheumatism all yield to Tanlac. Mrs. Scott and myself are willing to go before a notary and make affidavit as to the truth of every statement in this letter, which you are at liberty to publish and use for the benefit of others.

"Yours very truly,

"(Signed) Harry E. Scott,"

Accompanying the above was a letter from the Moss Pharmacy, addressed to the Tanlac Offices, Atlanta, Ga., referring in the highest terms to Mr. Scott as a man and a citizen with the added statement that both Mr. Scott and his wife were ready at any time to go before a Notary Public and swear that Tanlac is the only medicine he had ever taken that had any effect on his rheumatism and stomach trouble.

He also stated he had another customer, an old gentleman, who had taken five bottles of Tanlac and had gained twelve to fifteen pounds, and that they were building up a large business on Tanlac, etc.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

OTTAWA IS FACING A BIG COAL FAMINE

Ottawa. — This city is in the throes of another coal famine. Hundreds of coal bins are depleted, and there is very little hard coal in the city to supply the demands. Three or four dealers are cleaned right out, and the others have not enough to keep their customers going. The dealers who have a small supply are only selling in half-ton lots, without making any promises as to when it will be delivered.

The shortage is due mainly to transportation difficulties, but in addition the dealers are having trouble in getting their orders filled at the mines. The United States, it is understood, is in a similar position wth regard to the coal situation owing to the tremendous amount of coal that is being consumed in the munition plants and in the big military camps.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

THE CALL OF THE KING AND THE PETERBOROUGH HOME VISITATION

His Majesty King George has issued a call throughout Great Britain and the Empire that all his loyal subjects observe January 6th as a day of special prayer. His call is as follows:

"I would call upon you to devote a special day to prayer, that we may have the clear sightedness and strength necessary to the victory of our cause. In a spirit of reverence ask the blessing of Almighty God upon our endeavours. With hearts grateful for the Divine guidance which has led us so far towards our goal, let us seek to be enlightened in our understanding, and fortified in our courage."

There is certainly nothing that Peterborough city could do more in harmony with the request of our Sovereign, His Majesty King George, than to carry out as planned, the proposed home visitation on Friday, January 4th. To all who believe in right living and in responsibility to the Creator, there is a note of rejoicing to have the great head of the world's greatest Empire thus call upon his subjects to join with him in seeking the Divine blessing. A morning daily on Monday of this week suggests that the British Empire, in casting accounts for the year 1917 in connection with the war, while recognizing that progress has been made, it was compelled to admit that it was not the degree of progress hoped for. To turn over the new leaf for 1918 is a more serious move than the turning of any other annual page in the history of our Empire.

A meeting of all the members of the committee of management, the chairmen of the five districts, all who are planning to take part in the home visitation, and others who may be interested, is called to meet in Charlotte Street Sunday School, corner of Charlotte and Read, at 8 p.m. on Thursday, January 3rd, for conference and final instructions. The meeting will be in charge of the officers of the Visitation Committee, Rev. D. Brown, chairman, and Rev. R. Pogue, secretary. An address and conference will be given and conducted by Rev. E. W. Halpenny, of Toronto, general secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association.

The visitation will take place between two and five p.m. on Friday, January 4th. The visitors go two by two. A record is made, so far as possible, of all the individuals residing in the city, a record of the ages of those under twenty, also their religious faith and church attended or preferred, and whether they are members of the Church and do or do not attend Sunday School. A card of invitation on behalf of all the churches of Peterborough is left in every home and with every boarder or employee. There is no attempt to win or proselytize. Nothing could be further from the spirit of the movement than this latter. The records are classified and turned over immediately to the church to which preference is expressed. Those having no preference will be divided according to location in the city, or in some fair and equitable form.

EXAMINER CALENDAR A SERVICEABLE ONE

More Required, as Every Calendar Was Given Out Yesterday.—Further Supply the End of Week.

When the Examiner went to press with its calendar in October last, it did not anticipate an unprecedented jump in circulation, and we found ourselves short by about 500. The Examiner is one of the few big-figured calendars now being made and which are much sought for. The forms are going on the press again, and a further supply will be available in the course of a few days.

Anyone paying for a subscription at the office or sending it in by mail—either for daily or weekly—is entitled to a calendar.

Like A Long Letter From Home

The Examiner received a letter from Mr. John Kingsley, Sr., of Stanton, Nebraska, to-day, enclosing renewal subscription to the Weekly Examiner to which Mr. Kingsley has been a subscriber for a great many years.

Mr. Kingsley says in his letter: "I find the paper very newsy and look forward to its arrival every week. It seems like a long letter from home to me."

Mr. Kingsley also stated that they are having very cold weather in Nebraska, it being 30 degrees below zero the morning he wrote.

STEFANSSON NOT YET BACK TO CIVILIZATION

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—Contrary to the popular impression created by a recent despatch from the north country to the effect that Valdjelmir Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, was safe at Fort Yukon, it is now learned that he is still in the vicinity of Baily or Herschell Island and will not be back on the outskirts of civilization for some considerable time yet. He has three boats, the Polar Bear, the North Star and another. These are undoubtedly frozen in either at Herschell or at Baily Island. It is possible that Stefansson may come back to civilization with the Royal North West Mounted Police Patrol, which leaves Dawson for Fort Macpherson during the New Year, and which will return in about a month. If he decides to do so he will meet the patrol at Macpherson. In any case the patrol will likely bring back full particulars about the party. If he decides to stay until he can bring his vessels back it will be August before he can get around Point Barrow and out. There are about 24 in the party.

Allenby's Latest Win In Palestine

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—One thousand Turks and Teutons killed, six hundred prisoners taken, and twenty machine guns captured in the latest engagements in Palestine, was reported by Gen. Allenby to-day. Four points of "great tactical importance" north of Jerusalem have been captured in the latest British drive and the defence of the Holy City materially strengthened, Allenby's report continued.

Hurry Troops Overseas Is Recommendation

(Canadian Press)

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Constant and speedy dispatch of the American troops to the European battlefront is the principal recommendation made to the Government by American delegates who recently returned from the Inter-Allies War Council at Paris. The speeding up of merchant shipbuilding programme and closer co-operation with the co-belligerents are the other recommendations. This was disclosed to-day by the State Department which made public a summary of the result of the conference.

Revolutionary Advances In Treating Wounds

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By W. F. Forrest.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Jan. 2.—A revolutionary advance in the treatment of war wounds has just been achieved through discoveries as to habits of germs, according to Dr. John J. Moorehead, a well known New York surgeon now in the French war zone. In addition to uncovering the identity of various kinds of germs heretofore not isolated pathological experts have discovered, that some kinds of germs are completely harmless before 12 hours. Some do not begin to propogate and become dangerous under twenty-four hours—some even longer.

"We are thus immediately able to determine how different kinds of germs will act in wounds, and how many hours after the wound is inflicted the germs will begin to grow and destroy tissues. We can identify every germ and we know its habits. Sometimes when bullets or shell fragments drive clothing or other foreign substances into wounds, many varieties of germs are likewise driven in. If these germs are still in their harmless stages we simply open the wound wide, cut away bruised and worn tissue, leaving a healthy blood-red surface. Then we completely close the wound and nature carries on the work. Tubes, drains and frequently painful dressings are eliminated and the result has invariably been quick recovery.

The new system, Dr. Moorehead declared, applies to any part of the body, lungs and vital organs not excepted.

Peterboro Boy Weds in England

The Seaford, Eng., Chronicle, contains the following report of the wedding of a well-known Peterborough boy, Leonard Williams, who left here with the 21st Battalion:

"An interesting wedding took place at the Parish Church, Seaford, on Saturday, the contracting parties being Miss Annette Myrtle Fears, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Fears, St. Martin's Cottage, Steyne Road, and Sergt.-Instructor L. T. Williams, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Williams, of Peterborough, Ont. The bride was attired in a navy blue costume, with hat to match, and was attended by three of her sisters, the Misses Tresa, Madge, and Phyllis Fears, who were fawn costumes with hats to match. The bridegroom was accompanied by Lieut. Raymond, of the 21st Canadian Regiment as best man. The Vicar officiated, and the newly married couple, who are spending their honeymoon at Brighton, were the recipients of numerous presents and congratulations.

City Purchases 125 Cords of Green Maple

The Fire, Water and Light Committee decided at a special New Year's eve meeting to purchase 125 or more cords of green maple at $9.35 f.o.b. Peterboro, and to retail it to the people in four foot lengths at $11.25 a cord, and $6 a half cord. Some of the aldermen contended that the price should not exceed $11 a cord, but Mayor Duffus pressed the point that the city should deal fairly with the retail fuel companies by avoiding sharp competition.

Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Stratton were appointed to conduct the sale of this wood, two cars of which will be received weekly.

Mayor Duffus, Mayor-elect Duncan and Ald. Smith were appointed to go to Toronto to examine the chemical fire engine before it is shipped from the La France factory.

Special Pictures At The Royal Theatre To-Night.

The great picture, "Waste Not, Want Not," recommended by the Dominion Government, will be shown at the Royal to-night. This is an addition to the regular programme.

Everybody should see it, women and children specially. Queen Mary takes a prominent part in the picture.

The funeral of the late R. J. Todd was held Monday afternoon from his late residence, "Gloria Gardens," North Monaghan, and was well attended.

The service at the house was conducted by Miss B. H. Gilbert of Kingston, niece of the deceased, after which the Masonic service was held. The pall-bearers were brethren from the three Masonic lodges, the deceased being a member of Corinthian Lodge, No. 101.

Those from outside points who attended the funeral were: R. S. Todd, of Montreal, and W. J. Todd, of Sarnia, sons; W. A. S. Ayerst, Montreal; Miss B. H. Gilbert, Kingston; J. F. Todd, Detroit, and W. H. Todd, Stouffville; Mrs. Geo. S. Guthrie, Toronto; Mr. S. McMaster, and Glen Williams.

Her Gift

By F. A. MITCHEL

A girl was sitting on the porch of her home thinking. Five years before on that very day of the month she had refused Henry MacMillan. She was then eighteen years old, and the indirect method in love affairs appealed to her. If a man proposed to her and she refused him she expected him to return the next day and the next and so on, till she accepted him. MacMillan had no conception of this sort of lovemaking. He never said anything he didn't mean and couldn't understand any one else doing so. But his experience with women was not extensive.

On this summer afternoon Luella Travers was thinking of Henry MacMillan. She had not intended to refuse him more than once. When he came back the second time—which she naturally expected he would do—she intended to accept him and at the same time show him how long she had loved him by giving him a smoking cap, on which she had embroidered a wreath. He had no use for a smoking cap and no ambition to wear a wreath about his head, but Luella couldn't think of anything else to do for him.

Henry was as stupid about some things as he was wise about others. If a dozen persons had witnessed the refusal he received every one of them would have known that Luella was refusing him with her tongue, while she was accepting him in her heart. Henry heard her words, but saw not their denial. He had received a business offer in a distant city and wished to learn if Luella would marry him. If so he would consult with her as to its acceptance; if not he would accept it without consulting her and go where he would not be near her and consequently the better able to recover from his desire for her.

Luella was a bit surprised that Henry should have taken her reply so seriously, should have bowed, though reluctantly, to what he considered the inevitable. He left her without a murmur, and she was somewhat fearful that he might not give her an opportunity to recall her refusal. She had half a mind to call him back. But half a mind is not a whole mind, and she let him go, expecting the next time she met him to draw him to another proposal by those winning ways she understood how to apply.

She did not see Henry for several days, then she was greatly shocked to hear that he had gone to another city to engage in business and make it his home. Why she did not write him to tell him that her refusal of him was only temporary does not appear. Perhaps it was for the same reason that refusals are not recalled. A woman must wait for a first proposal, and it is equally obligatory for him to wait for a second.

And now Luella on the anniversary of her refusal—the date was as well fixed in her mind as her birthday—was sitting on the porch wondering—as she had woudessd constantly since her lover's departure—what could have made him so stupid. And yet had he seen through her game what would have been the pleasure in her playing it? It had not occurred to her that she had better have refrained from the fun and acted on the principle that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Who is that tall figure coming up the road? There is something familiar in the walk, something in the outline, something intangible, indescribable about the whole. Luella's heart stood still. Yes, it is Henry. He is heavier than he was, his step is a trifle less quick than it used to be, but it is Henry, the man she refused five years ago, to her regret ever since.

Was he coming to renew his proposal?

Luella had had fits of anger against her lover for being so stupid. Now, instead of a hope springing in her heart that he was coming to tell her that he could not live without her, with a consequent throwing herself into his arms, she was seized with a desire to punish him. For what? For having taken her refusal seriously.

Henry came on. Luella, pretending she did not see him, looked up at the sky. He stopped before the house, then mounted the steps. Luella forced a smile. He looked as gloomy as the day he had left her.

"Why, Mr. MacMillan!" she exclaimed. "What a long time since I have seen you!"

"I've not been in this town since I saw you last," he said.

"Came back to see your mother, I suppose?"

"Yes; to see my mother, but to see you, too. I've passed an unsatisfied five years since I left here. I've come back to try to persuade you to recall what you said to me just before I left you."

There was something so miserable in his appearance and tone that her desire to punish him for his stupidity broke away. Asking him to "wait a bit," she went into the house and brought out the smoking cap she had kept so long.

"I had intended to recall what I said the next day, but you didn't give me an opportunity. I had been making this gift for you for months and expected to give it with my consent."

She spoke through tears.

The man—only a genius could portray the mingled emotions expressed on his face.

Look at a picture in the best possible light, and be as courteous to your fellow men as your are to a picture.

Don't Envy The Coal Man, Especially If He Has Any Coal

Like the umpire, lamented by the chorus in one of the real musical comedies before the Vienna idea spoiled them, the coal dealer is a most unhappy man. The public, the weather man, the war, and governments, in fact, all the powers that be, have seemingly joined in one vast conspiracy to harrass him by day and to disturb his nights by the thoughts of to-morrow and its troubles.

Among the trade there is the type of dealer who has practically closed up shop. He belongs to the "I should worry" category, or even the "public be damned" but the dealers who have coal are backed up against the wall fighting the people in their own behalf. The big problem is to distribute supplies to families who are actually without coal.

Mr. Wedlock, of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company, for example, had a load of nut coal ready to send to his own home, but before it left the yard he diverted it to some customer who pleaded an empty bin and a cooling stove. The attention of the people, and especially of those who are loudest in their undeserved complaints, has been focussed on coal, and meantime wood has gradually been mounting in price, without the sign of a brake upon it.

A farmer quite naturally asked $11 for a load of birch on the market this morning, and the retail dealers will accept any price now, providing it is high enough.

PTE. BURNS IS KILLED

Word has been received that Pte. Robert Burns, formerly of Peterborough, and a former employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, was killed in action on November 12. Pte. Burns went overseas with a Canadian Infantry Battalion. He was a son of Mr. Alex. Burns, Aberdeen, Scotland, and had many friends here, who will be grieved to learn that he has made the supreme sacrifice.

RANGE EXPLODED

The kitchen range at the residence of Mr. Chris. Graham, 595 Gilmour Street, exploded this morning. The fire had been attended to early in the morning, and later at 9 o'clock the laundress, not realizing the pipes from the hot-water tank were frozen, turned on the draughts. The steam generated, exploded the water front completely, wrecking the stove, which was worth about $20.00, and damaging the wall to the extent of about $5.00. The laundress, who was hit in the back, was slightly injured. The Fire Department was called to extinguish the slight blaze caused.

Santa Claus was on hand and pleased the children very much with his giving of presents

Great credit is to both teachers and scholars for the matter as well as the manner of the programme. The singing of the school was a very good feature indeed.

CHICAGO EXAMINER REFERS TO THE DEATH OF PETERBOROUGH SOLDIER

The Chicago Examiner has the following reference to the death of Pte. Vincent G. Mulligan of Peterborough who recently died of wounds in France:

"Word of the death of V. G. Mulligan, formerly superintendent of the Boys' Club at Thirty-Eighth Street and Wentworth Avenue, in a hospital in France from wounds received while rescuing the wounded in "No Man's Land," was received in Chicago yesterday, in a letter from the young man's father.

Vincent Mulligan came to Chicago from Peterborough, Ont., Canada, in January, 1915. He entered the Moody Institute as a student, took up the work of the Boys' Club, and soon was promoted to charge of a club. But he wanted to be of service to the country of his birth.

He enlisted in the Canadian Red Cross on August 10, 1916, and was sent at once to the front.

"A shrapenl shell burst beside him while he was rescuing wounded soldiers betwen the Canadian and German lines on November 4th," said the father's leter, written to O. B. Ransopher, Superintendent of Boys' Club No. 2, at Orchard and Willow streets and Mulligan's closest friend in Chicago. "He was wounded in the back and lower part of the body; his right arm was torn off and his left leg badly broken."

"He was one of the finest and most Christian young men I have ever known," said Mr. Ransopher, last night. "He wanted to serve his country and he paid the highest price."

"I have here his first letter dictated from his bed in the hospital."

"My wounds are very bad," he said, "and I want to ask the prayers of my friends to help me to stand the intense pain, and, if it be God's will, to help me to recover so that I may continue my work."

Mulligan was only twenty-one years old. While in Chicago he lived at 153 Institute Place.

PATRICK FITZGERALD.

Patrick Fitzgerald, a well known and highly respected resident of Douro, died at the family residence on Wednesday afternoon last. The deceased, who was seventy years of age, was born in Tipperary, Ireland, in the year 1847, and at the age of four years, he came to Canada with his parents. He lived most of his life in Otonabee, but for the past eight years he has resided in Douro.

He is survived by his wife, two sons and three daughters. The sons are: Thomas, who is overseas, and Frederick at home; the daughters, Mrs. Edward Clancy of Hastings, and Margaret and Frances at home. Also by one sister, Miss Mary Fitzgerald, of Douro.

Hardware And Metal Market

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets for the past week the Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Toronto, makes the following observations:

Business continues quiet which is the usual state of affairs at this time of the year. Most firms are busy stock taking and are out of the market in the meantime. The severe weather has revealed a shortage of coal in many districts and the outlook is serious in some parts. It is not unlikely that a number of factories will have to either close down or restrict operations. The cold weather is also interfering with operations at the steel mills. Railways are also suffering on this account and the movement of freight is being interfered with, curtailing deliveries of fuel. There is no improvement in the coke situation, and more furnaces have been banked in the United States which is curtailing the production of pig iron and steel. The outlook in this respect is becoming serious. There will be no revision in prices of iron and steel in the States, it having been decided to extend the prevailing schedule. This relieves the steel market of an element of uncertainty. The iron and steel market has been quiet all the week with consumers for the most part holding off. The shortage of steel for ordinary commercial purposes continues and there is no relief in sight. Prices of non-ferrous metals are unchanged and demand has been light. The markets generally are featureless and seasonably quiet. The scrap metal market is also dull and featureless.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or side, headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

Looking Ahead!

To be a success in this world you must plan ahead. The person who just takes things as they come never gets anywhere. PLAN AHEAD, decide what you are going to be and then PREPARE. No matter what line of business you select, you NEED A BUSINESS TRAINING.

Major De Saulles, Heart Broken By Killing Of Son Dies At Bethlehem Home

Struggle to Bear Sorrow Ends on Eve of Little Jack's Birthday--Showed Weakness at the Trial--One of the Major's Last Acts

A COINCIDENCE

Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 3.—Crushed by the tragedy of his son's death, Major Arthur Brice De Saulles died of a broken heart at his home here on Monday. He had been struggling valiantly to bear up under the weight of a great sorrow from the moment when one night last August he sat helplessly by while his beautiful Chilian daughter in law shot and killed his favorite son, John Longer De Saulles.

By a coincidence Major De Saulles died on the even of the birthday of the tiny grandson, who together with the man who died on Monday, was the innocent cause of the tragedy. Little Jack de Saulles was born on Christmas Day five years ago, and one of Major De Saulles last acts was to order a generous assortment of Christmas gifts sent to the boy who has been in the custody of his mother, Mrs. Blanca Errazuriz De Saulles, since her acquittal several weeks ago of the charge that she was the deliberate slayer of her divorced husband.

ALWAYS FOND OF GRANDSON.

Major De Saulles began to display signs of failing health immediately after his son was slain. Between Major De Saulles and his rollicking little grandson there always had been a bond of affection of unusual intensity. It was to see him that the aged man, who would have been seventy-eight years old on January 8th, left his home here last summer and went to his son's summer place, the Box, at Westbury, L.I.

That Major De Saulles might not be denied the anticipated pleasure of his grandchild's companionship during his stay there, John Longer De Saulles besought his divorced wife to permit the little fellow, although he was legally in her custody, to be taken to his father's house for a day. Mrs. De Saulles agreed, with the understanding the child would be returned to her that evening.

When the promise was not kept Mrs. De Saulles hurried from her home at Roslyn, L. I., to the Box. Unexpectedly she encountered her husband there, and with his father and her baby viewing the scene, shot her divorced husband to death in the quarrel that followed her demand for the return of the boy.

SHOWED WEAKNESS AT TRIAL.

Major De Saulles' weakened condition of health was obvious a few weeks ago, when he briefly told the story of the tragedy as a witness for the state in the unsuccessful prosecution of Mrs. Blanca De Saulles. Immediately after that trying experience he returned to his home here. Rapidly his condition grew worse. He talked of practically nothing but the tragic death of his son and what he considered the none too hopeful future of his grandchild.

Major De Saulles gained his title as an engineer in the Confederate army. He was born in New Orleans. He had just graduated from the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y., when the civil war began. He returned to his home and served through the conflict with Southern armies.

After the war he returned to the North and married Miss Catherine Heckscher, member of one of New York's oldest families. For twenty-three years he was superintendent of the plant here of the New Jersey Zinc Company. He leaves his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Grisom McClintock, of Washington, and Mrs. Rudolph Dezner of New York City, and a son, Charles A. H. De Saulles, also of New York.

DAWN OF NEW YEAR SEES AMERICA TESTED IN FIERY CRUCIBLE OF WORLD WAR

What 1918 May Bring Forth None Dares to Predict—Premier of Britain Hopes For Victory—President of France Sends Message That War Must Be Carried On To Triumph.

America, in all the cycle of her national life, never before has greeted the dawn of a New Year more fraught with momentous portent. The mettle of American manhood, the temper of American institutions are about to be tested, as never before, in the white-hot flame of the world crucible.

He would be a bold prophet who would dare cast the nation's horoscope for the coming twelvemonth. The chubby cherub who comes to us bearing across his baby brow the mystic numerals "Nineteen-Eighteen" is a veritable child of destiny. But what part is he destined to play in world betterment, ere he shuffles off the stage in the guise of the grizzled bearer of the scythe and hour glass.

As he runs his brief course through the seasons it may be his proud privilege to mark the advent of a triumphant peace, a substantial peace built upon liberty, fraternity and democracy—a peace in the achievement of which America, by the unstinted spending of her blood and her treasure, may yet be the determining factor. This is the first sunrise of a year that may, perchance, crown America as the knightly Sir Galahad of Christendom, strong, chivalrous, unselfish, the protector of the oppressed, the champion of the eternal right.

British Premier Hopeful.

Again, the baby year may mature and shift into the lean and slippered pantaloon," and yield its place to another without vouchsafing a conclusive victory. The frosts of another Yuletide may find the hosts of freemen still battling tenaciously against Teutonic autocracy and Hunnish frightfulness. Whether the year's end brings a peace-crowned victory or finds the swords of the world still unsheathed it is certain to lead this nation through the valley of the shadow of death. Its coming months inevitably must bring to thousands of American homes their Golgotha of human suffering. But, after all, the sequel to Goloths was a world redeemed.

This is not the first New Year cherub that has crossed America's threshold bearing a sword girt across his baby brow, but the infant "Nineteen-Eighteen" wears a pledge upon his breast also—the pledge of a mighty people to fight this just battle to a finish, "even to the last man and the last dollar." And across his young brow, like a diadem, glows the invocation, "God helping us, we can do no other."

At such a moment it has seemed fitting to collate a symposium of New Year sentiments from national leaders, statesmen, churchmen, diplomatists. They have come from all the wide world—a world in arms, but a world hopeful of conquering an abiding peace.

David Lloyd George, Premier of Great Britain, says: "I have good hope that before the New Year is past the purpose to which we have set our hands will have been completely achieved."

President Poincare's Message.

President Poincare, of the great allied Republic of France, speaks a fitting eulogy of Washington and then adds: "The illustrous American states man shows us the path to triumph through sacrifice, and, like his eminent successor, President Wilson, seems to say to the nations united for the salvation of humanity, 'Carry on to victory the flag of freedom.'"

Other appropriate greetings come from the heads of others of the allied nations, from chiefs of the Cabinet in Washington and from distinguished churchmen.

"Happy New Year!" How glibly the conventional salutation leaps to our lips! But on this New Year morning, like a clarion note, sounds the warning from Cardinal Farley: "Individual happiness and peace of soul at this time can be found only in such services as the individual's opportunities afford for the realization of our nation's aims."

"There is but one course for all straight thinking folk as we take the turning from old 1917 to new 1918," says Bishop Charles E. Burch, "and that course is along the paths of a calm confidence and stout hope."

Tolstoy Describes How Russian Peasants Are Robbing Land-Owner

Predicts That Chaos Will Bring Them to Senses, However—Owners Offered Ridiculous Compensation to Legalize Robbery—Sanction Robbery Wholesale.

EXCESSES ARE SPREADING

One of the immediate results of the Russian revolution was a complete change in the internal life of the country. The landowning class, the remnants of the social structure during he period of serfdom, must disappear completely from the future organisation of the country.

This radical change in the life of Russia is not the result so much of society, as of the impossibility which landowners find of living on the land.

The normal development of every revolution is as follows:

After the overthrow of the state, the nation establishes a provisional government whose duty it is to direct the country with a minimum of disturbance up to the organisation of the constituent assembly. Upon this body devolves the function of determining the exact form of government and electing the representatives of the people, who in their turn organise the government. Such is the theory, but alas, in practice this course is never followed.

The trouble in Russia is that while the well-intentioned idealists, Lvoff, Kerensky, and their associates were endeavouring to tide over the country through this period of transition, other elements, such as the extreme left, the radicals and the Bolsheviki, German agitators and the war itself, were taking advantage of the impatience of the masses to destroy authority to its foundations and to wrest the power from the hands of the well-intentioned.

Conscienceless in Control.

The powers of government fell into the hands of conscienceless demagogues who promised to the people innumerable advantages and well being in addition to peace, but in reality they are leading the country to perdition. The causes of the undermining of authority lie in the establishment of the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates in the first days of the revolution.

To this undermining of authority must be ascribed the fall of both the Lvoff and Kerensky Governments. The wave of disorganisation that swept away our army, disintegrated our industries, and paralysed our railroad system has reached the agricultural system of the country.

The deceitful promises of the radicals, especially of the Bolsheviki, that pledged unattainable benefits to the peasants and solved the most complex land problem by the most primitive method of seizure by force, has had the most disastrous consequences for the country.

Ten millions of peasants, constituting our battle front, were seized before they would be too late for the fore they would be too late for the general land-grabbing, and rushed to their villages to share in it. An epidemic of desertions was the outcome of this delusion.

Although nothing has been legally established, the landowner is no longer master of his soil. Land committees have been formed in the villages for the professed purpose of making a just distribution of the land, cattle, and farming implements of the landowners. These committees are made up of the peasants themselves—the peasants who are interested in distribution of this land and who, therefore, cannot be expected to be unprejudiced.

Sanction Wholesale Robbery.

These committees are given to favouritism to a ridiculous extent; and in fact they are nothing but insuitable agencies, to sanction the simplest, the plainest and the most cynical system of wholesale robbery.

In the best instances the committee calls on the landowner, tells him that it has come to "collect" his land and his cattle, proposes a basis of compensation that is ridiculously inadequate—in many cases only 10 per cent. of the real value—and thus the act of robbery is clothed in the form of law.

In other instances the committee demands the entire crop, cuts it, and carries it away and offers to the landowner one-half or one-third, one-quarter, and in some cases even less, as his share of the whole.

Here is an instance of how the thing is done: I have a landed property in the heart of Russia. I did not even visit my property on my last trip through Russia, but I heard from my son that the peasants appropriated all the best land for themselves, and offered me a sum that was not even enough to pay the land tax, far from paying an interest on my money.

In another place the peasants seized my brother's entire crop and left him only one-third. He was obliged, therefore, to abandon the production of starch in his factory, to sell all his cows and give up the dairy industry which he had established. Eventually he, with his family, was obliged to leave the country owing to warnings which he had received, in spite of the fact that he had had no quarrel with his peasant neighbours.

Excesses Spreading.

These are among the best instances of land seizures. In the worst instances the peasants have recourse to simpler and more energetic measures. With the growth of the propaganda of the Bolsheviki, looting, burning, and other wild excesses are spreading with a terrifying progress. The papers publish daily repors of these continuous outbreaks of violence and disorders.

I know of innumerable instances where the peasants have turned entire farms, manor houses, wheat stores with thousands of tons of wheat, as well as homes with priceless collections of paintings, libraries and tapestries which had been accumulated through the centuries by many generations of our oldest families.

The malice of the mischief is shockingly indicated by such acts as the cutting off of the tongues of cows, the breaking of horses' legs, and sometimes by the torture and killing of landowners under conditions of indescribable brutality. I must add that some of these owners, far from having been oppressors, had treated their peasant neighbours with justice and even with generosity.

Psychology of the Mob.

These astounding excesses must be attributed to that property of the phychology of the crowd which deprives it of its best sentiments of humanity and often brings its most savage instincts to the surface.

It is true that the extreme excesses which I have mentioned are not general, nor perhaps even frequent; but the fact is that all the Russian estates have been deserted by their owners, who now live in the cities, the two capitals, or are at work at the front.

One of my friends, the owner of a large estate in the government of Kaluga, who formerly was marshal of the nobility, and left his home at the beginning of of the revolution, told me how the "comrades" attempted to seize him and put him in jail, how he evaded them by driving from one station to another, and how he finally came to Moscow.

The peasants looted his orchard, smashed all the panes in his hothouses and took possession of his land.

After a while he heard that these same peasants had quarrelled among themselves over the distribution of his land, that there were battles between villages as a result of this quarrel, and now they are imploring him to return and restore order.

He replied that he would not return, as he would rather give them all the time they needed to carry their quarrel out to a logical conclusion. And he laughed as he gave them this answer.

I am personally strongly in favour of the devolution of the land into the hands of the workers, and, therefore, I cannot support the principle of large land ownership. I would gladly see radical reforms in the land system, but forcible seizure does not seem to me the intelligent solution of the problem. Consequently I cannot sympathise with the movement that has been promoted by the inflammatory activities of the Bolsheviki.

Difficulties of Land Problem.

I cannot speak in detail of the difficulties of the land problem in this article, and will take it up later. But it seems to me that the only solution of this question, toward which we must move, is a solution based upon principles similar to those enunciated by Henry George, the great American, who has outlined the soundest philosophy of land division that the world has yet known.

The Bolsheviki method of land distribution is dangerous to the country itself in addition to being deadly to the large landowner, who formerly was the only producer of export wheat, owing to the size of his holdings.

It is a menace especially to the country industries, such as the manufacture of sugar, starch, and other commodities, for which the control of large agricultural areas was necessary as a source of raw materials.

Of this danger the experience of my brother, who was obliged to shut down his starch factory because of interference by the peasants, is a warning example. The menace to the sugar industry is even more impressive, because it threatens the life of the country itself. And the imminence of this menace can be seen in the fact that last year only 60,000,000 poods of sugar were produced, compared with 110,000,000 in normal years. (A pood is about 40 pounds.) And the shrinkage will continue in the same ratio for the coming year and the year following that.

But this state of disorder cannot continue indefinitely. The peasant is now hurling himself upon the land with the ravenous hunger of a man who has not seen bread for weeks. Soon, however, he will come to understand his errors.

The landowner is gone. He is not even attempting to recover the ownership of his property. But the time is coming when the peasant will have to settle his own affairs in accordance with the laws of economics and of reason, and not by the rule of seizure by violence.

When that time comes the peasant is bound to understand that the land question cannot be solved by arbitrary means but by constructive organisation.

The very complexities of the problem will compel the peasants, as in the case of my friend who escaped to Moscow, to resort to the experience, the knowledge, and the constructive capacity of the intelligent men, of whom there are still many in Russia, but who for the time being are unable to make themselves heard above the clamour of the mob.

ILYA TOLSTOI.

Earth Curvature and Vision.

One of the "seven wonders of the ancient world" was the pharos, or light tower at Alexandria. If you have a popular account of that great structure handy, read it carefully and note that you are informed that the tower would be seen at a distance of from 100 to 150 miles.

Let us see if this could possibly be true. The curvature of the globe is 8.09 inches to the mile. This being true, we find that an object a hundred feet high can be seen only at a fraction over thirteen miles. Figuring on the basis of an earth curvature of eight seven inches to the mile, we find that the light tower in question must have been over a mile in height if visible even at a distance of 100 miles.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Overboard

A Labor Day Story

By John Twining

An ocean liner was coming across the Atlantic. In the main portion of the ship, fitted up with every convenience, every luxury, were millionaires and multimillionaires, some of whom had been prominent in the London social season, and not a few brought with them jewels, a fortune in themselves, that had blazed in many a ballroom in England's capital. There was one man aboard occupying a suit of apartments the price of which for a four days' trip would give a workingman a comfortable home for a lifetime. These people, seemingly regardless of being suspended between the heavens above and the bottom of an ocean several miles beneath them, wore their fine clothes at dinner, and in the evening ate choice viands, drank the best wines, listened to music, flirted, even danced, while the hours glided happily away to the swish of the waves against the leviathan's side—a gayly careless lot, seemingly oblivious to the cares and sorrows of this world.

How different the underworld, which on shipboard is as far beneath the upper world as on land! In the steerage was many a family packed in their narrow quarters, eating the homeliest fare, and many, though accustomed to the ordinary wine of their country, were drinking only water, and that out of tin cups.

Among these steerage passengers was one Adolph Stahr, a Swede, a young man twenty-five years old, with his bride, Amelia, six years his junior. They had left their native country, their simple peasant life, to seek a home in the new world. Adolph was a mason by trade, and Amelia had worked in a factory in her native land, becoming expert at weaving. They had heard that in America the price of labor had, by the united effort of the laborers, been raised to what seemed to them a very high figure. Accustomed as they had been to living on a pittance, they believed that, receiving these wages, they could save money enough within a few years to build them a home in which they might live comfortably for the rest of their days.

And so, putting together all the money they had with something that their parents gave them, they set out on their long journey for what was to them a land of promise. Taking ship for England, they there re-embarked for America.

Half their journey across the Atlantic had been accomplished when one afternoon a fog settled down over the waters. Fogs on the sea are dreaded by mariners, and, although the dressing in fine clothes, the feasting, the wine drinking, the music, went on among the passengers in the main part of the ship, many heard the constant, deep toned toot-toot of the fog whistle warning vessels that might be near. But at last all aboard the great ship except those whose duty it was to sail her were in their berths.

Suddenly there was a crash forward, the sleepers were awakened, all jarred, some thrown out of their berths. There was a mad rush to the deck, many going up in their nightclothes, where they found confusion and saw the lights of a ship drifting away from them. Fading into the fog they soon passed out of sight. The captain stood on the bridge coolly giving his orders, but few of them were obeyed. Above the babel was the wild cry for help from the wireless machine. From the first the crew realized that the liner had been hard hit, and the worst was feared. Those who were sent to examine the damage came running back to report that the foremost bulkhead was rapidly filling and that others astern of it were in danger of giving way.

An hour later when it was known that the ship was sinking the boats were lowered and the women and children put into them. The men of millions for the first time in their lives came to a position where the wife and child of an emigrant were permitted to step into a lifeboat while they themselves must remain to go down with the ship.

One parting among those who were to go and those who were to remain it is the province of this story to mention. Amelia Stahr, clung to her husband and refused to leave him. Taking her in his arms, he carried her to one of the boats, put her in and before she could get out the boat was lowered and pulled away from the ship.

The gray of the morning revealed the leviathan a few miles distant, half sunken, resting on the water like a dying sea monster. Slowly she settled, watched by those in the boats, nearly all of whom knew that some loved one was soon to go down to death with her. Then raising her huge stern she plunged downward, and the place where she had been was but a part of the boundless ocean.

Safety came for those in the boats in the appearance of a steamer that had heard the wireless cry for succor. The boats were relieved of their burden, and those who had left the sunken ship were carried into an American port.

Amelia Stahr on reaching the land with her fellow sufferers received every attention. But for this the case would have been hard indeed. Nevertheless it did not relieve the desolation of coming to a new land a bride widow. As soon as it was known what labor she could do those intrusted with the work of assisting the women and children who had lost husband and father secured her a place in mills where she could ply her trade, and she became self supporting. Some time after her arrival in America a little girl was born to her, and, although there was a melancholy in not having her husband with her at the time, she welcomed the child as a memento of her husband and as a solace in her loneliness.

Amelia for awhile had a lingering hope that Adolph might be picked up and brought to land by some passing vessel, but as month after month passed and she heard nothing from him the hope gradually died away. She was well skilled in her work and received every attention and encouragement, as did all survivors of that terrible shipwreck.

And so time passed. The widow worked hard and saved that she might educate her child. Amelia was still young and comely, with the fair hair and complexion of the people of the north and a pair of melancholy blue eyes. Suitors came, but she listened to none of them. From childhood she had been Adolph Stahr's sweetheart, and there was little prospect of her ever giving herself to any other man.

Six years passed. Little Lena Stahr, who was now old enough to be amused by pageants, when a Labor day came round besought her mother to take her to see the procession.

So Mrs. Stahr, putting on the child's best clothes, took her into the city and found a vacant stoop where they would be sufficiently elevated to see the marching men. There they waited.

The child was wild with that excitement children of her age display at some unusual occurrence, especially a parade. When necks were craned in the direction the trades unions were expected she would shout, "Here they come!" and when disappointed would begin to look forward for the next forecast of the approach. In this way an hour passed, when a distant roll of drums was heard, followed by faint strains of martial music. Then Lena danced and clapped her hands and laughed with anticipation.

At last came the band, headed by the drum major, whose tossing of his staff was a delight to all onlooking children. Then the grand marshal, surrounded by his aids, passed by, followed by one union after another. When the masons passed suddenly a man darted from the ranks, pushed his way through the crowd that lined the sidewalk and, leaping over several small boys and disarranging the tiz bats of a number of women, clasped Amelia in his arms.

The man was Adolph Stahr, her husband. Amelia saw him and knew him before he reached her. Almost before his arms were about her she lost consciousness. Her first act after coming to herself was to point to Lena. Adolph understood, and, taking the child in his arms, the three were united in one embrace.

Stahr after parting with his wife on the sinking vessel began to think of himself. First he picked up a life preserver and put it about him. He was cool and took forethought for a possible saving of his life. He secured a bottle of water and some meat and bread. These, with a small flask of liquor he had brought with him on his journey, he stowed away as best he could on his person, then, returning to the deck, gathered what loose material he could to make a raft.

The latter stood him in good stead, for, embarking upon it, he managed to paddle himself far enough away from the ship not to be drawn down with her when she sank. He was among a very few who did so, and soon after the ship went down he became separated from that few.

He saw the steamer that came and took up those in the boats, but he had meanwhile drifted away from them too far to be seen or heard, but he rejoiced at the knowledge that those in the boats, especially his young wife, were saved. He drifted slowly on till there was nothing in sight except the sky and the ocean. The sea was comparatively calm, and his bread and meat he kept dry till they had been consumed. These, with his bottle of water, kept him alive for three days—days of horror, but not bereft of hope. Ships passed, but they were too far away to be attracted. At last he kept what remained of his strength by an occasional draft from his flask.

He was passing into semiconsciousness when he was aroused by a shout and saw a small boat pulled toward him. He was taken on board a sailing ship bound on a trading tour around the world and found no means for leaving her and making America for a long while. When he did succeed in this his Amelia had been lost track of by those who had known of her landing.

Stahr did not return to the ranks. He found something more interesting than parading—a wife and a daughter whom he had never seen, of whose existence he had had no knowledge. Between the two, the wife leaning on his arm, the daughter lovingly holding the hand of her newly found father, they went to the mother's home to lay plans for their future.

Since that fortunate meeting, that blessed reunion, the Stahr family take an unusual interest in Labor day, for it is their main anniversary. Had it not been for that parade that Mrs. Stahr and her daughter were looking at, their paths never have joined. Stahr called their meeting a coincidence, but Mrs. Stahr, who is a devout Christian, looks upon it as a dispensation of a merciful Providence. They have prospered, the husband and father having made money as a contractor, but he never fails to join in the parade on Labor day like an ordinary workman.

Harriman's Dream.

George Kennan, in an article in Asia, the magazine published by the American Asiatic association, says that if he had lived E. H. Harriman probably would have built a railroad through Alaska across Bering strait and over eastern Siberia to a connection with the Siberian railway. He had his plans well along when he died. This would have made it possible to go by rail from Boston or Quebec to Petrograd.

The first thing that suggests itself in that connection is what would have been the effect of such a railroad upon the world war? And Mr. Kennan answers it by saying that if it had been possible to reach Petrograd in that way in 1914 over a road built and equipped in the American way there might have been no war.

Weighing Common Air.

The weight of air has often been tested by compressing it in receptacles by the air pump. That it really has weight when so compressed is shown by the fact that the weight of the vessels is increased slightly by filling them with compressed air and that such vessels become specifically "lighter" as soon as the air contained in them is exhausted.

Many elaborate experiments on the weight of air have proved that one cubic foot weighs 536 grains, or something less than one and a quarter ounces. The above experiment on the weight of air is supposed to be made at the surface of the earth, with the temperature at 50 degrees F. Heated air or air at high elevation is lighter.

Feeding the Snails.

In France, where there is a big demand for snails, the small farms yield a handsome profit. As many as 500,000 "first quality" snails, the price of which in normal times averages about $1.50 a thousand, can be reared on an acre of land, says the London Tit-Bits.

They need be fed only once a day, preferably in the evening, and, though extremely voracious, are by no means fastidious. After a fall of rain, which seems to sharpen their appetites, a bed of 100,000 snails will soon demolish a barrow load of cabbages. They are fed not only on green stuffs, but on wine dregs or bran soaked in wine, a diet which is supposed to impart a special flavor.

SEEMS EVERYONE IS ANXIOUS TO TRY IT

Recent discovery of ether compound that dries up corns so they Lift Out

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are busy dispensing freezone, the recent discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

A quarter of an ounce costs very little at any pharmacy, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet on every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

VISIONS OF PRZEMYSL

AUSTRIANS TRIED TO FRIGHTEN SUPERSTITIOUS FOE.

American Scientist Offers Explanation of the Story That Visions of the Virgin Mary and the Christ Child Were Seen Above Beleaguered City.

TALES of visions seen in the sky above Przemysl during the series of terrific assaults that ended in the capture of that fortress city by the Russians in March, 1915, have been repeatedly told by soldiers of both armies as well as by residents of the city. So detailed and uniform are the accounts coming from widely different sources that, judged on the basis of evidence alone, the stories must be accepted as substantially true, writes J. E. Murphy in the Popular Mechanics Magazine. In Przemysl and the surrounding country there are thousands of persons, many of them claiming to be eye-witnesses, who are positive that visions of the Virgin Mary and the Christ Child repeatedly appeared in the sky above the beleaguered city, and who are convinced that these visions were of supernatural origin.

That such visions did appear can scarcely be doubted, and since it is possible for modern science to have produced them, it is unnecessary to seek for any but natural causes. There is good reason for believing that the solution of the entire mystery is to be found in the workshops of the aeroplane and stereopticon makers—that the officers in charge of the defense simply took advantage of the latest developments in flying craft and projection apparatus to spread the conviction through the ranks of both armies that the city was under divine protection. The explanation given in the following paragraphs is designed to show how the Przemysl visions could have been produced easily by equipment that is now in everyday use.

According to reports, the visions invariably appeared at night. It is a safe presumption that they appeared only when the sky was overcast with low-lying clouds, and that these were made to serve as a screen for the images projected by a stereopticon. Rain clouds are usually at a height of about half a mile above the earth. To project images so great a distance as this would be impractical. Too powerful a light would be required, and other difficulties would be introduced that might be possible to overcome. The thing could easily be done, however, with the aid of an aeroplane, carrying an ordinary stereopticon, and flying from 700 to 1,000 feet below the clouds.

Clear motion pictures have already been projected a distance of approximately 400 feet. By equipping a stereopticon with a searchlight instead of the usual arc light it would be entirely practical to project still pictures a distance of 1,000 feet. This would be sufficient for producing visions of an awe-inspiring nature, and with the exception of a special mirror for the searchlight, which could probably be found without any necessity for special manufacture, all the apparatus required would be such as can be obtained at any time on the market.

Several persons who saw the visions have said that they were "like the holy picture in the church at Czenstochowa." If the details of the undertaking are ever told it will not be surprising if it is found that a photographich reproduction of this famous Madonna was used, for the reason that no picture in the world could have been used to better effect. The monastery of Czenstochowa is located about 100 miles west of Przemysl and was in possession of the Austrians at the time of the siege. The painting is familiar to the inhabitants of all that part of Europe, and is so venerated that it is visited annually by an average of 400,000 pilgrims, many of whom come from East Prussia, Galicia, and West Russia, as well as from Poland.

Whatever may have been the precise means used for projecting the images, there can be no doubt that they produced the effect intended. Whenever the Virgin Mary was seen hovering over the city the Austrians, believing they were under Divine protection, took fresh hope, while the Russians became panic-stricken. For hours after each appearance of the vision it was impossible to persuade or force the Russian soldiers to fire, and it is reported that because of this the capture of the city was delayed for weeks. In one typical case a Russian commander, suspecting a trick by Austrian airmen, ordered a battery to fire at the vision, hoping in this way to bring down the aeroplane that was causing such demoralization among his troops. Instead of obeying, every man in the battery fell to his knees and prayed.

Learning the Truth.

Gradually the light is filtering through the fog, and the Germans are beginning to see things more nearly in their true perspective. Evidences of this are on every hand. The latest indication is the attitude taken by the Frankfurter Zeitung against the curtailment of reports of enemy statesmen's speeches, and the cunning of such reports to the summary issued by the Wolff Bureau. Thus we find one of the best-informed papers in Germany remarking: "Neither the press nor the public have implicit confidence in the Wolff Bureau." Outsiders used to say it, now the "insiders" see it.

OIL IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Geologists Advise Government That Tests Show Possible Existence.

LONDON, Dec 31.—It has been announced in the house of commons that "certain eminent American geologists, who have come from the United States to advise the government, hold that it is well worth while to spend a considerable sum of money in exploring the possible petroleum deposits in Great Britain."

The speaker, a spokesman for the board of trade, added: "It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of finding oil in this country. We cannot yet say that it is here, but it is certainly worth looking for. Oil is almost more important at this moment than anything else. You may have men, munitions and money, but if you have no oil you are without the greatest motive power we are using and the rest will be of little value."

A Few Hints to Mothers

THE average mother has not very much time that she can really call her own. There are often so many little frocks to care for and so many household duties to think about that the hours seem to slip away in an endless procession of duties, and yet sometimes the work of the day never seems to be accomplished.

No mother should let her children and her home consume her entire time, for if she does she cannot possibly do justice to either one. No matter how dear to her heart her children are, or how much she is interested in her home, she should look to it that at least some portion of every day is given over entirely to her own comfort or pleasure.

Take "Time Off."

A bit selfish it may seem, to her at least, but instead not only is she bringing some brightness into her own life, but she is making her home a happier place for her dear ones.

For no one can go about an endless chain of duties, never resting the tired body or the harassed brain, without losing some of that bright outlook on life which is more necessary to the comfort of the home circle than to anything else in the world.

If you cannot find the time to dress and to go out every day, you can at least find the time to read a story, or your favorite magazine. It is true that when you do this Mary's little frock may be waiting to be tucked, or father's socks may be in need of darning.

But it is not at all necessary to put a dozen tucks in even the prettiest frock; a few would be far more sensible and just as pretty, and it is more than likely that if you spoke to your husband about it he would much rather give you the money to buy some new socks for him than to wear the much darned hose.

But whether the head of the family and the pet of the house are satisfied or not, the mother who is overworked should insist upon having some time to herself.

Many a woman does countless things for her dear ones which left undone would not matter one whit, and a number of which, perhaps, are really encouraging her children, and frequently her husband, to lead unintentionally selfish lives.

One of the most important things to health and happiness without which no life is really worth living, is to get away from the world every now and then and to have time for one's own thoughts and desires. This time may be employed in many widely different ways. It all depends on the individual's tastes. One man, for instance, used to get up very early in the morning and take long horseback rides in the park, because he said that only in this way, by getting away from his kind and close to nature, could he get in accord with himself and work out his business problems.

To get off to one's self now and then is far more essential to the happiness and contentment of women than of men. Men do not begin to have the same fretting cares that women have. Their lives are adjusted in an entirely different way.

If a man's business is of any scope at all he has assistance in running it. His stenographer not only takes his dictation and writes his letters, but it frequently happens that she looks over the mail and answers the letters from a few appended notes. The office boy runs his errands and the bookkeeper takes care of the accounts.

The average woman does much of her work herself. If she keeps a maid she has to superintend her kitchen and dining room, and in all probability she does the sewing for the children, to make up for her extravagance in keeping a maid, at this time when every one should economise.

It is a poor plan to economize by taking it out of the housemother. In order to do any effective work every mother must have some mental and spiritual growth, and to attain to these she must go out some and mingle with her friends, she must read some and, most of all, she must rest some.

Relaxation Is Essential.

Slip off to your room and lock your door every day for a few minutes. Breathe deeply and then lie down for a few moments.

While you are lying there do not worry and wonder if the butcher will bring the meat in time or if John remembered to take his overcoat, because it was likely to turn cool at night, or if Mary has learned her grammar lesson.

Let go of all your cares, and then, if you are sensible, after you have rested, and if you can possibly find the time, you will run away from all your household cares and make that visit you have been intending to make, or read that new book that your friend told you about.

How Women May Serve the Country

ONE of the finest features of the women's response to the call of the government for their help in financing the Liberty Loan is the way in which rich and poor alike have accepted the call addressed to them.

When it comes to giving actual help in actual dollars, however, there is a very different problem for the rich woman and the woman of moderate income. It has been said that the keynote of the campaign must be "service through thrift," that it is only by not buying what we do not actually need and saving the remainder to help our nation that America can be successful in the war.

Service Through Thrift.

This is a simple service for the woman who has all she needs of this world's lucre. She has enough dresses, shoes and hats as well as enough household supplies to keep herself and her home in good condition for some time, even if she buys almost nothing in the meantime.

But for the business woman, or for the householder of limited income, "doing without" often means not merely postponing a purchase, but making a sacrifice. The question is, What sacrifices can such a woman make from day to day that will enable her to do her bit for her land in purchasing a bond?

It is estimated that if every person in America would save ten cents per day the money that America needs to finance the war would be oversubscribed in a week. But it is manifestly impossible for every one in the nation to save at this rate.

The woman who earns her own living is able to save her bond coin, while perhaps the woman who stays at home with a number of little ones has need of every penny that she has.

Therefore the business woman might save a little over her sister who is in no position to save for herself.

There are several little ways in which she can save and yet notice it very little though the various ways depend entirely upon the woman herself and the circumstances surrounding her.

For instance, not all of us live within a possible "walkable" distance of their office might save a wee bit on carfare by a good long walk in the early morning.

Sure, it means getting up earlier, but the sacrifice will enable her not only to put by a patriotic "fiver," but also to gain in health and good looks.

The cost of living is away up in the clouds just now, and it is almost an impossibility to save on food. But if one consults the menu and chooses what is nourishing rather than what is merely attractive she will occasionally discover that she can save a trifle in that way.

Constant wearing of filmy white waists means a steep laundry bill, to say nothing of the expense incurred by replacing the soiled worn and torn ones by new.

Heavier colored waists or simple one-piece frocks will prove more economical in the long run and the laundry amount can be put in to help swell the fund.

These suggestions are only a few of the many ways in which a woman can save. If she once really sets to she will find a hundred and one little schemes that will enable her to put by a penny here and a penny there.

Buy often, but buy wisely and well. Do not purchase things for which you have no real use unless you can well afford to have the luxurious fads of the day.

CARING FOR YOUR BROOM.

Brooms have flown sky high, like all other commodities, so it is up to us to take care of our old ones. A broom should never be allowed to rest on the straws; either stand it upside down or else have a special hook for its resting place, and see that it comes several inches from the floor.

A broom's life may be lengthened if it is dipped into boiling suds once a week and then dried.

SAVES SUGAR.

Mix thoroughly one-third or one-half level teaspoonful of baking soda, according to size of pie, one-half heaping tablespoonful of flour and a teaspoonful of sugar.

Use one-half in the bottom of the pie and the rest on top of the rhubarb, then sweeten with one-half cupful of sugar, instead of the whole cupful usually allowed to a pie.

FEATHER "FANCIES."

The ostrich feather, according to new models seen, will have an ever increasing vogue. But it is to be a vogue of feather "fancies," as these plumes, burned, stripped or fashioned into fringes are often hardly recognizable.

Stripped or burned they resemble more than ever the proscribed aigret and appear as straight and curled fancies. Some are curled fountain wreaths which encircle the hat crown, some are corkscrew.

HOW TO KEEP THE MAID.

Make things pleasant for the maid of all work if you would keep her services and see that the kitchen is to her liking.

First of all, put simple washable curtains at the windows and provide a pretty table cover and a shaded lamp for evening use. If you also can have one or two comfortable chairs with washable cushion covers, your kitchen ought to be a very homelike place.

Appeal to Women to Limit Their Knitting of Wool

SO acute has become the shortage in khaki wool that hundreds of women workers in canteens and other organizations where garments are knitted for the soldiers and seamen are forced to sit idle, their hands tied by the lack of material with which to help the men in France resist the cold winds of winter.

In an effort to combat this condition and obtain sufficient wool to permit the knitting of garments for the soldiers a number of women members of the Woman's League for National Service and various Red Cross organizations have formed a committee to interest other women in this problem and effect a reform.

Leaders in this movement are Mrs. Frank M. Wilson, whose husband is vice president of the Barber Steamship line, and Mrs. Charles MacLeod. Both are interested in many war relief charities and have already assisted the soldiers in France.

The reason for the scarcity of khaki wool, members of this committee said, lies in the great demand which women throughout the country are now making for colored wools with which to make themselves and their families sweaters, regardless of the greater need of the soldiers. These women have been dubbed "pink patriots" by the war relief workers, and a campaign to curtail their use of wools for private purposes has been started.

Make Your Letters Interesting

IT is said that the art of letter writing has gone out of fashion, and in a measure this may be true. But, while few of us have time for long letters and the courtesy of a note has been relegated to limbo and the telephone has taken its place in a large measure, letters and notes must still be written if we are to take our part in the work of the world.

When we read the memoirs of public men of America during the Revolution and in other periods when the art of letter writing was at its height we are prone to think that something has been lost out of our public life.

Writing as an Art.

And yet, if we stop to consider, we will realize that this is not true and that hundreds of years hence biographers will in all probability cite this as an age when letters—certainly public letters, or state letters—were indicted by master minds trained in a wonderful way to convey their meaning.

To state a case clearly is the most important part of any writing. Many people when writing a letter cloud what they have to say with a great deal of matter which has nothing to do with the case at all.

When you are writing a letter to your family or a very close friend it is all very well to go into a great many details, for that is what your family and friends are interested in.

If you have been to a party and are writing them about it of course they will be interested to know whether you wore your blue silk or your pink muslin, how you fixed your hair, if it was in a new mode, and whom you danced with. They may even be interested in the menu, and certainly will be in the decorations if they were at all elaborate.

But if you are writing to some persons you do not know or well they probably will not be interested at all in the fact that you went to a party.

They will in all likelihood prefer to hear that you have visited the art galleries or of the trip you have made through some interesting part of the country.

Suppose, for instance, you were on a visit to New York.

If you have visited the old Dutch church in Tarrytown, if you have been to Snug Harbor or seen the wonderful scenery of the Hudson for the first time—any of these would be of more interest to the casual acquaintance than a description of the dance you have attended.

If you are a native of the city and are writing to a friend out of town you can hardly take a walk up the avenue without seeing something well worth writing about.

People do not have time in these busy days to write a great many letters, but we all like to get epistles from family and friends. There is something about getting one's mail which always gives a thrill, especially when one is away from home.

The art of letter writing might well be more cultivated than it is, and in order to cultivate it it is not necessary to write long letters. Indeed, it is not in very good taste to write a long letter to any one but your family or to a very intimate friend.

Personally, I do not think family letters can ever be too long. One's mother or sister, or even brother, is interested in all the daily doings as no one else can be. But it is very unwise to put into any letter the daily trials that must come to us all. We all have our times of discouragement, but we must remember that difficulties which seem very big to-day have been overcome by to-morrow.

By the time we have almost forgotten them they have reached our family, and in all probability they are worrying about something that is of little consequence.

"Cheery" News.

Of course, where there are really serious problems to be considered it is best to consult one's family. One girl has a plan which has worked out admirably. She never writes any of her troubles to her people. She decided when she started out in life for herself that she would never write of her worries. If she were in any real difficulty she would use the telegraph. And she would use it only to solve a problem which could not be solved in any other way.

So far she has been able to work out all her own problems without writing of her worries. She has never telegraphed, because she has found that with earnest effort she has been able to work out all of her own difficulties.

WASHING STOCKINGS.

Colored stockings, especially those of delicately tinted silk, require careful washing.

Prepare a lather, using pure white soap and soft warm water. A little salt added will keep the color from fading. Rub the stocking gently with the hands and when perfectly clean rinse through several waters. Wring as dry as possible, then wrap in a cloth and wring again. Hang in the air and dry quickly.

Press on the wrong side with a warm iron. This preserves the soft sheen of new stockings.

Good Things to Eat

A LITTLE sweetness now and then is relished by the best of men.

These suggestions may only be carried out occasionally in these high cost days, but they are sure to please the family palate.

Italian Lady Locks.

Dough:—One teacupful flour, one tablespoonful lard, pinch of salt, one-half teacupful cold water. Knead and roll out to about one-half inch thick, cut in squares and shape over well greased, cone shaped object; bake in moderate oven. When a light brown remove.

Filling—One pint milk, yolks of two eggs, one teacupful granulated sugar; put yolks of eggs and sugar in milk, beat until well mixed.

Take a clean cheesecloth and strain mixture through cheesecloth into small saucepan and place on fire. When it comes to a boil pour in three tablespoonfuls cornstarch dissolved in a little cold water and one-half teaspoonful lemon extract, stirring all the while to prevent burning.

Soon as it starts to thicken stir in one-half teacupful of chopped nuts and chocolate and pour on platter. When cream filling is cold fill cones and sprinkle with a little powdered sugar and cinnamon and serve.

Apple Cake.

One cupful sugar, one-half cupful butter, two eggs, one-half cupful milk, two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two cupfuls flour. After cake is put in pan add layer of apple cut in thin pieces; sprinkle over all a little cinnamon and a little sugar; very small pieces of butter here and there. When done apple should be on top.

Sponge Cake.

Three eggs, one cupful sugar, one cupful flour, two teaspoonfuls vinegar, one heaping teaspoonful baking powder, one tablespoonful of boiling water. Beat eggs separately, add sugar to beaten whites and then add beaten yolks and beat all together. Then add vinegar and baking powder sifted in flour and last of all put in boiling water and beat all together for several minutes. Bake in moderate oven 30 minutes. Use any kind of flavoring desired. Very good.

Eggless Fruit Cake.

One cupful of sugar (brown for dark cake, granulated for light), one-half cupful butter, one cupful of sour milk or buttermilk, one cupful of chopped raisins, two cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful of soda, one-fourth teaspoonful cloves, one-half teaspoonful nutmeg, one teaspoonful cinnamon.

Apple Pound Cake.

Boil together two cupfuls fresh chopped apples, small piece butter, one cupful molasses, one cupful raisins until fruit is well cooked. When this has cooled add one cupful sugar, one cupful milk, three and one-half cupfuls flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls cinnamon and one teaspoonful each cloves and soda; lastly mix in well beaten egg.

Administration Cake.

One cupful butter, two cupfuls pulverized sugar, one cupful sweet milk, three cupfuls flour, one-half cupful corn starch, four eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, two teaspoonfuls lemon extract. This is excellent cake.

Jottings from a Housekeeper's Notebook

WOULD you like to know something about some of the new devices for simplifying housework and for saving work, time and gas? But that is an absurd question in these days, when conservation is uppermost in the mind of every one! We wonder sometimes if the housewife won't soon begin to loathe the word "conservation," it's been so persistently shouted from the housetops for the last year or so.

Yet, however she feels to and the word itself, there's nothing surer than that she is heart and soul for what it stands for—the saving of every ounce of energy, food and fuel and making every penny go just as far as possible.

Making Pennies Count.

A new device for use on the top burners of the gas range is the "perfo plate." This device, which is equivalent to a small oven, consists of three separate parts—a perforated metal plate, a rack and a cover. The plate is set over a standard burner and the rack placed on the plate.

Then potatoes or other foods which are to be baked are set on the rack and the cover is set down on the whole. In the cover, which resembles an inverted pan, there is a tiny slide to be opened during the baking to emit moisture.

If a small tin plate is used on the rack to retain the juice apples may be baked in the same way. The plate itself, without rack or rover, may be put under a pot when boiling on a top burner in order to insure a slow uniform heat. When there is a small quantity of food to be baked the saving effected by using this diminutive oven instead of the range oven is obviously considerable.

Another invaluable labor and gas saver is the separate saucepan set. These pans are so fitted together that two or three may be set over the giant burner, thus making it possible to cook two vegetables or two vegetables and a pudding with the use of one burner instead of using a burner for each of the three separate processes.

Then there are "No-lid" top pots, the lids of which are adjusted by a clamp. There is a slide on each lid under which are large and small perforations. By adjusting the slides water may be drained from vegetables without removing the cover, thus avoiding any danger of scalding the hands by the escape of steam or hot water.

There is also an aluminum combination set on which is included an extra, fitted pot that acts as a double boiler or steamer.

A small toaster is used over a top stand-and burner and browns four pieces of toast on both sides in two minutes, which is a decidedly satisfactory accomplishment in the early morning hours.

There is an interior cone in this small appliance which should be allowed to become red rot before placing the bread on the toaster. The gas should then be reduced about one-half and the bread placed on the sides.

The new type gas iron, though mentioned last here, is far from the least important of gas and labor saving devices. It is interesting to know that the gas iron, while simplifying the work of ironing, at the same time burns only three cents' worth of gas in ten hours.

Following is a list of the approximate time necessary for cooking different foods by gas, which may be of help to some housewife:

MUSIC IN THE HOME

ORCHESTRA GIVING SATURDAY MORNING PROGRAMMES FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Without patting ourselves on the back unduly, we Canadians are usually open for suggestions. A movement has begun in New York that contains not only a suggestion for us but several of them bound up in this one work. The manager of the Rialto Theatre there knows the drawing power of music as evidenced by his providing an orchestra of fifty musicians under the leadership of a man who has succeeded in attracting music lovers by the thousands. This conductor is now branching out into a series of Saturday morning musicales for children with the object of gathering crowds of young people, students and even children to whom he can show the eternal beauties of an overture or the movement of a higher symphony and a nobler rhythm without being academic.

Having shown the orchestra's desire to co-operate with the city's school authorities in this, which would make these Saturday mornin- recitals an integral part of the city educational system, the supervisor of music in the high and public schools has gone into the matter and is extremely enthusiastic over the possibilities of the plan. He is quoted in an interview as saying: "I am confident that we can inaugurate a system in choral work by which the high school singing classes can come to the Rialto on Saturday mornings and take advantage of the wonderful accompaniment your orchestra here can give them. Later I hope to be able to extend the same sort of instruction to the lower grades I have in mind also a series of musical memory contests in which the students of the various schools in succession will take part. They will listen to your concerts and then make individual reports on them to their several music teachers the following week."

The series of programmes arranged embraces thirty children's recitals. At one of them for instance, there was present the music editor of one of the daily papers, who introduced each number with brief explanatory remarks. He said to the children by way of introduction: "All good music is founded upon good tunes. It is wrong to believe that good music has no tune to it. But if the same tune were played over and over again we would soon get sick of it. That is why great composers have taken their best tunes and added other things to them so as to bring out their beauties all the more.

"Good music is like bread and jam. The tunes are the jam, but when we have the bread with the jam we like the jam all the better when we get to it. Sometimes the bread is a little thick, and sometimes there are pieces above and below the jam, but the jam is always there somewhere. So it is with good music. We wouldn't like the tunes all by themselves, just as we wouldn't like jam all by itself."

The music editor then explained what a symphony, and an overture, etc., were told of the instruments in the orchestra, discussed rhythm, folk songs, the need of music for marching soldiers, how it was easier to work to music, the metronome and its uses and other musical subjects—all in the same plain easy terms that characterized his introduction.

Reports say the programmes are well attended and the children's close attention is noticeable to the most casual observer. Canadian cities would do well to watch the results of this admirable undertaking in New York, and with that city's experience to go by, institutes some similar work themselves, varied of course as the local needs and conditions dictate.

MUSIC FOR SOLDIERS.

Great things are being done at Exhibition Camp for the soldiers this winter. Every important musical artist who comes to the city sooner or later finds his or her way to the fine concert hall arranged by the Y. M. C. A. under the Grand Stand. De Wolf Hoffer and a group of his singers from The Passing Show had a delightful afternoon in the camp. Many of the principals of the Boston Grand Opera Company sang for the men, and the musical season already arranged is one of the utmost attractiveness. The artists find on the part of the soldiers a more whole-hearted and virile appreciation than that to be observed in the ordinary concert audience. One reason, of course, lies in the distinctive courtesy and consideration of the artists. But it must be remembered also that the music is welcomed as a relief from the dull and incessant grind of training. The concert is a bright spot in the military week, and a taste of the luxury of art. So far, few of the men complain that good music is hard to enjoy or difficult to understand. The soldiers are fairly representative of the general public. It is a mistake to assume that the average person does not enjoy good music. He does not hear it often enough to know whether he likes it or not. It is in this particular that the phonograph is doing a most important work. It is making good music familiar, bringing the great work of the masters to the public ear, arousing a broader and keener interest in the achievements of the best artists in concert and opera, and spreading civilization to every corner of the country.

DECIDING YOUR FAVOURITE MUSIC.

How do you decide your favourites? Is it that you are so gone on something that is all the rage, you say "Such-in-such-a Rag is my favourite piece." Perhaps you have a real bona fide favourite to-day and a different one to-morrow. But you could not have three hundred and sixty-five favourites every year could you? Now if you were really cornered and had to what answer would you give?

A group of young people gave their answers the other evening and this is how they were helped in their decisions. The one who put the question announced: "Suppose you were down in the heart of Africa, living there for say three years, and during that time you hadn't heard one solitary piece of music of any kind—

"That's a crazy supposition," interrupted a rather bolsterous young gentleman, "the savages everywhere have some kind of music. Take the Hawaiians, we go dippy over their dreamy waltzes."

"Well just use your imagination and suppose," returned the first speaker, "suppose you had not heard a single piece of music for three years; suppose you came home on a flying visit—while you were here you could hear just one song, one piano number, one violin number, one organ number, one choral selection, and one piece by an orchestra; when you had heard these six selections you go right back to Africa and are not to hear a single piece of music for another three years—now what would your programme "by request" be?"

Address that question to yourself, and see what your answers would be.

THE COMMUNITY "TREE."

Once the war is over arrangements should be made in the various towns and cities of Ontario for the Community Christmas Tree and the Community Carol-singing. In various Massachusetts and New England cities the tree has become an institution. Before the City Hall or in the Public Square a full sized spruce tree is provided, hung with about a mile of tinsel and covered with electric lights. Frequently in connection with the tree a istribution of cheer to poor families takes place, but the most important of its functions is merely to look 'Christmassy' and to afford a suitable centre for a community open-air sing-song. For a week before Christmas day and a week after the tree shines every night, but Christmas Eve is the occasion for the ceremonies. A massed choir from the churches starts Adeste Fideles or O Little Town of Bethlehem, and the crowd gathers. Then it sings heartily and with good will the stately Carols known and beloved in all English speaking countries for centuries. It is a pretty custom. The children look forward to it with the keenest interest and the grouchiest adult feels his soul more cheery as the splendid music rolls out before the Christmas air. Sentimentalism! some say, and Puritan sentimentalism at that!! Still it is wise for us to remember at times that sentiment rules the world, and to make sure that our Christmas season is not a mere time of buying and selling, giving and receiving. A commercialized Christmas would be almost as certain as a commercialized religion.

MUSIC MAKES A MAN NO LESS A MAN.

Once in awhile you come across a man who thinks that to be an organist, a soloist, or to attend symphony concerts and recitals is effeminate. His attitude toward anything very musical is about the same as it is towards "chokers," monocles and spats. Of course there are plenty of boys in their teens who feel that to have to practice on the piano an hour every day leaves them open to be dubbed a "sissy."

But music does not make any man less of a man. In the ranks of the Allied armies are hosts of musicians and music-lovers. Among those recently announced as having died from wounds received in action is Private James Francis Adkins, the boy chorister of St. Paul's Cathedral, who received the Coronation Medal from King George for his solo singing at His Majesty's Coronation in Westminster Abbey. He was the son of a church organist and himself an organist at the time of his donning khaki. Examples of this sort which are now numerous speak for themselves.

THE BI-PRODUCTS.

Those who look forward to the career of a virtuoso as the summit of earthly bliss may not always consider the bi-products. In a recent number of The Musician the following paragraph appeared: "Albert Spalding, the violinist played one hundred and eight engagements during the season just closed. To do this he travelled more than 33,000 miles and spent sixty-three nights in Pullman sleepers. This does not take into account the many discomforts of long-continued travelling, changes of food and water and exposure to severe winter weather." It is well for the ambitious young musician to look at all sides of the question. Certainly the aim of the average music student should not be necessarily to become a virtuoso, but to civilize himself and acquire a well-balanced education.

CLIMATE'S INFLUENCE ON MUSIC—CANADA CANNOT HAVE FOLK SONGS.

Mr. Leo Smith, writing in The Canadian Journal of Music, contrasts the folk song of England and Scotland, and seems to suggest that the natural features of each country and the climate have directed the course of each. He says in part:

"England, south of the Trent, is a beautiful country, rich in views of landscape, but not marked with the awe-inspiring features which come from vast mountain ranges, each height striving with intensity to cap the next. And England has been free from the crises which come with the invasion of hostile hordes. Consequently it is not surprising to find the English folk-song to be happy, and straightforward and tuneful, but lacking in emotional curves, not deigning, as a rule, to portray the climax, and with but a small degree of intensity. In Scotland, with its mountain ranges, its rugged coast line, its climate, and its history, often recording violent revolt and a most warlike spirit among the clans, it is not surprising that the folk-song displays more pathos, more emotion more rhythical qualities than the English."

There is no such thing as Canadian folk-song and there cannot be. This is a day of communication. Folk-song in ancient countries developed in human back-waters and eddies, where the news of the day scarcely penetrated. People lived their own lives Perhaps they never were more than ten miles away from their native villages. Folk-song was the moss on ancient civilisation. Moss cannot grow on modern civilisation. Yet while a Canadian folk-song is impossible, a Canadian school of composition is not beyond the bounds of probability. We have in this country one section where a body of homes song developed, the Province of Quebec. Something of the pathos of the stern Laurentians is found in it. The climate and natural features can influence a composer, and the history of Grieg proves it, surely the musicians who will arise to portray in tone the characteristics of this young enthusiastic nation will have the opportunity of all the ages.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—My mother, in her young days, was a member of Rowland Hills. G. G., in old London she was somewhat eccentric, but a power for good as these times show:

The Three Bidders.

Will you listen, kind friends, for a moment,
While a story I unfold—
A marvellous tale of a wonderful tale
Of a noble lady of old;
How hand and heart at an auction mart,
And soul and body, the gold.

It was out on the broad King's highway,
More than a century ago,
That a preacher stood, though of noble blood,
Telling the fallen and low
Of a Saviour's love and at home, above,
And a peace that they all might know.

All crowded around to listen,
And they wept at the wondrous love
That could wash their sins and receive them in
His spotless mansion above;
While how through the crowd a lady proud,
Her gilded chariot drove.

Make room, cried the haughty outrider;
You are closing the King's highway;
My lady is late and their Majesties wait,
Give way there, good people, I pray.
The preacher heard, and his soul was stirred,
And he cried to the rider—nay.

His eyes, like the lightning flashes;
His voice like a trumpet, rings;
Your grand fete days and your passion and ways
Are all but perishing things
'Tis the King's highway, but I hold it to-day
In the name of the King of Kings.

Then, bending his gaze on the lady,
And marking her soft eyes fall,
And now in his name a sale I proclaim,
And bids for this fair lady call.
Who will purchase the whole—her body and soul,
Coronet jewels and all.

I see all ready; three bidders;
The world steps up as the first;
I will give her the pleasures and all the treasures
For which my votaries thirst.

She shall dance through each day more joyous and gay,
With a quiet grave at the worst.

But out spoke the devil, boldly:
The kingdoms of earth are mine;
Fair lady, thy name, with an envied fame
On their brightest tablet shall shine.
Only give me thy soul and I'll give thee the whole—
Their glory and wealth to be thine.

And pray what hast thou to offer?
And he gently said: my blood I have
Thou man of sorrows unknown, shed
To purchase her for my own;
To conquer the grave, her soul to save,
I trod the wine press alone.

I will give her my cross of suffering,
My cup of sorrow to share,
But will endless love in my home, above,
All shall be righted there.
She shall walk in white, in a robe of light,
And a radiant crown shall wear.

Thou hast heard the terms, fair lady,
That each hath offered for thee,
Which wilt thou chose or which will lose,
This life or the life to be?
The fable was mine, but the choice is yet thine,
Sweet lady, which of the three?

Nearer the stand of the preacher
The gilded chariot stole,
And each head was bowed as over the crowd
The thundering accents rolled;
And every word the lady heard
Burned in her very soul.

Pardon, good people, she whispered,
As she rose from her cushioned seat;
Full well they say, as the crowd made way,
You could hear her pulse beat.
And each head was bare as the lady fair
Knelt at the preacher's feet.

She took from her hands the jewels,
The coronet from her brow;
Lord Jesus, she said, as she bowed her head,
The Highest Bidder, art Thou;
Then gavest for my sake thy life,
I take thy offer and take it now.

Give me thy cross of suffering;
Welcome earth's sorrow and loss;
Let my portion be to win souls for Thee,
Perish earth's glitter and dross,
I gladly lay down earth's coveted crown,
Saviour, to take thy cross.

I know the world and its pleasures;
At best they are but weary and clay,
And the tempter is bold and his honours and gold
Prove ever a fatal decay;
I long for the rest, thy bid is the best,
Lord Jesus, I accept it with joy.

Amen, said the noble preacher,
And the people wept aloud;
Years rolled on and they all have gone
Around that altar who bowed;
Lady and throng have been swept along
On the wind, like a morning cloud.

But the Saviour has claimed His purchase,
And around His radiant seat
A mightier throng in an endless song,
The wondrous story repeat;
And a form more fair is bending there,
Laying her crown at His feet.

So now, in eternal glory,
She rests from her cross and care;
But her spirit above, with a longing love,
Seems calling on you to share,
Her endless reward, in the joy of the Lord,
Oh, will you not answer her there?

REVELATIONS HAVE ACTED LIKE ALARM AND STIRRED U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 2.—The startling disclosures with regard to lack of ordnance, uniform and warm clothing, and unpleasant details about the handling of other war activities, brought out by the investigations which the Senate has inaugurated in the last few weeks, has inspired throughout the country a feeling of dissatisfaction with the way things have been going on, which ought to be anything but pleasant to the friends of Germany. It is the confident expectation of observers here that America will be projected into the war, in force, much sooner than Great Britain and France really expected, and with far less bungling than the leaders in these countries had counted upon.

That there has been bungling, no one denies, but, after all, it is pointed out, the bungling has been mostly of a sort which might have been expected of a pacifist nation suddenly turned military. Lack of forethought long ago is responsible for the fact that American troops must now use machine-guns and heavy artillery manufactured by the French.

It is admitted that this is a drain which they can stand more easily than they could have stood the drain on their manpower had their own men been compelled to use this equipment instead of Americans, and a drain which they can stand better than if required themselves to pay for this equipment, as they would have been obliged to do had it not been for the United States. In fact this supply will be a slight source of revenue to the French, above the loans which the United States has been making to that nation.

Disclosures in Good Time.

But the disclosures have come in good time, and already, as a result of them, action is being hurried in many directions, not only on clothing for the soldiers, but in ordnance. So far, it is disclosed that the navy has been going ahead in fine shape, and it is not believed that any evidence of lack of speed, or failure to equip properly the ships or marines, will be brought out.

The investigation into the shipbuilding programme has already disclosed that the trouble has been located and rooted out before the investigation set in. The trouble lay in the dual authority, and, by the strong measures of the chairman, Mr. Hurley, without regard for the personal feelings of two Rear-Admirals, had been eliminated by the removal of authority from the manager of the Fleet Corporation. The President, it is disclosed, stood by Mr. Hurley in this action, and the investigation is showing that, after allowance for early delays is made, the shipbuilding programme is going ahead in good shape.

A shake-up in the War Department to the extent of replacing in virtual authority the heads of the Quartermaster and Ordnance Bureaus, has already taken place, though it was camouflaged to a large extent. Further changes are expected, but a unified Allied command will compensate for some known weaknesses in other directions.

Congress has taken the bit in its teeth now, however, and the branches of the Administration charged with carrying out the war know, for the first time, not only since the war began, but since the administration came into power five years ago, that Congress is ready to go after the weaknesses in the executive departments without fear or favour. That knowledge is a healthful stimulus which will result in much greater efficiency.

Watches and Water.

When a person falls overboard or gets a ducking in any other way he at once has trouble with his watch, unless, of course, it happens that he is not wearing it. If he is wise he will send it at once to a watchmaker. What the latter can do to it depends upon the extent of the wetting and the length of time that has elapsed since the immersion.

The Jewelers' Circular says the repairer will take the watch entirely apart. If there be water still noticeable he will place all the parts in alcohol and then clean them. If they be dry he will put all ordinary steel parts in benzine and all plates, bridges and brass parts in a solution of ammonia and soap.

A repairer receiving a watch several days after its wetting will immerse it in coal oil. Then he will decide whether it will be less expensive to clean the works or to replace them with a new movement.

Huns Ready For Real Peace Offer

Little Chance Of Separate Peace With Russia

LITTLE CHANCE NOW FOR SEPARATE RUSSIAN PEACE

Irreconciliable Differences Between Russians and Germans Will Force the Discontinuance of Future Peace Negotiations and Armistice May Not Be Renewed---Trotsky Declares Russian Government Will Not Consent to the German Peace Terms---Raids on British Lines Are Repulsed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 3.—The Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, Leon Trotsky, declared to-day that the Government of Russian workers would not consent to the German peace proposals.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 3.—Evidences multiplied to-day that the irreconcilable differences between the Russian and German peace conferes will force the discontinuance of future separate peace negotiations and that the armistice may not be renewed. The Russians are now apprehensive of German trickery in every move by the Teutonic delegates and agents here and at Brest Litovsk. The Germans, under Ambassador Mirbach, are openly seeking to utilize the exchange of war prisoners' conference for the reopening of German trade in Russia. The Bolsheviki delegates have emphasized anew their unwillingness to go beyond the lines indicated in the armistice.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Heavy artillery fighting occurred during the night, especially on the Aisne front, in the region of Landricourt and Cuteres de Courcy, in sector Maisons de Champagne, and on the right bank of the Meuse. Two enemy raids, one south of the Oise, the other near Carnillet, were repulsed completely.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK Jan. 3.—Petrograd newspapers are unanimous in declaring that the Germans and Austrians have, after one week, thrown off the mask, and made it clear that the Central Powers do not want real democratic peace. The Pravda says: "German Imperialism is again beginning to show its claws."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Hostile raiding parties were repulsed last night south and southwest of Labassee, leaving a few prisoners in our hands, the War Office reports. Enemy artillery showed considerable activity during the night, east of Epehy.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Nine French merchant ships of more than 1,600 tons were sunk by submarines or mines during the week ending Dec. 29. There was no loss of vessels under 1,600 tons or of fishing ships. Two attacks on steamers failed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Jan. 3.—Enemy submarines during the week ending December 29th sank one Italian steamship of more than 1,500 tons, and one sailing vessel of less than one hundred tons. Two steamers managed to escape.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 3.—All German political leaders are apparently opposed to the German peace terms as outlined at Brest Litovsk, according to Berlin despatches to-day. The general under current of dissatisfaction was strikingly indicated in a seven-hour lively session of the Crown Council on Wednesday, which was attended by the Kaiser, Hindenburg and Ludendorff. Party leaders also met yesterday with Minister Kuehlmann and expressed disapproval of the Government's policy.

The Independent Socialists are violently agitating against the Czernin peace endeavours. The main committee of the Reichstag is due to meet to-day, but despatches said there were objections being expressed at such a meeting during the absence of Foreign Secretary Kuhlemann.

THE KING'S PROCLAMATION

Having read the King's Proclamation with regard to the Day of Special Prayer, on January 6th, and also the urgent appeal of the Ministerial Association, that every citizen of Peterborough should be found in his Church on that day, we most cordially approve of this recommendation, and ask for the co-operation so much needed and so seriously sought.

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD TO APPEAL TO PRIVY COUNCIL

Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—It is the intention of the Ottawa Separate School Board to appeal to the Privy Council for a decision as to the constitutionality of the Ontario Provincial Government, which empowers the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council to name a School Board to administer the Separate Schools.

Draftees Are Reporting To-day Almost To Man

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 3.— Reports from all over Canada, including Quebec, say that draftees warned to report for military service to-day, are obeying almost to a man. At the headquarters of the three Ontario military districts, Kingston, Toronto and London, a large percentage of the men appeared and were sworn in and uniformed before the noon hour, when they were expected to report.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC SEND-OFF FOR THE FIRST DRAFT

Peterborough Men Called to the Colours Under the Military Service Act, Left Last Night to Join the Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion

BOYS WERE CHEERFUL

Scenes reminiscent of the early days of the war were in evidence at the Grand Trunk station last night when the first draft of Peterborough men called up under the Military Service Act left for Kingston to report for duty with the Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion. The young soldiers, the majority of them being around the twenty year mark, were given an enthusiastic send-off. In spite of the below zero weather, hundreds of relatives and friends gathered to say good-bye to the draftees. The train was over two hours late, but the crowd refused to go home until the draft left. The waiting rooms were packed, while many others shivered on the platform until the train finally left at 11.30 o'clock.

The draftees themselves were in fine fettle, taking the call to the colours with a philosophical cheerfulness which, if maintained, will make their army life more pleasant. The Salvation Army Band was on hand, and for an hour and a half before the train pulled out, entertained the crowd with patriotic airs, which the embryo soldiers sang until they were horase. "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag" seemed to be the favourite, although the chorus came strong in "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," "The Long, Long Traill" and "Keep the Home Fires Burning." The draftees also led in the singing of some of the old soldier choruses, i.e.:

"They say we're going over the ocean,
They say we're going over the sea,
They say we're going over the ocean,
But it sounds more like Kingston to me."

And the "whitewash" chorus sung to the same air.

If the boys themselves were cheerful, it was not a happy occasion for mothers, sisters and sweethearts, however, and there were many affecting farewells just before the train left.

Mayor Duffus was on hand to say good-bye to each of the draftees and led in the cheering when the train commenced to pull out of the station. The Salvation Army Band struck up "Auld Lang Syne" as the draft left.

The authorities have refused to allow the publication of either the names or the number of the men leaving. A second draft has to report in Kingston on Friday and a third on Monday.

It looks as if the authorities at Kingston had blundered in ordering draftees from the western end of the military district to report for duty before noon on any particular day. The only way they can comply with that order is to leave the the night before, and with the trains runninng late it means getting into Kingston in the 'wee sma' hours, with no provision for receiving them. In the case of the draft ordered to report on Monday before noon they would have to leave here on Saturday night to get in on time. Arrangements should be made so that the draftees may leave on the morning train of the day upon which they have to report.

ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

A VICTORY FOR ITALIANS

Zenson Bridgehead, Considered Impregnable by the Enemy, Captured Almost Intact by Irresistible Rush of the Italians

PIAVE IS CLEARED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Jan. 3.— Except for a few outpost positions near the Delta at the mouth of the Piave, the whole western bank of the river to-day was clear of Austro-German forces. The Italian forces by their capture of Zenson bridgehead, drove back the last of the strong enemy forces.

Some idea of the magnitude of the Zenson victory may be given when it is explained that the German position there was about a concrete "nest" of more than sixty machine guns, cleverly concealed under a bank of the stream. The position had been built with exceeding care and was evidently held impregnable by the enemy. It was captured almost intact by the irresistible rush of Italian forces.

Smashed Up Her Cupboard To Get Fuel

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 3.— The attempt on the part of the city authorities to alleviate the coal shortage situation in the city is revealing many cases of distress.

To-day the mother of five children, whose father is a soldier fighting overseas for the last two years, told of having gone two weeks without coal while the children were kept in bed to keep warm. The household chairs were broken up to provide fuel, she said.

"This morning," she added, "I smashed up the cupboard for fuel. It's a shame the way they do business in this wealthy Canada of yours and let their people suffer," was her final comment as promise was given half a ton of coal would be sent her at once.

The Season's Big Event

The Clothing Stock of Merrell & Meredith is Offered at Forced Sale Prices

There are always a lot of people waiting for the January sales before they do their winter buying. With markets steadily rising it almost seemed like a mistaken policy this year; but the decision just reached by Merrell & Meredith, the popular clothing firm, to put on a mammoth sale in which the slashing price cuts will be depended on to force out at least $10,000 worth of men's wear in a few weeks, proves that the waiting course was again the way of wisdom.

In order to keep faith with their wholesalers, this old-established firm finds it necessary to unload at least $10,000.00 worth of their stock, and instead of taking advantage of higher values, they have cut even the old prices unmercifully, as the $10,000 must be raised, no matter what the sacrifice. It will certainly pay intending buyers to make an extended shopping tour of the store and see how far their money will go in laying in an outfit of cold weather clothing.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Jan. 3. — Receipts: Cattle 443, calves 92, hogs 2,449. cattle, $12 to $12.50; bulls, $9 to cattle, $1 2to $12.50; bulls, $9 to $9.25; choice butcher, $10.25 to $11.50; choice cows, $8.75 to $10; bulls, $7.50 to $8; feeding steers, $8.50 to $9.75. Believe Huns Are Paving The Way For A Real Peace Offer

Huns Realize as Never Before That They Are Beaten and Are Ready to Make Sacrifices Rather Than Face Another Year of War, Diplomats Believe.

ODDS BEFORE THEM

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Entente and neutral diplomats here believe that Germany is paving the way for real definite peace proposals in the next two months— so much more liberal than any to date that they must be seriously considered by the allies. At present the German propaganda is designed to create a peace "atmosphere," they say, so that when the real offer comes the world may be in a more recipient mood than before. But diplomats join with the American leaders in saying emphatically that from all indications the offer will not be broad enough to meet the prime requisite—the elimination of Germany's Kaiser-controlled militarism.

"Germany realizes as never before, that she is beaten," a high Entente diplomat said to-day. "Even the Russian peace she sought is proving an illusion. Teutonic arms have not attained a single significant victory in the past year. Russia's elimination cannot be credited to German arms, and the Italian offensive has proved an empty victory.

"With such a year back of them and overwhelming odds before them, the Central Powers can look forward to the coming year with nothing but apprehension. They cannot win, and the longer the fight is waged, the greater will be the price the loser must pay."

A CHANCE TO HELP GREAT WAR VETERANS

The canvass for the Great War Veterans' Club Rooms is now under way, and the public is urged to make a hearty response to the appeals of the Ladies' Auxiliary. The sum required is comparatively small—$2,000—and it will not require large subscriptions if the public generally will do their bit. Peterborough owes a deep debt to her veterans—a debt that cannot be estimated in terms of dollars and cents, and surely the appeal that is now being made will not fall on deaf ears. $2,000 will provide the Veterans with a comfortable, well-equipped headquarters, where they can carry on the good work they have been doing for the dependents of Peterborough soldiers. No soldier's family is without a friend as long as the G. W. V. A. is in existence, and the organization has already been the means of helping many deserving cases.

Be ready when the canvassers call.

NEW YEAR FINDS THE CANADIANS BACK BEFORE LENS

Maple Leaf Troops Are in Splendid Spirits and Find the Conditions Immeasurably Better Than on the Somme Last Year

HOLIDAY CELEBRATED

(By Walter A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent in Flanders.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Jan. 3.—The New Year finds the Canadians back in their old familiar positions before Lens. Indeed they have been there since the Passchendaele battles, but the censor would not permit the mention of their new location. Canada in France has never welcomed the New ear in better spirits or under better winter conditions. While biting winds have made the weather bitterly cold, the trenches and dug-outs here are in fine shape, particularly where we are occupying former enemy ground. I do not mean to minimize the hardships of the winter campaign, but the conditions are immeasurably better than on the Somme last year. The health of all ranks is good. Comparative quite prevails on this part of the line at present. Christmas and New Year's Day were celebrated with becoming festivities.

BIG PROGRAMME FOR CONGRESS

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.— Congress reconvened at noon to-day and adjourned until to-morrow, when a big war legislative programme will begin.

President Wilson is expected to outline the plan for government operation of railroads in an address to the joint session. Bills embodying the President's ideas already have been drafted and are ready for introduction in both houses at the conclusion of the address. Speedy action on the necessary legislation is looked for. Huge appropriation bills are in preparation for early action in the House, which also plans to consider the water power development this month. The House on Jan. 10th also will vote on the women's suffrage amendment.

MANY VISTORS AT THE Y.W.C.A.

"Open House," which was kept at the Y.W.C.A. on New Year's Day, proved a great attraction to many of the young people in the city who were unable to return to their homes.

The reception room, which was tastefully decorated, was a busy centre during the afternoon and evening. Dainty refreshments were served and a pleasing programme arranged by the Home girls, including, by special request, two recitations from "Il Trovatore," by Miss Winnifred Parker.

Home Filled.

With the re-opening of the Public and Normal Schools, the Y.W.C.A. is at present filled, sixty-eight boarders being accommodated.

SEVEN YEARS IN PENITENTIARY FOR THIS BIGAMIST

Frederick Webster Was Married Three Times in Toronto, Belleville and Peterborough—Wives Living

PLEADED GUILTY

Frederick Webster, who pleaded guilty in police court this morning to two charges of bigamy was sentenced to seven years in Kingston penitentiary. This was the maximum penalty for a first offence and was doubtless invoked by the sheer callousness of the prisoner. He was last married here in November, having come from Belleville, where he was married in July. Webster's first marriage took place in Toronto, a fact he himself revealed when he obtained the official records as proof that he was not eligible in the unmarried class for military service. Thus, two of his marriages were only four months apart.

Webster is the individual who, when he came to Peterborough, evidently from Belleville, last summer, applied to Chief Thompson for a position as a detective. When the Chief recently received an inquiry from the wife in Belleville, whose desertion had aroused suspicions of her absent spouse, he sent for Webster, who was working here, and charged him with being a defaulter under the Military Service Act. Webster was no Sherlock Holmes. Trusting women were his victims. In Chief Thompson's hands he was an easy dupe. He protested that he was married, and without a suspicion that he was uncovering evidence against himself he got the records of his marriage in Toronto in 1912, and was uneasy until he had placed them in the Chief's hands.

Webster's Peterborough wedding was an after discovery.

Through his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, he pleaded guilty to two separate charges. Magistrate Dumble, by imposing the maxium penalty of seven years, incidentally emphasized the criminality of bigamy and particularly of the multiple marriages Webster held so lightly.

PRESENTATION TO MR. EVANS

Last evening the department heads of the De Laval Company, Limited, met in Mr. Breyfogle's office to make an address and presentation to Mr. G. A. Evans, who has been in charge of the special centrifugal department of the plant here, but who is leaving Peterborough to reside in New York City, to be still with the De Laval Company. Mr. C. D. Cook was the spokesman on the occasion.

While in Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. Evans have made many friends, who will regret their removal from the city.

CAPTURED GUNS USED IN MAKING VICTORIA CROSSES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The War Office is finding it difficult to get enough suitable metal for the manufacture of medals.

It is one of the traditions that the medals should be made of the guns captured from the enemy. But nowadays the guns are not made of the right kind of metal for this purpose. The Canadians were asked to-day to turn over a certain bronze gun recently captured for the manufacture of Victoria Crosses.

WAS KICKED BY A HORSE

Omemee, January 3. — Mr. Harry Crossy met with a painful accident on Saturday night, when he was kicked in the head by a horse, the blow breaking his jaw.

THE WEATHER

For the eighth morning in succession the thermometer was again below zero, this time to the extent of 13 degrees. During the month of December there were temperatures below zero on 13 days, and very close to the zero mark on 7 other days. It is said on the authority of the Toronto Observatory that last December was the coldest December in 50 years. Locally, it is seldom we have more than two or three zero days in December, and occasionally none, but the above figures speak for themselves as to the severity of the present winter.—W.P.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JAN. 3, 1918

WELCOME HOME.

Major Canon Davidson will be welcomed home from overseas, not only by the members of his congregation and parish, but generally by the citizens to whom in his long residence and work in Peterborough, his relations as a clergyman and man have been such as won recogntion of a broad discharge of the duties of citizenship apart from the duties of his sacred office. The people of Peterborough who know of the manner he entered into the life around him, sympathetic and cooperative in his relations to the ministers and work of other communions; of the interest he took in the promoting of every good matter of civic concern; of the deeds of kindness that were a large part of his life, can understand and appreciate the zeal, efficiency and self-sacrifice of his service and ministrations to thousands of sick and wounded soldiers, that he has cheered and comforted during his nearly two years of arduous and unremitting work, undaunted by hardship, and even danger. And none more than himself and the soldiers he left behind him, regrets the necessity of his retiring from war work to answer the call of home duty in his clerical capacity. We are sure all citizens, and, especially, all good citizens, will join in The Examiner's hearty welcome home to Rev. Canon Davidson.

The colder the weather, the greater need for warm hearts.

HELP HALIFAX!

If, in Peterborough, under fairly normal conditions, a period of intense cold produces discomfort and suffering, where the people, as a rule, are comfortably housed and income and food supplies are largely as usual, what must be the acuteness and spread of suffering in devastated Halifax? With thousands of homeless, with all their domestic and personal belongings destroyed, without means to buy goods, without adequate shelter or clothing, the condition of destitution must be unspeakable. A large number of persons have been blinded and their wage-earning powers are gone, while their families have suffered the loss of almost all their possessions, their are thousands of widows and orphans, without protectors or bread-winners.

These conditions not only appeal to our people as individuals, with a duty to their suffering fellow citizens, but it opens the broader view of national responsibility; of government responsibility. The Halifax disaster is to be regarded as a result of the war more or less directly. Canada has not shirked any war duty; and looking after the sufferers of the Halifax catastrophe, becomes as much a national duty, as looking after the soldiers who have suffered in more direct conflict. The burden might well be borne by the country together with the other burdens of the war. Halifax is our oldest city, and, as the sea gate-way of the country, with its strategic importance, in commercial, naval, as well as military naval service, should have its great possibilities the object of development by national means. This involves adequate attention to the needs of its population and the material upbuilding of the city.

The government, through Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine, announces that the Naval College, removed to Kingston at the time of the disaster, would be restored to Halifax, and suitable buildings erected for its accommodation; and other necessary military buildings as well erected to take care of between fourteen thousand and seventeen thousand men who must soon be brought back from overseas. The government also seems to have in contemplation the establishment at Halifax of a steel shipbuilding plant. It is hoped these are the preliminary steps to the government taking national responsibility in reference to a general reparative policy in respect of the conditions created at Halifax. National approval will attend the adoption of a national policy of assuming the heavy burdens of Halifax, and helping restore the appalling losses and relieve the poignant suffering of our sea-side fellow Canadians.

There are estimated to be 600,000 unmarried men in Canada between the ages of 20 and 34, and there should be no difficulty in getting 100,000 into khaki.

ELECTION RESULTS.

One of the most gratifying results of the voting on Tuesday was the sweeping majority given to the De Laval transfer bylaw. It shows that the city maintains its generous and appreciative attitude towards the industries that have chosen Peterborough for a home—an appreciation of the capital importance of manufacturing establishments as an element in prosperous growth. The De Laval Company has done well by Peterborough; and the citizens have handsomely returned the compliment.

Contrary to the expectations of many, the electors voted to give themselves a vote for every alderman on the Council Board. Whether or not this will result in better representation is to be seen. The best recommendation for the change is the success of the general vote in giving the Board of Education a high standard of membership, both in character and ability, such as has obtained in the past and to which this year's addition is no exception.

In regard to the City Council of this year, there is no new blood; all of the newly elected members having been former representatives of part of the people; for, being elected by the ward system, no one member of the council, except the Mayor, represents, through the medium of the ballot, the whole body of the electorate.

However, the council is the de jure, if not the facto business agent of Peterborough for the coming year, and it is hoped that it will measure up to the important responsibility that confronts it. Many important civic problems present themselves. As we have done from year to year, we expect better things—that the new Council, or the old Council in a new form, will measure up to its responsibilities.

If there is disappointment, it will only be history repeating itself—evidence added to the experience of the past that justifies a pertinent inquiry, whether the present system of civic government, with the councils we have from year to year, whether elected at large or by the ward system, yielded the results of economy and effectiveness of civic administration such as the experience of other cities, has shown comes from civic government by commission. It is natural that a commission composed of three or four trained business men, paid to give their whole time and ability to city administration, would be cheaper in the outcome, than a dozen men, mostly without adequate business training or ability; with limited time at their disposal, who give their services for nothing. We can't expect citizens, working mostly for glory to sacrifice themselves for the public benefit—it's the ratepayers as a rule and as results go, or have gone in the past, that do the sacrificing.

It is a consolation to defeated candidates that Tuesday was a cold day for successful candidates, too.

ORGANISE PRODUCTION.

It is stated that the United States government is sending fifteen hundred tractor ploughs to France to help the work of increasing the French crop yield. This action evidences the conviction of the United States that one of the chief factors in Allied victory is adequate food supply. We are beginning to realise that more and more in Canada, but not yet to the point where we are taking the necessary action to promote the greatest possible food production in this country.

It is justifiable to assume that food is as necessary as money, and even more so; for money without food supply to make money effective in helping war work is useless. We have shown our ability through the Victory Loan to provide money, and we achieved the success of the loan by splendid organisation and publicity. If the Government would tackle the food production problem with the same earnestness, thoroughness, system and organisation that was applied to the Victory Loan campaign, we should have such a popular awakening to the necessity of greater food production that the people would not only co-operate with the Government, but compel the Government by the force of public opinion to take effective measures for organisation. The Government has the authority, the means, the official machinery to organise a specific programme of production. The Government should provide the necessary actual machinery to "speed the plough" by providing tractors for universal use. It should provide organised labour units. It should provide farm battalions, under military discipline and military control. If figures quoted are reliable, we have 600,000 young men between 20 and 34 to furnish by selection the 100,000 soldiers Canada proposes to add to her former quota. There should be found sufficient men to equip a formidable Canadian agricultural army. The details of such an organisation would, of course, be left to the authorities; but there should be no neglect by the Government to launch a greater production campaign, and by the use of similar means found so effective in the Victory Loan campaign, arouse, incite, stimulate public interest to the point of realisation of the fact that the one great, the one supreme need of the Allies in this great struggle is food, more food, and still more food. Having thus brought the country to a sense of the necessity of devoting our greatest energy to food production, the Government could count upon universal co-operation with the Government that provided the means of systematising and co-ordinating the national effort, to the end of securing the greatest results.

It would take a machine for liquifying oxygen to condense the Russian situation into a paragraph.

WILLIAM TELL.

He Split Apple on Son's Head With Arrow at 100 Paces.

Switzerland is a republic, and the men who live among its mountains are a brave, free people. But long ago the Emperor of Austria claimed the land as a part of his empire, and sent a man named Gessler to rule the people in his stead.

Gessler was a tyrant, writes Horace E. Scudder, in his "Book of Legends." He wished to stand well with his master, the Emperor, and he ruled the bold Swiss with a rod of iron. He had soldiers at his command, and he seemed able to do whatever he wished, but there was one thing he could not do; he could not make the proud people bow down to him when he came among them.

He was angry enough at this, and he cast about for some new way in which to make them feel his power. In those days, as now, every town had a public square, called a marketplace. Here the people flocked to buy and sell of each other. The men and women came down from the mountains with game and cheese and butter; they sold these things in the market, and bought goods which they could not make or grow in their mountain homes.

In the market-place of Altorf, a little town, Gessler set up a tall pole, like a liberty pole. But on the top of this pole he placed his hat, and, just as in the city a gilt crown on some high point was the sign of the Emperor's power, so this hat was to be the sign of Gessler's power. He bade that every Swiss man, woman, or child who passed by the pole should bow to the hat. In this way they were to show their respect for him.

From one of the mountain homes near Altorf there came into the market-place one day a tall, strong man named William Tell. He was a famous archer, for it was in the days before the mountaineers carried guns. He had with him his little son, and they walked across the market-place. But, when they passed the pole, Tell never bent his head; he stood as straight as a mountain pine.

There were servants and spies of Gessler in the market-place, and they at once told the tyrant how Tell had defied him. Gessler commanded the Swiss to be brought before him, and he came, leading by the hand his little son.

"They tell me you shoot well," said the tyrant. "You shall not be punished. Instead, you shall give a sign of your skill. Your boy is no doubt made of the same stuff you are. Let him stand yonder, a hundred paces off. Place an apple on his head, and do you stand here and pierce the apple with an arrow from your quiver."

Tell looked Gessler full in the face, and drew two arrows from his quiver.

"Go yonder," he said to the lad, and he saw him led away by two servants of Gessler, who paced a hundred steps, and then placed an apple on the boy's head. They had some pity for Tell in their hearts, and so they had made the boy stand with his back to his father.

"Face this way," rang out Tell's clear voice, and the boy, quick to obey, turned and stood facing his father. He stood erect, his arms hanging straight by his side, his head held up, and the apple poised on it. He saw Tell string his bow, bend it, to try if it were true, fit the notch of the arrow into the taut cord, bring the bow slowly to place.

The next moment a great shout rose from the crowd. The arrow had split the apple in two and had sped beyond.

Sell Girls to Save Them.

The lot of the Chinese boy is supposed to be much brighter than that of his sister, but in time of famine it is the daughter of the household who frequently fares best; for parents find it both expedient and humane to sell the girls, not only for the sake of the purchase money, but because they know the buyers will not allow his newly acquired slave to die of hunger, says the National Geographic Magazine. In the four great famines of 1810, 1811, 1846, and 1849 the death toll is estimated to have been 45,000,000 Chinese. During three years of dearth, from 1875 to 1878, 9,000,000 perished in the "Garden of China," an area about the size of France.—Detroit Free Press.

Morocco's Ex-Ruler Visits France

After the Proclamation of the French Protectorate over Morocco it was considered desirable that the abdicating Sultan should remove himself for a time from the country. At Gibraltar, on his way to France, he met the correspondent of The London Times on his way to England, and, forgetting former strained relations, insisted that the correspondent should accompany him as a member of his suite. Otherwise he threatened to claim British protection.

The ex-Sultan, always in semi-State, traveled to Vichy, accompanied by his large suite of Europeans and natives. Here a villa, which formed an annex to the well-known Hotel Majestic, was placed at his disposal. His Majesty was an early riser, and sometimes he would take an early morning promenade in the gardens and streets of the town. On one of these occasions he bought a little mongrel puppy, which an itinerant dog-seller was hawking at the end of a string. Returning to his villa with his purchase the antics of the little puppy so amused the ex-Sultan that he called in his slaves and ordered them to disperse over the town and buy him dogs. One of the dusky servitors ventured to ask how he was to know which dogs were for sale. The Sultan, fresh from his experience of purchasing the puppy, replied that every dog at the end of a string was for sale. As, of course, none of the slaves spoke anything but Arabic, they were ordered to bring dogs and sellers alike to the villa, where the bargains would be completed.

Now, the municipal authorities of Vichy had recently issued an order that all dogs were either to be led or muzzled, so when the fashionable world went out to drink its early morning waters at least half of the ladies had little dogs at the end of a string.

The correspondent of The London Times was at breakfast when he was hurriedly summoned to the villa. At an open window on the ground floor, sitting cross-legged on an armchair, was his Majesty looking down with a puzzled expression upon the little garden, crowded with excited ladies and little dogs. Some were in tears, others wore expressions of interested curiosity, and a few were evidently trying to look their best, for, no social distinctions had been recognised by the slaves who had "rounded them up" in the promenades of Vichy.

The situation was evident—and acute. The correspondent explained it to the ex-Sultan, who politely apologised for having disturbed the ladies early walks, but still insisted, without success, in trying to buy the dogs. It required all the correspondent's tact and diplomacy to put an end to a difficult situation and to restore equanimity to the indignant ladies.

The ex-Sultan's purchases were often embarrassing. One evening at sunset he visited a farm a few miles from the town and insisted upon going all over it. In an enclosure were collected from 20 to 30 fine specimens of the beautiful white cattle for which this part of France is so justly famous. The ex-Sultan decided to buy the lot, and gave the farmer his card, saying, "Send them to-night to this address."

Now, the address he gave was the Hotel Majestic, the most fashionable and magnificent of Vichy's palaces. About 11 o'clock that night, when life at the hotel was at its height, the manager sought the correspondent and announced the unexpected arrival of 27 enormous cows in the courtyard of the hotel. And there, sure enough, meandering in and out of smart motor-cars, lowing gently into the ground-floor windows, were the ex-Sultan's latest purchases.

The first few days of the ex-Sultan's visit were wet and cloudy, but one morning the August sun asserted itself with uncompromising efficiency. The villa, reception rooms faced south-east, and by 8 o'clock in the morning were insufferably hot, for the Sultan refused to close the outside shutters, as he liked to see and to be seen. Half an hour later he decided to change his quarters. On the opposite side of the road was a charming villa, in the deepest shade, with a balcony on the first floor wreathed in flowering creepers. Ordering his slaves to follow him the ex-Sultan strode across the road, entered the villa, and found his way to the upstair room with the balcony. It was gorgeous but empty. An immense bed, which had evidently been slept in, stood with its head against the wall. A word from his Majesty and the bed was wheeled by the slaves into the window, which opened on to the balcony, and, arranging the silk quilt and lace-fringed pillows, the ex-Sultan seated himself cross-legged, gazing down into the street below.

Now the Russian lady of title who had occupied the bed had retired a few moments previously into her adjacent cabinet de toilette to take her morning bath. Her ablutions completed, but not clad for a reception, she entered her room to find a dusky Oriental potentate, with his still more dusky slaves, in possession. The ex-Sultan's politeness was extreme. He bade her welcome, and invited her to sit down beside him.

An overflowing sense of humor on the part of the lady saved a situation which might otherwise have been embarrassing, and when the correspondent, hastily summoned, arrived, the lady, now more suitably arrayed, and her husband were thoroughly enjoying the novelty of the situation.

Breaking It Gently.

A JUMBLE OF LETTERS.

Bessarabian Town Has a Name Spelled Six Different Ways.

Only a few miles east of the Austro-Russian boundary line, on the right bank of the Dniester, along which the Austro-German armies were advancing in the direction of Odessa, is the Bessarabian town of Chotin which enjoys the perplexing distinction of having six correct ways of spelling its name—Chotin, Khotin, Khochim, Chocsim, Chocim, and Khoteen.

Chotin had a population of 20,000 at the beginning of the world war and was a manufacturing center of secondary importance, its chief industries being breweries, leather works, candle, shoe, and brick factories. It is not as a commercial or manufacturing city, however, that Chotin deserves a place in history, but as a strong military post, controlling one of the most frequented passages of the upper Dniester.

For more than two centuries the lides of conflict between Poles and Turks, Austrians and Turks, Austrians and Russians, and Russians and Turks swirled and eddied about this town. It was here in 1621 that the grand hetman, Chodkiewicz, one of the greatest soldiers the Polish nation ever produced, fought his last great battle. With a small army he entrenched himself at Chotin and withstood 180,000 Turks under the personal command of the Sultan Osman until the snow forced the invaders to retire. The victory was dearly bought, however, for a few days after the enemy raised the siege Chodkiewicz died in the fortress, as a result of exposure.

More than a century later (1739) Chotin was again the scene of a triumph over the Turks, this time the Moslems' opponents being a Russian army under Count Munnich, famous in Slavic military annals as the founder of the cadet corps from which future Russian armies were to secure their trained officers. It was at this battle of Chotin that Munnich had among his subordinates two young Austrians who a few years later were to become noted field marshals in the service of Maria Theresa—Ernst Gideon Loudon, who was to defeat Frederick the Great on several important battlefields, and Franz Moritz Lacy, who with Daun played a Fabian game against the Prussian king. The name of Munnich is still revered by Russian soldiers and the 37th dragoons bear his name.

Chotin was captured by the Russians in 1769, by the Austrians in 1788, and re-occupied by the Russians in 1806. It finally passed to the latter nation with the rest of Bessarabia by the peace of Bucharest in 1812. Among the ancient landmarks still standing in Chotin at the outbreak of the present war was a crumbling Italian fort, memento of the days when the Genoese had a colony and trading post here.

Russian Salt.

About 51 per cent. of the salt produced in Russia is from lakes, 23 per cent. being obtained by evaporating brine pumped up from boreholes, and 26 per cent. by mining beds of rock salt.

Button From Japan.

Japan is supplying this country with some of the buttons used here, and which formerly were provided by Germany and Austria. The value of the Japanese shipments of buttons was trebled in three years.

Had Liquor In His Tent

Moses Marsten Kept It There Over Night But Case Was Dismissed

Before His Worship O. A. Langley, the County Police Magistrate, Moses Marsten was charged with having liquor in a place other than a private dwelling. Yesterday morning the case came up for hearing before His Worship, and it appears that Marsten, who is a half-breed, had imported liquor from Montreal, and had it shipped to Indian River. He got the shipment at the station on Friday, the 6th December last, took it to a tent where he in company with two others were hunting, and kept it there over night. In the morning he carried the liquor to his home at Alderville, near the Indian reserve.

The charge was dismissed after hearing evidence of Inspector Stewart and the accused.

Mr. Hatton, the Crown Attorney, prosecuted, and Mr. J. A. O'Brien, of the firm of Gordon, Widdifield & O'Brien, appeared for the accused.

Never forget, in these times of economy, that it is safer to pay the provisioner than the doctor.

TOO BUSY NOW FIGHTING KAISER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, Jan. 3.— Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight pugilistic champion, is too busy at his job of fighting the Kaiser to heed any "challenges" by Jess Willard, the world's heavyweight champion, for as small a thing as a mere fight in the squared circle.

"Just as soon as the Kaiser is knocked out," the famous French fighter told the United Press, "I'm willing to take up Willard's challenge. Until that time I'm going to be too busy fighting him to entertain any other ideas about fighting."

Carpentier is now a pilot aviator in the French Flying Corps. He was in Paris to-day on a brief period of leave from the front.

LUXBURG IS INSANE

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Charles P. Stewart.)

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 3. — Count Luxburg, German envoy of fame, is now insane and has been "eccentric" for a decade, according to the report to-day of the medical authorities who have had him under observation. The finding was after prolonged and careful study of the German minister, now held in an internment camp, by a number of reliable medical authorities. The report stated their information was that Luxburg has been acting queerly for a number of years.

FAILS TO DIVIDE BELGIANS.

German Propaganda is Rejected by Walloon and Flemish Prisoners.

Further evidence of the campaign being steadily waged by the German Government for the purpose of trying to divide the inhabitants of occupied Belgium into two hostile camps, of Flemings and Walloons, is afforded by a circular entitled, "German Politics in the Camps for Belgian Prisoners of War," just made public by the Rev. J. F. Stilleman, Director of the Belgian Bureau.

One feature of the circular is the photographic reproduction of the front pages of two camp papers published for the Belgian prisoners at Gottingen by the German authorities and edited by Dr. Karl Stange, Professor of Theology at the University of Gottingen, and Dr. Konrad Beyerle, Professor of Law at the same university. One of these publications is called Onze Tool (Our Language), and announces that it is a "weekly paper for the Flemish-speaking prisoners of war," while the other is printed in French and is called Le Camp de Gottingen.

The first page of Onze Taal is filled with a eulogistic account of the political activities of Prince Bismarck, in which great emphasis is laid upon the assertion that the Iron Chancellor always opposed the forcible extension of German rule over non-German territory. Le Camp de Gottingen devotes considerable space to an account of the alleged ideal life of the German university students. In commenting upon the Germans' efforts to create dissension among the Belgians, the circular says:

"As they have separated the Irish from the English, so the Germans have tried to separate the Walloons from the Flemings. At the beginning of 1915 the authorities of the camp of Soltau invited the Belgian prisoners to register on two lists, either as Flemings or Walloons. They refused unanimously, and replied: 'We are all Belgians.' The Germans then distributed cards, on which, among other information, each prisoner had to give his birthplace. By these cards a list was made out of all the Flemings, and it was suggested to them that if they asked they might go to the camp of Gottingen, where they would be granted special favours. Among about 4,000 men 14 accepted. The others preferred to share the miseries of their Walloon compatriots.

"The commandant of the Gottingen camp then came to Soltau to speak to the prisoners. He told them that he had lived ten years in Brussels and loved the Belgians. He made splendid promises to them. But he made them in vain.

"Seeing that the Flemings shunned their promises, the Germans decided to impose their benefits by force. In the middle of July, 200 Flemings were sent to Gottingen, and on 1st August all the rest were obliged to join them."

SEES BRITAIN CLOGGED BY TRADE COMMITTEES

War Has Brought Multiplicity of Bodies, Twenty-five Alone Affecting Shipping.

Under the caption, "The Plague of Committees," The London Economist criticises very severely the creation of countless committees and commissions in England since the outbreak of the war for dealing with various matters affecting trade. In response to numerous requests, the Board of Trade Intelligence Department has published a list of "some" of the Ministries, commissions, committees, &c. It comprises approximately 140 committees, six commissions, four Ministries, sixteen departments, three advisory boards, three ordinary boards, two executives; two penal, one registry, one Commissioner, and one Clearing House. In regard to shipping alone there are about twenty-five communities. The Economist points out that there are entirely too many committees and that a much smaller number would be in a position to do more efficient work.

"To any one who goes carefully through this list of Government committees," it says, "it will be perfectly obvious that perhaps one-fourth the number would have sufficed if a system of sub-committees had been properly evolved, and adopted. It would be less ridiculous if these various bodies were to some extent co-ordinated and under the control of a central authority; but this is very far from the case. It may almost be said that each is a law unto itself, and under the Defence of the Realm act each man may have very wide and independent powers. The conflicting orders and rules, the confusion, the redundancy, the overlapping, the waste of time, energy and money, and the delay in getting things done and settled must be perfectly appalling."

BELGIAN TEA $22 PER POUND

The Belgian Relief Fund (Ontario Branch) reports for the week ending December 28, $2,575.79, making a total to date of $125,331.11.

The following extract from a letter written to a Montreal correspondent from a Presbyterian minister, who, for many years before the war and forty months since it began has been in charge of a mission in Brussels and who has recently reached Switzerland will show the desperate need and suffering existing in Belgium at the present time; "To think of the coming winter makes one shudder. Famine, cold and despair are slowly breaking down the admirable fortitude of our people. Food is constantly diminishing in quantity and augmenting in price, and the poor people live on bread and the few vegetables they can grow.

"All other eatables are too expensive: Butter, $6 per pound; flour, $4 per pound; eggs, $2.50 a dozen; tea, $22 per pound. Clothes are not only ruinous to buy, but every Belgian home is systematically pillaged by the German authorities for every available bit of cotton, linen or wool, every bit of metal, especially brass, even the handles of the pianos being torn off. Soap costs two dollars a cake. Coal and fuel of any kind seems now entirely out of the question, except for the very rich.

"Forced labour, deportations to Germany, fines, imprisonment, cruel punishments, all this has caused a silent rage, which makes it hard for some of our people to practice the gospel of forgiveness. It is the rule of the Duke of Alva and of Philip of Spain, and even worse in some respects."

ONE WAY OF CURING COSTLY POKER HABIT

JACK HENDRICKS' STORY OF HOW A "ROOKIE" PASSED UP THE PASTEBOARDS.

Jack Hendricks, manager of Indianapolis in the American Association, tells about a rookie he had on his team who was cured of playing poker.

According to Jack, the rookie had $5 on his person when he lit into Indianapolis, and decided that he would either run that fiver into something worth while or go broke. Accordingly he hunted up a poker game and was soon sitting in. Somehow, the other fellows managed to get everything they needed to fill while the rookie could get nothing more than two of a kind.

He gamely stuck with the game, and was stuck until he had been trimmed of $4.30 of his $5. He then picked up the 70 cents that he had left, and threw it out of the window.

"There's 70 cents you guys won't get, anyway," he said as he pulled his hat down over his shoulders, and slouched out.

And that was his last card game. ynnthetaoin

Labour Council Grateful To Citizens For Supporting By-law

Annual Election of Officers Will Be Held on January 16 and All Delegates of Unions Are Urged to Be Present.

Expressions of satisfaction over the passing of the by-law to elect aldermen by a general vote were voiced at the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council last night. The delegates from the Unions were particularly gratified with the support the by-law received from the ratepayers as a whole, and the Council's appreciation of this sentiment was recorded in a resolution thanking the citizens for their endorsation of the by-law.

At the next regular meeting on Wednesday, January 16th, the annual election of officers will be held. Every Union is urged to be represented by all its delegates in order that the new year may be begun auspiciously.

In the near future a member of the Board of Education will be asked to address the Council on educational matters. A brief discussion last night brought out the fact that some of the Labour men were not sure of the regulations regarding the payment of fees by children entering the Collegiate Institute and the Normal school. To obtain definite information of this question, also of the plans for technical schools it was decided to request the Board to appoint a representative to address the Council on the general subject of educational facilities in Peterborough.

IMPORTANT SOCIAL REFORM IN ITALY

GREAT EFFORTS OF GOVERNMENT TO ENCOURAGE TILLING OF LAND.

Rome, Jan. 3.—One of the most important steps in the history of social reform has been taken in Italy. The government has been granted full powers for the requisition and distribution among the people of all the available land for utilization in agricultural works. Tools and implements will be given, together with all the necessary manure and chemical products (such as fertilizers) to those to whom the land is assigned.

Proper instructions will also be given in order to have the right kind of culture for the different kinds of land. The distribution is gratuitous, and all expenses will be paid for by the government till the land becomes profitablbe.

Another important step has been taken whereby the whole of the civil population is requisitioned for the purposes of war. The civilian mobilization will be the result of this step.

SAYS UNITED STATES MUST PREPARE FOR A WAR UNTIL 1920

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Thomas W. Lamont, a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., has returned to his office after an extended trip abroad, during which he visited the battle front. He declined to discuss conditions except in the most general way. He said:

"On the other side there is great satisfaction at the vigour with which America has taken hold. But even so, some doubt is expressed whether we yet fully realize the gigantic nature of the task ahead of us. Many here seem to have had the impression that, by the mere fact of our coming into the war, the early defeat of Germany became assured. One does not have to cross the ocean to realize that that is a delusion. No one can maintain that victory is close at hand. But it will soon be in sight if we once realize that we must now prepare, not only for 1918 but for the campaigns of 1919 and 1920.

"Great Britain and France have had three and a half years of cruel, grinding war. They have welcomed America's entry, not simply because of her great resources in men and food, and munitions, but also because of the fresh viewpoint she is likely to bring to bear in the whole conduct of the war. This applies not only to military operations, but also in considerable measure to allied diplomacy.

"President Wilson is looked upon as having displayed great wisdom in choosing the time and manner of America's coming into the struggle, and our Allies across the water welcome with confidence his opinion upon all the great problems that confront the allied nations. His recommendation of war against Austria-Hungary, promptly followed by the declaration of it by Congress, had a most heartening effect upon Italy and has certainly been one of the factors to stimulate and strengthen her recent military movements. You also hear it constantly repeated abroad that President Wilson will do much to bring about that closer unity of action that all the allied statesmen are agreed is necessary for the more vigorous prosecution of the war.

"As to the work of the American mission, the people and the press in both London and Paris expressed the greatest appreciation of the spirit shown and the ground covered by Colonel House and his colleagues."

KITCHENER LEAGUE IS THANKED

Peterboro' Boys Appreciate the Gift of Comforts

The following letters have been received by members of the Canadian Kitchener League from Peterborough soldiers in France:

Somewhere in France, Dec. 6.

Dear Mrs. Gere,—On opening the parcel of socks and cigarettes sent to me by the Can. Kitchener League, I found a note from you saying that you hoped the contents would be of some comfort to us boys in the trenches. I can assure you they were, and it is also a comfort to know and feel that we are still in your thoughts.

I can assure you that any parcels received by any of the boys out here in the trenches caused almost as much excitement as would a "whizz-bang" from Fritz. The only difference is that the boys scatter from the one, and gather together with the expression of appreciation for the other.

We all wish you a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Thanking you again for the comforts, I am—

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. Stocker, Weller street:

Dear Lady—I am just writing a few lines to you on behalf of the boys for sending them socks, and I was pleased to give them out to them, and I will be pleased to get some more from you. We need them out here. I will send you some cards when I get them from France, and I will close and wish you a happy Christmas and a happy New Year and many of them. From—

Churches Are Conserving Coal In Other Cities

Similar Steps May Have to Be Adopted in Peterboro'—Situation is Anything But Good

While the coal situation in Peterborough is not as acute as it is in many other places in Ontario, it is bad enough to warrant strict economy. In this connection it has frequently been asserted that many public institutions, such as churches, might well consider plans for limiting the consumption of coal throughout the week. It has been estimated that the churches in Peterborough consume each week between fifteen and twenty tons of fuel. At the same time it must be remembered that steam coal is used to heat the churches, so that any measure of economy would not effect the coal situation to a very large extent any more than it might help to lessen the strain on the transportation companies which after all is one of the real causes of the present coal shortage. There is a local demand for steam coal, as well as all other grades, and if the consumption of steam coal was reduced it would leave the way open to bring in larger supplies of stove and nut coal.

In Other Places.

The appended items are taken from a number that are appearing from time to time and which indicate the measures that are being adopted in other centres where coal is scarce.

Kingston, Jan. 3.—Mayor Hughes has arranged conferences with the coal dealers and the Ministerial Associations of the city. The dealers will state what Kingston's stock of coal is and suggest to the clergymen that about half the city churches be closed during the remainder of the winter in order to save fuel. Kingston is perhaps better supplied with coal than the majority of places in Canada.

Lindsay, Jan. 3.—That the gravity of the fuel situation ies realized by the official board of the Baptist church has been demonstrated in a practical way. On Sunday last the board decided to hold church services during the coming winter in the lecture room of Sunday school room, and close the auditorium of the church during the winter months.

The wise move made by the Baptists should be followed, if possible, by other denominations in town, and in this manner tons of coal could be saved.

REFERENCE TO LATE JOHN YOUNG

Resolution of Regret Passed by Township Council

At the municipal nominations for Ennismore on Tuesday, occasion was taken to refer to the great loss the township had sustained in the death of Mr. John Young, reeve of the township.

On motion Clerk Moloney was instructed to send the folowing letter to Mr. Young's widow and family:

Ennismore, Dec. 31, 1917.

Mrs. John Young, Ennismore, Ont.

Dear Madam,—We, the members of the Council, and the Municipal Officers of Ennismore Township wish to extend to you and your bereaved family the fulest sympathy we feel for the loss you have sustained in the death of Mr. Young. As he was a life-long resident of our township we know what a loving husband and kind father he was and therefore we can speak of him only in the highest praise. We respect him for his diligence in work, for his marked success as a farmer in our community, and for his honesty in all his business dealings with the public. But above all, we, who have been intimate with him in municipal matters respect him for his staunch friendship to our township, for his unfailing efforts to give the people reason to have confidence in him and for the many benefits the municipality has derived since he held office as Reeve of our township. Aside from our local affairs Mr. Young also had our interests at heart when he attended the sessions of the County Council during the different years when he held the chair as our esteemed reeve. Hence we feel that by his death we have lost a staunch friend, a true adviser and a worthy leader in our municipal affairs.

We hope that these few words will help to convey to you our sorrow and regret for you and yous in this hour of trial and we trust that God in His goodness will give you strength to bear it well and nobly.

Patrick T. Crowley, Councillor,
Eugene Moloney, Councillor.
William Harrington, Councillor.
Clayton Telford, Councillor.
John Moloney, Clerk.
William F. Cavanagh, Assessor.

400 VISITORS TO REACH EVERY HOME IN CITY TO-MORROW

Peterboro Home Visitation Will Be Made To-morrow—Rev. E. V. Halpenny Who is Directing the Work Has Arrived in the City.

On December 9th a visitation made in one of the Townships in North Western Ontario discovered fifty-two children in one pocket of the territory absolutely out of reach of any Sunday School or privilege of religious instruction. Fear may be entertained that they did not get it in the home, since there was no one in the community sufficiently interested to start a Union School.

In the Toronto visitation, on November 25th, numerous cards of cards were turned in as follows:

Father and mother, and three children, ages 6, 3 and 2, no faith; no church relationship; attending nothing.

Another family, 2 children, 4 and 2 years of age; another father and mother, and children 9, 6, 5 and 3; absolutely no connection with any religious influence.

Another family, father and mother, and children, aged 14, 12, 8, 7 and 2. This family expressed a leaning as to faith, but absolutely no connection, nor attending any Church or Sunday School. They were eager in urging that someone should call upon them.

Another family expressed a desire to have some minister call. The family was comprised of father and mother, with five children, aged 10, 7, 5, 3 and 1. No connection whatever.

Such cases were too numerous to count.

Among the cards turned in were a multitude of peculiar expressions such as "We go where the music is best." Others preferred "to wait and think it over." It is interesting to note how long it takes them to think. Several expressed a wish for someone to call. Quite a number declared they did not believe in churches, and such have a perfect right to their convictions, providing they can give to the nation and their country the constructive life and influence they should furnish. One amusing gentleman expressed himself as "waiting for some man to call and argue with him." In another case, the family went to no church, and expressed no leaning, while one little girl went to a Sunday School, but did not know what its name was.

It is estimated that a large proportion of the population rarely ever attend any church. Surely such a condition is a sufficient calamity to bring war upon the earth.

The meeting for the instruction of the workers who have volunteered as visitors, is to be held in the old Charlotte Street Sunday School on Reid street, to-night, at 8 p.m. Rev. E. W. Halpenny, who is directing the Visitation, arrived in the city at noon to-day and will remain to see the Visitation through.

Police Find Many Homes Without Fires

Urgent appeals for coal are coming to be regarded as thost from homes where the fires are actually out. Some of the calls made at the Police Station to-day were apparently most deserving of immediate response. One family reported the last particle of coal burned and the house just placarded with scarlet fever; another woman stated that her husband was too ill to work and her son was confined to work and there was no coal nor wood in the house. Some of the policemen state that they have been in homes where there is absolutely no coal and no fire.

In passing, a word of commendation is due the employes of the Robert Hicks Company, especially the delivery men who have been through a prolonged siege of extra hours, work on holidays and often on Sundays, and who are carrying on in the present strenuous stage.

OLD HOTEL IS THREATENED

(Canadian Press Despatch).

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Jan. 3.—The International, one of the oldest hotels at the Falls, was threatened with destruction by fire which started at noon to-day. The building and contents were estimated to be worth $300,000. The hotel, formerly known as the Eagle Tavern, has history dating back to the early days of the nineteenth century.

"WHICH ONE SHALL I MARRY?"

Referring to the performance the London Free Press of Jany. 1 says:

BRIGHT DRAMA AT GRAND THEATRE.

Delighted Audience Witnesses Allegorical Play.

A Drama of All Time.

Splendid Cast Portrays Difficult Roles Perfectly.

"Which One Shall I Marry?" Ralph T. Kettering's delightful drama, opened a two days' engagement at the Grand Theatre last evening, and made a decidedly favourable impression.

The story is told in allegorical form and the young girl around whom the play is built is discovered at the "cross roads of life," where a mysterious character "Advice" meets her and endeavours to point out the successful future. She is sought in marriage by a rich man, the owner of a large steel works, and by a poor man, a labourer in the steel works. The former offers everything that money can buy, while the latter offers the greatest of all things—true love. It is then that the vital question is brought up, "Which One Shall I Marry?"

The play comprises three acts. The first and last acts form a complete play, while the second is arranged in four episodes of scenes, "Looking Into the Future," given in order to help decide the most vital and greatest question. The story begins in the rear of the young lady's home, where on bended knees she prays that her future life may be shown with both men. No sooner said than she is transported in to the "forest of doubt," and there she is lost. The rich man meets her and takes her to his home, where as his wife she is discontented and finally commits suicide. Her soul is wafted to the land of sham, in which purgatory she prays for her deliverance. She then finds herself in the "realms of reality," where sunshine is everywhere dominant. Here the poor man comes to her and leads her to his happy home. She is happy there, but has none of the things money can buy. Again she wonders if she has chosen correctly and finds herself once more in the "forest of doubt." Then reaching a decision she is discovered back in her own home—where she chooses the poor man who can offer her true love, from which she will derive joy and happiness.

The characters are all in capable hands. Agnes Moran, as the girl, is natural and sympathetic. Dollie Day, as Kitty Moran, is dainty and sweet. The comedy is in the hands of Ed. Brennan and Lottie Emmons, who have many bright lines to say, and say them so smartly that the parts "stand out." Walter Davis in the role of the poor man is manly and attractive, while E. H. Horner as the rich man gave a finished performance of a difficult part. "Good Advice," as portrayed by Lon Blanden, was one of the gems of the play. Billy Billingsley, in a light comedy role, was excellent.

North Monaghan Council

TO THE ELECTORS:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Having been nominated again as a candidate for Councillor of North Monaghan, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and if elected will use my very best endeavours in furthering the interests of the Township.

Yours Respectfully,

J. A. WILLIAMS

For Councillor

Having been nominated for Councillor for the township of North Monaghan and requested by a number of prominent ratepayers to seek election, they considering the western and rural section entitled to representation on the Legislative Assembly of this important township, I therefore solicit one vote for Councillor and the influence of the entire electors toward what I can to advance the interests of all sections.

Sincerely yours,

FRED. .E WILSON

Monaghan Elections

Peterborough, Ont.,
Jan. 2nd, 1918.

To the Ratepayers of North Monaghan.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

When I first entered the Municipal field in North Monaghan, I did so fully realising that the Township was the most difficult to handle in the County. It is very hard to get satisfactory results, for both Rural and Urban districts, when you have to work on statutes that are designed entirely for Rural Districts. The Rural part does not see nor understand the requirements of the Urban and neither does the Urban end understand the requirements of the Rural. I so it becomes the business of th Council to "Keep the Peace" between them, and endeavour to administer the affairs fairly and justly, giving to each faction its just dues. I think it can be taken as a fair criterion of the fairness of administration of last year's work, when at last Monday's nominations a ratepayer of the far end of the township publicly makes the statement that "they were well satisfied with the treatment they had received this year; in fact, they had received far more than they expected."

Thanking you, Ladies and Gentlemen, for your confidence and support in the past, and trusting you will be able on January the 7th to voice a continuance of your confidence in me by re-electing me to the office of Reeve of the Township.

I am, respectfully,

H. G. RYE.

Card of Thanks

TO THE ELECTORS OF WARD 5.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I desire to thank all those who supported me in the Aldermanic Contest in the East Ward, which resulted in my election.

With best wishes for the Year.

I beg to remain,

Yours faithfully,

A. WEIR.

Major H. D. St. A. Smith of the Canadian Engineers Awarded Coveted Honour in New Year's List—Second Peterboro' Officer to Get This Decoration

WAS TWICE PROMOTED

The New Year's list of honors granted to Canadians includes the name of a well known Peterboro boy, Major H. D. St. Alban Smith, of the Canadian Engineers, who has been granted the Distinguished Service Order. The news will be received with much pleasure by his many friends in the city. Major "Harry" Smith is well remembered by City League hockey fans, and by citizens generally. He is the son of Mr. A. St. A. Smith, of Toronto, formerly of Peterboro, and a nephew of Messrs. T. H. G. and Roland Denne. Major Smith went overseas with the 2nd Canadian Divisional Engineers as Lieut, and has been twice promoted, mentioned in despatches, and now has been awarded the D.S.O.

He is the second Peterboro officer to win this coveted honour, the other being Lieut.-Colonel Jack Fessenden.

Lieut. Harold Smith, a brother of Major Smith's, made the supreme sacrifice in France.

Yarn embroidery appears on satin. A great deal of black velvet is worn. Skirts are nicely straight and narrow. Fur is indispensable to the evening wrap.

Big Hotel In Flames

The Loss Will Reach $400,000—No Lives Lost

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner).

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Jan. 3. — The International Hotel, one of the oldest hostelries in Western New York, is burning. The city firemen have fifteen streams playing on the structure. The large dining room is already destroyed. None of the guests were injured. There was a rumour that the International and Cataract Hotel, which adjoins it, were to be used for government war hospitals.

The fire has gotten beyond the control of the city fire department and the entire National Hotel block is doomed. The loss will reach $400,000.

The firemen are fighting to save adjoining structures.

SERGT. SUTHERLAND HAS BEEN GASSED

Mrs. E. Sutherland, 282 Dalhousie street, has received a letter from her husband, Sergt. Ernest Sutherland, of the 32nd Battery, C.F.A., stating that he was gassed recently in France.

ROYAL PALACE IS DESTROYED

(Canadian Press Despatch).

MADRID, Jan. 3.—Fire destroyed the Royal Palace of La Granja, together with a big church in the vicinity. Irreplacable pictures and other historical works were destroyed. The damage will amount to several million. Nobody was hurt.

World Events And Prophecy Will Be Discussed At Local Conference, January 13th To 16th

The great events that have been taking place in Palestine, particularly the capture of Jerusalem and the announced intention of the British Government to restore Palestine to the Jews, have aroused great interest among Christian people everywhere, who naturally feel that such events as these must have some special significance. The question is being asked by many if prophecy in the Scriptures throws any light on present-day events.

People interested in this subject will be interested to know that arrangements have been completed for the holding of a conference in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, to open Sunday, January 13th, and closing on Wednesday, January 16th, for the study of prophetic truth and topics relating to the deepening of the spiritual life. A number of well-known speakers from outside points will address the meetings, of which there will be two each day except Sunday. The services on Sunday, January 13th, will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Winchester, of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, who will also speak at the afternoon and evening meetings on Monday. Rev. Mr. Turnbull will speak twice on Monday and Tuesday, and Rev. Mr. Weston twice on Wednesday. Both are well-known Baptist clergymen of Toronto. Rev. Mr. F. W. Hollinrake, of Barton Street Methodist Church, Hamilton, will speak twice on Tuesday and twice on Wednesday.

While the subjects of all the addresses have not yet been arranged, it is understood that Rev. Mr. Weston, who has made a special study of prophecy in relation to the Jews, will speak on the two subjects, "Prophecy and the East" and "What God is now Doing," and that one of the addresses by Rev. Mr. Hollinrake will relate to the subject, "The Dispensation in which we live." He will also speak on "The Blessing of the Double Portion." The meetings will be undenominational in character and open to the public.

Compulsory Rationing For England

(Canadian Press Despatch).

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Compulsory rationing is to be put into effect in England soon, it was announced officially to-day.

Food Controller Baron Rhondda stated that a plan of rationing had been completed, and that it would be carried out as soon as the action of the Cabinet had been received.

Much difficulty has been experienced recently, chiefly among poorer classes, in obtaining supplies of some articles of food, but this has been due to faulty distribution rather than to lack of supplies.

British labour unions have made insistent demands for compulsory rationing, stating that the present system was unfair.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TO PLAY FIRST GAME IN LINDSAY ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team will play their first schedule game of the season to-morrow night in Lindsay, when they tackle the Midgets. The Lindsay aggregation is an unknown quantity, but from past experience they will have to be watched all the way, although it will be the O.H.A. debut for the majority of the team. The Petes will also introduce a number of new comers into big Association for the first time to-morrow night.

After last night's practice the following team was selected to represent the Petes at Lindsay:

Goal—Murray.
Right defence—McMahon.
Left defence—Hagerman.
Centre—Cherrett.
Right wing—Williams.
Left wing—Bartley.
Substitute—Gerard.
Spare—Park.

Murray, Cherrett and Bartley are the only regulars left from last year who are in the line-up. Of the rest of last year's bunch, McIntyre is with the Royal Flying Corps, Freddy Graham left last night to report for duty with the Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion, Frank Montgomery is in Sarnia, Frost is in Nepewa, and McFee is unable to play this year for business reasons. The result is that three of the line-up and the substitute for Friday night are new to the O. H. A. Hagerman and Williams starred last year for St. Luke's in the Church League.

The Petes will leave for Lindsay on the 5.30 G.T.R. train to-morrow night.

At a meeting of the players after the practice last night, Roy Cherrett was elected captain for the season.

TORONTOS WIN HARD GAME FROM OTTAWA

Ottawa, Jan. 2. — In one of the most brilliantly played hockey matches ever seen in the capital, the Torontos defeated Ottawa to-night by 6 goals to 5, and deserved the victory although their margin of play was not very great at any stage. The contest was replete in brilliant individual work, and in this respect the rival goaltenders were outstanding figures, both Sammy Hebert and Clint Benedict playing remarkable games.

The visitors were better balanced, and their play more consistent, and it is to this they owe victory. In the early stages of the play the teams showed remarkable equality, although throughout the first period Ottawa had a shade the better of the argument, and they scored the only goal just before time. In the second period the visitors started out like winners and had Ottawa on the defensive for six or seven minutes, during which time they scored two goals on good work by Mummery and Noble. Then Ottawa came to life, and when Darragh tied up the score they were going like whirlwinds. Cy. Denny put the Senators in the lead, and the period ended with the home team leading, 3 goals to 2.

The third period was Toronto's, Randall, Noble, Corbett, Denenny and Harry Cameron carrying the puck in long dashing rushes that kept Ottawa on the defensive for the greater portion of the time. Randall tied up the score in ten minutes, and the Toronto Denenny put his team in the lead. Shortly faterward the play became much rougher at this stage, and the visitors came more often under the eye of the officials. Mummery and Cameron paid visits to the penalty bench, but it made no difference —the team playing its margin of superiority. Meeking practically cinched the match for his team when he scored the eighth goal after thirteen minutes of play in the final period.

Harvey Pulford and Charlie McKinley of Ottawa, were the officials. Gerard, Shore and Crawford were the stars for the losers while all of the visitors shared in the honours of the victory.

The teams were:

Ottawa — Benedict, Gerard, Shore, Crawford, Cy Denenny and Daragh. Substitutes—Boucher and Lowery.

Toronto—Hebert, Mummery, Cameron, Corbett Denenny, Skinner, Noble. Substitutes—Randall, Meeking, Coughlin and Brooks.

Nine New Skips.

Nine of last year's vice-skips have been ranked as skips and are leading their rinks into the first games this week. The list follows: E. G. Patterson, Geo. Benor, Walter Oke, Jas. Metheral, George Boucher, E. L. Bowes, D. E. Eason, P. D. Fitzgerald and Jas. Skinner. W. J. Thompson is also skipping again.

Ice Too Hard.

Strange as it may seem to the multitude whose knowledge of ice has been confined to its slippery qualities, the recent weather has been altogether too keen. The rink hasn't been flooded in ten days for the reason that the ice would splinter on the surface, so brittle does the cold render it.

Mme. de Stael a Brilliant Woman

MADAME DE STAEL compels attention. Forceful and original in her personality, she divided Europe into admirers and detractors, while her feud with Napoleon added to the curiosity and interest which she aroused. Her commemorative year should be a matter of interest to all those countries which have banded themselves in the effort to extirpate tyranny, for no more ardent lover of liberty could well be found than Madame de Stael. Love of liberty was born and bred in her; for Germaine Necker, as she was before her marriage, was the daughter of a Protestant Genevese who, brought to Paris on financial affairs, had, by the advice of the most eminent men in France, been included in the councils of the king.

Necker's daughter, from an early age, listened in her mother's salon to the talk of liberty and reform which like the wind before the storm was blowing in gusts through the hothouse atmosphere of the ancient regime. As a precocious girl she imbibed that love of the conversation of the brilliant men and women of her milieu, the lack of which she deplored in London and in St. Petersburg, and for which she pined in the sylvan solitudes of Coppet, "la paix infernale" de Coppet she termed it. As the wife of the Swedish Ambassador in Paris, Madame de Stael enjoyed a position in society which she greatly raised by her ambition and ability. She made of her salon a meeting place for men of all political creeds, boasting that "on s'entend toujours a une certaine hauteur;" but it was a dangerous game to play, and Madame de Stael, as much in view as Marie Antionette herself, became, like the Queen of France, the butt of scurrilous lampoons, and unpopular with the public. She only left Paris at the last moment, in 1792. From Coppet she crosses to England, joining her friends, Narbonne, Talleyrand, and Montmorency, fleeing from the spleen of her own thoughts, and forming the center of that little coterie of emigres which found safety and a certain relative enjoyment at Juniper Hall, in the peaceful Surrey glades. This was an interlude in the eventful life of Madame de Stael. She described it as "four months of happiness saved from the shipwreck of life."

But the emigres of Juniper Hall had their distractions. Conversation was always possible, and was not Talleyrand of the party? Susy Burney, then Mrs. Philips, lifts a corner of the curtain at "Junipere," and shows the "Juniperiens" at their literary amusements. She is invited to dine and hear M. de Lally Tolendal read his "Mort de Strafford," but she is disappointed in him, there is nothing "disintique" in his manner; both in appearance and in wit he is far removed from the rest of the Juniperiens, in fact, as Talleyrand puts it, a "tres honnete garcon et rien de plus." On another evening Madame de Stael is very gay and M. de Talleyrand very "comique." He criticizes Madame de Stael's reading of prose with great sangfroid: "You read prose very badly; you have a kind of sing song, a cadence, a monotony, which is not at all good; one would think you were reading poetry, and it produces a very bad effect." They talked over a number of their friends and acquaintances with the utmost candor, and sometimes with the most comic humor imaginable—M. de Lally, M. de La Fayette, la Princess d'Henin, la Princesse de Poix.

Madame de Stael did not waste her time at Juniper, besides writing some portions of her book "Des Passions," the mistakes in the style of which Talleyrand amused himself by correcting, she was also gathering material for her "Considerations sur les principaux evenments de la Revolution francaise," which, among other things apparently foreign to the French Revolution, contained the chapter on the English constitution and society. Apart from the grateful recollections which Madame de Stael preserved of her stay in England, she held that country in strong admiration during her entire life.

In her eyes England stood for liberty, the dearest thing on earth in her eyes, and she said that no people in Europe could be compared with the English since 1688, for "there lay 120 years of social improvement between them and the nations of the continent." "Admirable monument of the moral greatness of man," she exclaims of the British constitution. She sees in this achievement of liberty the essential protection which enabled England, alone, of all European powers, to escape the grasp of Napoleon. "The green isle which alone resisted the enslavement of Europe," she says, as she nears the English coast on her journey from Sweden, and, in a chapter of her "Considerations," "Those people who will not recognize the ascendancy of liberty in the power of England, continue to repeat that the English would have been beaten by Bonaparte, like all the continental nations, if they had not been protected by the sea; this opinion cannot be refuted by experience, but I do not doubt that, had Great Britain been reunited to the European continent by the act of some Leviathan, she would doubtless have suffered more and her riches would have decreased, yet the public spirit of a free nation is such that she would never have fallen beneath the yoke of the foreigner."

The foresight of this woman in her consideration of the status of nations is not the least remarkable portion of her writings. She predicted a great future for North America.

WHY GERMANY ATTACKS.

Thinks "Backfire" Has Been Created in Two Allied Countries.

October, when the fighting usually begins to slow down before the advance of winter, sees nearly all the fronts burst simultaneously into flame, sees the widest ring of fire of the year. What was sporadic in Flanders throughout most of 1917 becomes constant; in France the greatest advance of 1917 begins, and at the same time the Germans carry on their campaign in Russia and make their desperate assault in Austria. This has been a year of disjointed fighting, and now as it is closing the fighting suddenly links up and blazes forth on a scale unprecedented since the Russian revolution threw the war into chaos. Only in Macedonia and Mesopotamia is there no great onslaught.

It is evident that the French and British mean to keep on fighting in the winter this time. This advance of Petain's is the fiercest attack yet made and does not rest with the attainment of the usual short-distance objective. The German line is shaking, and there is no chance to stiffen it in the west. There is no salvation there. The only hope is to beat down or frighten off one of the Allies of France and Britain; if that could be done, then the massing of all the German forces on the west might avail to bring to a halt this otherwise irresistible advance.

To this end all Germany's real efforts have been directed for months. Her peace lures have none of them been intended to bring about a peace of compromise, only to create a backfire in enemy countries by increasing the number of the weak-kneed and disaffected. The peace manoeuvres were every one of them military moves, and the Lenines and Hilliquits in the different countries were the military, not the civic, hope of Germany.

And now the time has come when, according to Germany's belief, she has created enough of a backfire in two of the allied countries to warrant an attack. So she attacks, almost simultaneously, Russia and Italy. Italy is short of food; her present need, and a crying one, is for no less than 3,000,000 tons of wheat, and she is short of coal. She has just begun in earnest to ration her people. Germany has worked up these various elements of discontent until now she feels that a single defeat of the Italian arms would bring the smolder to a flame. She attacks accordingly, and immediately the Boselli Ministry falls.

Russia she also attacks, having carefully calculated the time when her inroads on the pacifist sentiment there would be great enough to assure her of assistance from within. The fleet, perhaps pacifist but not yet corrupted into treason, fights well; the army does what Germany expected of it. It is a shocking story of pacifism and socialism run mad, run into the betrayal of brave comrades into the enemy's hands. It was on such things that Germany counted when she made her long parade of pretended peace offers, and in Russia she counted accurately. Here in North America, in England, and in France she counted without the host. And Italy? There is every reason to believe that the host was missing there, too, and that the count is wrong; but it was on the belief that the reckoning was correct that Germany made her attack on the Isonzo.

The Red Cross Dog.

It has been estimated that more than 10,000 dogs are in use by the various armies at war in Europe; how many more have lost their lives in service no man knows.

The idea of the war dog is no new thing. Most modern armies, with the exception of our own, had trained squads of dogs in service before the outbreak of the present war. It is recorded that the idea originated with Herr J. Bungartz, a celebrated German animal painter. In 1885 he began a system of training with a number of dogs. He experimented with several breeds, including the German pointer, but he found the Scotch collie to be, on the whole, the most adaptable and clever.

The training of war dogs was then taken up by France, followed by Russia, Austria, and Italy. St. Bernards, German and Belgian sheepdogs, and spaniels were used. Japanese officers, who studied the subject in Europe, favored the collie, which was also used by Turkey. In the British army collies were trained as ambulance dogs, chiefly by Major E. H. Richardson of the West Yorkshire Regiment, who also found bloodhounds to be useful. The ambulance dog became a permanent establishment of the British army, and trials were held regularly at Aldershot. Some of these collies were used with good results in Manchuria by the Russian Red Cross.

Danes Reduce Army.

The Danish Government has ordered another reduction in the size of the standing army. The step is taken, it is stated, "mainly for financial reasons, but also because discipline in the army has been weakened and its quality deteriorated under protracted service." At the beginning of the European war, Denmark called up 45,000 men in addition to the 12,500 who are always under training. This force was gradually reduced to 25,000, and a further reduction of about 25 per cent. has now been decided upon.

A Narrow Escape.

An alarming discovery has been made at Browley south station, on the Southeastern Railway, England, a live shell about six inches long being picked up from the permanent way. The shell, which was lying only a foot or two away from the up main line, was found by a porter, who promptly removed it, and the police having been informed, the shell was handed over to the military authorities. It is not known whether the shell had been deliberately placed on the line or had fallen from a passing train.

How to Remember Things.

In an article about a man with a great memory a writer in the American Magazine says:

"Any test which trains your mind to really see things at a quick glance will help a lot. One of the best tests I know is to stand in front of the show window of a store and glance quickly at all the articles in the window and then turn away and see how many you can remember. Practice will make any one pretty adept at this.

"Look at the passengers opposite you in a street car. Then shut your eyes and try to visualize each one of them. Glance at the advertising placards over their heads. Close your eyes and see how many you can remember. All these things will help you in remembering a man's features from a quick glance. It would be impolite and usually impossible to stand and stare in a man's face for three or four minutes.

"Meet all the people you can. Watch them. Keep lists of their names. Sit down at night and check up the people you have met that day. See how clearly you can call up the image of each."

The Taking of Umbrage.

Barrie's famous story in "When a Man's Single" about the "taking of Umbrage" is said to have been by no means fictitious. The "incident" was actually the work of a practical joker on the staff of a well known provincial paper in England. It was in 1864, at the time of the famous Seven Days' war waged by Austria and Germany on Denmark, and this journalist, knowing how late news was dealt with at the office of a certain other paper, contrived that a message should reach that paper early one morning announcing, under the heading of "The War in Denmark," "The Enemy Have Taken Umbrage." "Umbrage" was given as a place in the North sea, and full particulars about it were supplied. The plot succeeded, the momentous news item was published, and the "taking of Umbrage" was the talk of the town for several days.

Used Wooden "Shells."

Some years ago civil war was raging between two Afghan tribes, the Ali Khel and the Mala Khel. The latter tribe built great hopes of success on a cannon of such a size that 160 men were required to draw it.

A Sikh trained in a British battery was engaged to work the gun on the understanding that he receive 20 rupees every time he hit the village fort of the foe. This did not prove remunerative, for, according to an eyewitness, the ammunition consisted of olive wood balls bound with iron bands, which have a highly eccentric flight and are calculated to do about equal damage to friend and foe.

After a three days' bombardment, in which the fort was hit only three times, the hostilities came to an end.

"Life Germs."

The many speculations that have been published concerning the origin of life on the earth and on any other bodies in the universe where it may possibly exist usually assume that, in some way or other, "life germs" are transported across the gulfs of space from one planet to another. Thus it has been suggested that life may have been brought to the earth in meteors. One of the most recent suggestions is that minute "life germs" may escape from the atmosphere of a planet in which life exists, just as molecules of the atmospheric gases are believed to escape from our terrestrial atmosphere, and may be driven by light pressure to some world where physical conditions have become suitable to support life. While there is nothing essentially absurd in these hypotheses, it is not clear why their authors should take it for granted that life can not originate de novo on a cooling planet.—Scientific American.

"My dear," says the husband, in Judge, "I told you that we simply had to economize—and here you are wearing a new afternoon suit." "I know, honey," she soothes. "But I have put mothballs in the pockets so every one will think it is an old one.

Water is taken from what is known as Montezuma's well, a curious natural well 440 feet in diameter and 33 feet deep, except in one spot, where no bottom has been reached at 500 feet. Lime in solution is carried by the water, and the sides of the ditch have been preserved by the petrification of the original earth.—Marine Journal.

A certain Church of England bishop, desirous of doing humble part in the war by effecting economy, was travelling in a third-class carriage with a rather rough-looking workman. The latter exhibited surprise at such company, and, consumed by curiosity, inquired, "I suppose you are a curate, sir?" "E—no," weakly replied the bishop, "not exactly—but—but I was once a curate." "I see," commented the other; "that 'orrid drink again."
